"Hem!" he laughed; "I didn't know we had company, Rowland. I'm sure that lady must have been highly entertained with our conversation."

He little dreamed what a vast amount of truth he had spoken.

The lady had been interested—very much so.

And no wonder was it either, when the said lady was none other than Ethel Danvers.

[To be Continued.]

A Case of Usury.

Mose Schaumberg always charges two per. cent. a month on all the money he lends. A few days ago Gus de Smith and Gilhooly happened to be in Schaumberg's store, and Gus said:

"Mr. Schaumberg, I would like to speak to you privately for a few moments."

"Don't, don't, Gus," whispered Gilhooly; "he'll charge you two per cent. a month for the use of his ear."—Texas Siftings.

Edison is supposed to know considerable about electricity, and yet he says "Electricity is a ten-acre lot, with a very high close fence around it. All we know about it so far we have gained by peeping through the cracks in the boards."

He was a college man, about six weeks at large, and was traveling in Missouri. He made a mild, little mash on the train, and was sealing the same with the wild oranges of the desert which are sold by the fiery outlaw of the train. "Allow me," he said gracefully, "to remove the epidermis." "Lor, no!" she hastily interjected, "I want to eat that. But you can peel off the skin; I don't want to git my fingers all sticky." And it was so.

[illegible]

[illegible] Ohio last week was a [illegible] in Kentucky Monday [illegible] by [illegible]

Over 4,000 persons have lost their lives during the current year by fires, flood, railway accidents, earthquakes, etc.

THE New York Sun thinks that because Mr. Dana of the Sun wants the "rascals turned out" he should be put in charge of the State prisons.

"POSTERITY will say of Montgomery Blair that he was honest, able, quarrelsome and impracticable," is the verdict of the New York Times.

THE Binghamton Republican wickedly remarks that "His telegraphers strike probably prevents Mr. Cornell from going to the Yellowstone Park."

THREE thousand Chinese shoemakers in San Francisco have struck for an increase of twenty cents per day in their wages. This looks very much as though John Chinaman was becoming Americanized.

MAYOR EDSON of New York has appointed S. Hastings Grant Comptroller of that city. Mr. Grant was formerly an official of the New York produce exchange and has of late been Mayor Edson's private secretary. John Kelly is pleased with the appointment and as a matter of course the New York Sun is not.

EX-CONGRESSMAN Austin F. Pike was elected United States senator by the New Hampshire Legislature last week on the forty-second ballot. When notified of his election, Mr. Pike said he could promise sincerity, devotion and industry in the discharge of his duties of office and could promise nothing more. Certainly nothing should be required of an honest legislator.

FIFTEEN thousand citizens of New York were present at Madison Square Garden Monday night to witness the highly intellectual entertainment of a slugging match between John L. Sullivan and Herbert A. Slade. Four rounds were to have been fought, but the Maori was obliged to succumb to the champion before the third round was finished. Slade was terribly punished, while Sullivan hardly received a scratch. Slade, in company with his trainer, "Jem" Mace, has gone to Kansas City to go into training for a prize fight with Mitchell, the English pugilist. Sullivan left New York yesterday morning for Boston, where he has opened a palatial saloon. It is to be regretted that such brutal exhibitions are permitted within the very centre of the great Metropolis of America.

THE Phœnix Register is exercised because "The FULTON TIMES trots out G. M. Case as a candidate for State Senator on the Republican ticket, notwithstanding that gentleman expressly informs that paper in an interview, that he is 'emphatically not a candidate for any office.' Just what the TIMES hopes to accomplish we fail to see, unless unless it is to hazard the success of H. C. Howe or F. David." We propose Mr. Case for State Senator because we believe him to be a worthy citizen and a man who would fill the office in a manner that would reflect honor upon the district and especially upon the town and county of which he is a resident We would like to see Mr. Howe nominated for County Judge and we cannot see any reason why Fulton is not entitled to two candidates or even more if she can present suitable men for the place, and "we fail to see" how our advocacy of Mr. Case's candidacy will "hazard the success of H. C. Howe or F. David." We are opposed to the remomination of Mr. Skinner for Surrogate on the ground that sixteen years is altogether two long for any man to hold an office, either county, State or national. Oswego city and northern Oswego county towns have so long had a monopoly in county and other offices that it would be a just, as well as graceful proceeding, for our northern neighbors, for once, to give way to candidates from Fulton and Phœnix.

THE telegraphers' strike still agitates the country, with, as yet, no prospect of a settlement, and although the Western Union Telegraph Company claim that they are transacting business with the usual dispatch, evidence is not wanting that such is not the case. In the New York office at least affairs are in a decidedly mixed state. At 3:30 one afternoon recently a business message was sent from the New York Times office to Washington demanding an immediate answer. Under ordinary circumstances an answer would have been received within an hour. The reply reached the Times office at 10:50 p. m. The New York correspondent of the Chicago Herald filed a dispatch at 1 a. m. of about 1,500 words which reached Chicago at 9 a. m. (Chicago time) several hours too late for use. The Herald refused to take it, and the dispatch having been refused, the company made demand upon the correspondent to pay for its alleged services, a demand which was very naturally not complied with. A correspondent of a St. Louis [illegible]

[illegible] The greater portion of the [illegible] of this watered stock is owned by Jay Gould and men of his ilk, who require the public to pay exorbitant telegraphic rates and the operators and employes of the company to work at starvation wages that big dividends may be earned not only on the $40,000,000 representing the actual property of the company, but on the $40,000,000 of pure water held by a little coterie of monopolists. This is a double robbery, for, while the employes of the company must suffer from the greed of the men who have justly been called the "high criminal classes," the holders of the original stock of the company do not receive as large dividends as they would but for the existence of the watered stock.

THE correspondent of the Syracuse Sunday Herald says THE FULTON TIMES has turned into a Republican paper and is working with Hon. T. W. Skinner. When he makes such a statement he is talking about something he does not know anything about, as THE TIMES is independent and will continue to be. It is hard to tell what the correspondent of that journal is, whether he is a Democrat or a Republican, as he flies and jumps around in his correspondence like a hen with her head cut off. He pretends to be a Democrat, he is anything, let it be what it may if it only be to his welfare.

OUT OF TOWN.

South Granby.

SOUTH GRANBY, August 7.—Mrs. David Davis fell this morning and broke her left ankle. Dr. Miller of Fulton was called and reduced the fracture.

G. A. F.

West Granby.

WEST GRANBY, August 4.—John Sullivan has a Holstein heifer which gave birth to a large-sized calf the 28th day of July, when the heifer was but one year and three days old and she is now giving milk. A number of neighboring farmers have visited Mr. Sullivan's farm to see the mother and its calf, the birth of which is almost unprecedented from an animal so young. The heifer took the first premium at the Oswego Falls fair last year.

Lysander.

LYSANDER, July 26.—Died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. P. W. Hayden, in Lysander, July 20, Phœbe, wife of the late John Gould, in the 74th year of her age. Deceased was one of the pioneers of Phœnix. The first organization of the M. E. church was at her house. There were two others besides her. Always active in the duties that belonged to her station as wife, mother and christian, she was loved and respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Warm and sympathetic in her nature, the suffering and needy found in her a true and tender friend. Of late her failing health and weight of years has impaired her active usefulness in public, yet that she was not forgotten by those who had known her in the earlier period of her life was proved by the interest manifested towards her in the last days of her presence with us. She was prepared for the great change, and saw the hour of dissolution approaching without fear or dismay, for her trust was sure and steadfast in Him who "doeth all things well."

The lady in question is a sister of Harvey Holden.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

The Phœnix academy has issued its annual circular.

Dr. D. Conger of Phœnix, who had one of his eyes extirpated at Philadelphia last fall, is again confined to his bed, having suffered a slight relapse. Mr. Conger is a brother of P. F. Conger of Fulton. Dr. C. M. Lee is the attending physician.

The Sandy Creek, Richland, Orwell and Boylston Agricultural Society has issued its catalogue for the twenty-fifth annual fair of the society which will be held at Sandy Creek September 5, 6 and 7. There will be the usual horse-racing, balloon ascension, etc.

A correspondent of the Mexico Independent says John H. Turk of Texas, this county, owns a hen that recently laid an egg weighing five ounces and measuring 7¼ by 6¼ inches in circumference. The hen was of ordinary size and was a cross between a game and a Plymouth Rock. The correspondent says that one branch of the family came over in the Mayflower.

Bristol is sole agent for the Shoninger Organ.

James Stevens of Oswego Falls is fully prepared to furnish ice cream in large or small quantities, at 40 cents per quart. A man will travel the streets of this village and those who wish this summer luxury can obtain it at their residences. A bell will be attached to a stake as a warning that the ice cream man is near. Mr. Stevens guarantees to furnish the best ice cream in the [illegible]

[illegible] A young man who had [illegible] was horrified at receiving a dispatch from the merchant which read "Send baby carriage by express." The original message read, box of clothes. A dispatch received in this city from a Mr. Griswold was signed instead of his name S. K. Swold.

Errors of this kind are happening all over the country to the great annoyance of business men, who are obliged to spend both time and money in procuring the rectifications of mistakes made by green operators. In Pittsburg scarcely a message is sent which is not full of "bulls," in some instances quite as amusing as they are stupid. The Commercial of that city furnishes the following, which nave occurred within the past few days:

"For 'Eclipse' base ball club one of the men received it E. C. Lippe B. B. club. Another got a message reading 'Ella has ocme. Spencer's menagerie.' This was addressed to a business man and referred to a niece. He could not imagine what his niece was going to do with a menagerie. Judge his surprise when he learned that the message should have read 'Ella has cerebro-spinal-meningitis.' A wife received a message from her spouse who was away, reading, 'I will be hog to-morrow.' This startling information caused her a great deal of uneasiness until she ascertained that it should have read 'I will be home tomorrow.' This blunder was made by writing the telegraphic letters m and e and making them g. The telegraphic letters are two dashes —— —— for m and a - for the letter e; when run together thus —— ——- they make the letter g. For J. B. Lippincott & Co. they got it J. B. Lipp Scott & Co., and E. L. Bacon & Bolt Co. ought to read Elba Iron & Bolt Co. The word co-operative was received 'Cooper alive,' and for 'First day of races' one of the artists got 'Frost Boy won race.' 'Send me three cow ears' should have read Send me three coal cars.' 'Send me check for Dr. Patch' should have read 'Send me check for dispatch.'. Mr. J. Gitt and pie' should have been J. Gillespie. Send me half a dozen pair plain stove buttons' puzzed a local dealer until he found out that sleeve buttons were wanted by country correspondent. 'Graphic Branch of Knights of Labor' should have read 'Telegraphic Branch, etc.' A message relating to kinds of glass and reading 'S. P one of M. P., was received 'Spone ofmp.' The crowning bull was the following. The original dispatch read 'The lumbermen in this section are skidding their logs preparatory to hauling them to their mills,' and when it had passed through the hands of one of the receiving operators it read: 'The lumberman in this section are skinning their dogs preparatory to hauling them to their meals.' "

These egregious blunders show that telegraphing needs educated operators as well as skilled ones. Of course an occasional mistake has been make in the past, but errors now appear to be the rule rather than the exception.

[illegible]

[illegible] Soon we see, apparently at the foot of the mountains, [illegible] miles away, the steeples and smoking chimneys of a city. The train sweeps along and stops at a station exceeded in elegance, in New York state, only by the Grand Central in New York city. Transfer omnibuses carry passengers to all of the hotels. Here are hotels, as the Windsor and St. James, that emulate the Fifth Avenue in elegance and appointments. Over four hundred guests can be accommodated at either of these, and at the latter over 1,100 people are daily fed. There are many other excellent hotels; in fact the city is full of them.

It is a city of contrasts. Just opposite the St. James is the Tabor Opera House, a building that cost one million dollars. In it are the post office, numerous private offices and a theatre that is not surpassed by anything in this country in completeness of outfit and beauty. Here are held the sessions of the G. A. R. Encampment. Sixteenth street can boast of whole blocks of structures that rival the tallest and most elaborate buildings on Broadway. In fact fully half a mile of the street reaching from the Union station is as compact and solid as any street of New York or Boston. In every direction, churches lift their towering spires and one concludes that this is not a Godless people. I said Denver was a city of contrasts. Within a stone's throw of the largest and most elegant buildings here, may be seen the meanest shanties and tents even. The whole outskirt of the city is made up of these. Going from grandeur thus to absolute squalor, one is reminded of the early descriptions of the avenues of Washington; that they narrowed to wagon roads, then to cow paths and finally to squirrel tracks which ran up a tree. But nothing runs up a tree here in the surroundings. Sahara could not be barer. In the city a few cottonwood trees grow, and as the facilities for irrigation improve more will be planted. It is a city without a garden. No one has time to attend to gardens, and without irrigation, nothing could grow if they had never so much time. By constant care lawns are kept up about some of the houses but they are dusty. From a reservoir in the mountains, water runs through the streets of the city receiving surface sewerage. The surface water is alkaline. Artesian wells furnish an abundance of good drinking water and perhaps their introduction may solve the problem of how to produce fertility in these desert lands. Business is not flourishing here now and the introduction of these thousands of eastern veterans is a Godsend. When the encampment is over and the Exposition of minerals ended Denver will be a dull place. Business has boomed and there will be a revulsion. At present we should think the chief industry, the selling of curiosities to visitors. Hundreds of unoccupied business houses can be found in the side streets and there is no building going on now. I am told that fifteen hundred carpenters are idle in the state today. And this is Denver, the Queen City of the Plains. Twenty-four years old with a population of 50,000 and a wealth of millions.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Business in the cheese market Monday was very dull. There were but 16 factories registered and 1,200 boxes of cheese offered. The ruling price was 9½ cents.

AT UTICA.

The developments of the past week have been a surprise to dealers as well as to dairymen. Cheese was so well cleaned up the week before, and the market had such a healthy tone, that buyers took hold the early part of the week at former prices, and congratulated themselves that they were doing well. There was a general holding back of one or two days' cheese; which it was thought would materially lessen the transactions, although they were 25 per cent. off from the flush last week. Cows are holding their own pretty well, with sowed corn and other extra feed and on the average there is only about 15 per cent. diminution in the quantity of cheese made. And the cheese is particularly fine. The transactions start off with 11 lots, 1,474 boxes, at 9¼ cents; and continued with 74 lots, 6,844 boxes, at 9½c.; and continue with 11 lots, 1,214 boxes, at 9¾c.; and 3 lots, 362 boxes, at private terms. Two of the 9¾ cent lots were small cheese. Sales 9,894 boxes; commissions, 1,810; total 11,704 boxes. Ruling price 9½ cents.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

Dairymen were considerably surprised upon coming to market Monday to be told that prices were one-half to one cent lower than last week. And they were made to see before the day closed that this was party true, prices showing just a fair one-half cent decline. The July cheese is coming in very fine, the cool weather being very favorable to the production of a splendid quality. What might have been the effect on prices had the weather been hot during the last month, it is safe to say that they would not have been improved. The yield of milk keeps up remarkably well, and altogether the season is regared as an unusually favorable one for dairymen. With light shipments that are expected to go forward from the country this week, it is hoped the market will recover what it has lost during the past week. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
3	144	8½
16	961	9
85	5,544	9¼
38	2,906	9½
1	111	9¾
8	534	Commission
152	10,280
Farm Dairy	780
Total	11,060

AT FULTON.

From 1,800 to 2,000 boxes of cheese were on the market at Fulton Monday night, the most of which was sold at 8½ to 9 cents, the bulk going at the former price.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA. April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

Yesterday State Surveyors R. R. Stuart, David Whitford, and Denison Richmond were in town, making surveys and measurements of the dams at this point. By direction of the State Superintendent of Public Works these and similar surveys are being made of all the dams on the Oswego, Oneida and Seneca rivers to ascertain if the work of building the projected fishways can be done within the appropriation. If the work is done or shute, which will probably be used, is of somewhat peculiar construction and

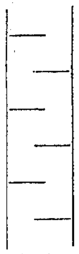
LOOKS LIKE THIS:



This shute must rest upon the dam so that at least a foot of water may run through it at all times. It is to be about twelve feet wide and to rest at an angle of 30 degrees. The fish in running up through can rest on the different steps or projections from its sides and will thus be easily enabled to make their way over the dams. This matter will be of great

A [illegible] accident occurred a short distance [illegible] of South Granby last night in which several cars of the train due at Fulton from Syracuse at 8:31 were wrecked. The train was composed of seven or eight freight cars, baggage car and a passenger car. When a short distance this side of South Granby an axle of one of the freight cars broke and four freight cars were thrown partially and two completely from the track, the latter lying ditched at right angles with the track. The baggage and passenger cars did not leave the rails, but were brought to a sudden standstill with a succession of violent shocks. But few passengers were aboard the train and nobody was hurt. Among the passengers were Willard Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Lake and Prof. Griffin and his wife and niece. The passengers were delayed about two hours when they were transferred to a special sent out from Oswego, which also took the passengers from the train arriving here at 8:31 p. m.

Assaulted His Wife.

Yesterday morning a rumor was rife on the streets that a murder had been committed at Battle Island. The report came from the fact that Edward Dodge and John Rickert of Battle Island had come to Fulton and procured a warrant of Justice Rice for the arrest of Adelbert McDonald, who lives in the Peter Speed house at Battle Island, for assault upon his wife. McDonald has been intoxicated for several days and Monday night he attacked his wife, knocking her down and beating her until she became insensible and injuring her so badly that the neighbors thought she would die, but she partially recovered after being unconscious about an hour and a half.

During the fracas McDonald attacked his aged mother and also his father, who repelled the assault. Officer Ney subsequently went to Oswego in quest of him, but without success. To-day he has gone to Syracuse on the same errand.

LATER.—At 4:50 this afternoon Officer Ney, who had returned from Syracuse at 3 o'clock, received a dispatch from the Chief of Police of that city saying that McDonald had been arrested.

Another Sunday Drunk.

Nelson J. Gaylord, who says he is a cashier in an establishment in New York, made things lively around the Lewis House Sunday afternoon. He was arrested by Officer Jones, who with the assistance of a brother officer, put Gaylord in the lockup. On Monday he was brought before Justice Rice, where he said he was 24 years old and had suffered from chills on the previous day and had procured a glass of liquor at the Lewis House with absinthe in it. He said he did not know the fellow that sold him the liquor nor would he be able to recognize him if he should see him. Justice Rice found the prisoner guilty of intoxication in a public place and fined him $6, which he paid. Landlord James Pratt, of the Lewis House told a representative of THE TIMES that Gaylord did not procure his liquor at his house.

DRY GOODS.

We are selling large quantities of Dry Goods Now, in fact, Never sold as many before, but that outreaching element in us is not satisged. We are now making larger preparations for the Fall Trade than at any previous season. We have confidence that our arrangements will be a benefit to our customers as well as to ourselves, Merchants who did not place their orders for Cashmeres before July 1, have lost by the advance of the same from 5 to 10 per cent and all who gave orders for Black or Colored Silks before that time wish they had waited, also on underwear. We have blundered into hitting the nail on the head this time in placing our orders. Hence our jubilant spirits and as we shall give our customers the benefit of the close prices we expect they will partake of the same spirit of Jollification and that the buying and selling Dry Goods this Fall will be a delight. Come in and be made happy. Resp'y [illegible] quarterly meeting of the church. The [illegible] took his text [illegible] from [illegible] "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." He spoke in a complimentary manner of the provision which the Fulton Methodist church has made for the residence among us of its present pastor, as well as its future pastors, and said that their action had stimulated a neighboring church to a similar proceeding. At the close of an eloquent and powerful sermon the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered. At 6 p. m. there was a love feast and in the evening Presiding Elder Mead preached again, taking for his topic the "Social Life in the church." This discourse was out of the usual line of sermonizing but proved conclusively that the undefinable condition was an element of great strength in our church.

Election of Officers.

At a meeting of Fulton lodge of Good Templars held in their rooms on Monday evening the following officers were installed for the ensuing quarter: W. C. T., R. B. McCully; W. V. T., Mrs. H. S. Gardner; W. S., Mrs. N. R. Cole; W. A. S., Dr. G. V. Emens; W. F. S., Jay Palmer; W. T., Mrs. Jas. Morrow; W. C., A. W. Cheeney; W. M., Edward Hulett; W. D. M., Miss Rhoda Cole; W. I. G., Miss Lizzie Miller; W. O. G., N. R. Cole; Organist, Miss Jennie Burdick; Trustees, R. B. McCully, G. V. Emens, N. R. Cole; L. D., F. E. Stone.

Miss Anna M. Ross, who has been laboring in the mission field for several years past in Southern Colorado and Northern New Mexico addressed a fair-sized audience in the chapel of the Presbyterian church last Wednesday evening. She spoke of her work with earnestness and enthusiasm and described the country and its inhabitants, many of whom are pure blooded Castilians. They are very superstitious, marrying their children while very young, many of the cases of child-marriage being as shocking as those of India. The Presbyterian Sabbath school of Fulton annually contribute presents to Miss Ross' western school.

The Assessment Roll.

The Assessors of the town of Volney have completed their labors on the assessment roll for the present year and a copy of the roll has been left with B. J. Kimball at the store of J. J. Wright in this village, where it may be seen and examined by any person interested until the third Tuesday of August, when the assessors will meet at the office of Howe & Rice at 10 o'clock a. m. and will review their assessment on the application of any person conceiving himself aggrieved.

The District Committee of the fifth Judicial District, of which H. C. Howe is a member, will meet at the Vanderbilt House in Syracuse, on Friday, at 2 p. m., to name a day and place for a convention and transact other business. Two Supreme Court Judges will be elected for the Fifth Judicial District at the coming election.

Police Justice G S Piper is suffering from an attack of malaria and is unable to transact police or law business. During his indisposition Justice of the Peace Rice is acting as Police Justice.

Fan day at the Bazaar next Saturday, August 4th. Old fashioned palm leaf fans free to every purchaser. Be sure and give us a call.

The lawn festival of the Methodist church last Wednesday evening was a very pleasant affair, although the weather was somewhat chilly and an oyster stew would have been more palatable than ice cream. But everybody seemed to enjoy themselves and the net receipts were $28.

Within the last ten years there have been three suicides on Buffalo street. M. S. Kimball came to his death by his own hand October 26, 1875; Mrs. Amy Corp, wife of Holden Corp, cut her throat with a pocket knife June 9, 1881, and Robert Harris hung himself with a clothes line last week.

[illegible] The creek winds through meadows of marsh grass, which is of the brightest green. This grass is cut twice a year and the proceeds of the sales are used to improve the creek. The village is twenty-five miles from Brooklyn, is directly back of Long Beach and Point Lookout, and in sight of Rockaway and Garden City. The Long Island R.R. is the connecting link between it and the outside world. It is like other small places, spread over a good deal of ground, destitute of sidewalks, and pervaded with a general sleepy aspect.

The roads and walks are well made of broken shells which gives the streets a very clean appearance. There are the usual number of stores and churches, but to strangers the place of interest is the small docks where the fishing boats are tied up. The town is almost self supporting and the only tax paid is a very small school tax. The town funds are derived from the rent of the oyster beds, the renting of Long Beach and the interest on the money obtained from the sale of Garden City to the Stewart estate. In company with Dave, I went down to Freeport some time ago, to go out with the fishermen on a short cruise. We arrived at nine o'clock in the morning and as it was on the Sabbath we found the village wrapped in peaceful slumber. We lounged around until noon, then found the fishermen and made arrangements to sail in the sloop Mary J. Smith, on the following morning with the ebb tide. We got our traps on board and the next day, presented ourselves at the dock promptly at eight o'clock. The scene was somewhat animated. A few of the small boats that had been out all night, were unloading their cargoes, local peddlers were buying their stock and the men of the out-going boats were putting in their stock of provisions and ice, and unreeling the great nets into the small boats. The large reels on which the nets are wound, are the most prominent objects visible along the coast. They stand in bold relief against the green marshes, their long arms suggesting the skeleton of some departed monster, and in a strong wind giving off a series of dismal groans and creaks, peculiar only to themselves. The scene was a study for an artist. The boats, the red shirted fishermen, the reels and the sea weed, huts, all showed to such a pretty effect in the brilliant rays of the morning sun. The huts made of sea weed are very unique. They are squatted irregularly together along the creek and in the distance, in a bright sun look like mirrors. Rough sheds are built and the accumulated sea-weed piled all over them. The sun and salt air soon bleaches the weeds to a pearly whiteness, and the wind playing among the huts give them all a ragged appearance and the small doors and windows are almost covered with the fringe of weeds. Oystermen occupy these huts in winter and in the summer they are used for storage places.

The Mary J. is a staunch boat and a fair sailer, but was built more for strength than beauty. She has one mast, and carries a main and topsail and two jibs. The cabins are small and not very inviting. The crew consisted of the captain and three men, all of whom had followed the sea from childhood. At nine o'clock we started for the sea and by careful tacking we sailed slowly down the creek, through the inlet and into a small bay. As we passed through the bay, the long white line of the bar could be seen and here we caught the swell of the ocean, which is so conducive to sea sickness. After the bar was passed in safety, we ran among a school of porpoise that was playing in the water, like so many children in a field of clover. Schools of moss-bunkers and boney-fish flitted over the surface of the ocean before us, like the shadow of a cloud across a meadow, and the ripple they made was like shallow water swiftly running over a rock. The whole moving mass would disappear and come to the surface again a quarter of a mile away. About a mile from shore I noticed what I supposed was several little sticks standing erect in the water. In an instant the water was lashed to a foam, the little sticks disappeared and "a man eater" showed its white belly and double row of glowing white teeth, as it raced through the water for its prey. After this incident I was constantly watching for sharks, and when the dorsal fin of one appeared I was on the lookout for some sport. No fish were caught the first day out but as I was wrestling with a mountain of sea sickness I did not care. Towards evening we ran in behind Long Beach and anchored for the night. Dave and I took the long-boat and had a good romp on the shore. After sunset we returned to the boat, and sat on deck a while watching the lights on the ocean and [illegible] [illegible] that they are fastened by the gills and dragged [illegible] to the fishermen. To one end of the net is fastened a small barrel which acts as a buoy, from which the net is let out. The other end is brought around in a circle to meet it and then the hauling begins. As soon as the longboat left us we began to pull on the lines and we enjoyed some rare sport for about one-half hour. The lines are over one hundred feet long, and at the end is attached either a fish shaped device made of block tin with the hook on the end, or simple oblong block of wood to which is attached the heavy hook. The skittering, flashing, motion attracts the fish, ofttimes to their death. I pulled on the lines until my hands were nearly raw and my arms ached. I succeeded in landing two fine fish and felt much elated. The blue fish is very game and a five pounder is all one wants to handle on the heavy lines. When first hooked they give a bound into the air (oftimes ten feet) and then dive down for the bottom; run first one way and then another, sulk a little and when near the boat make one grand rush for freedom. Unless well hooked, this dash usually results in victory for the fish, but always at a loss of part of their organs of mastication. We did not catch many on the hooks but with the nets the men were very successful, having caught in the one day over fifteen hundred weight. At one time we could not step on deck without treading on fish. The entrails were removed, the fish washed, packed in ice and before evening were loaded into one of the larger sloops and sent to New York. The chowder as prepared on board is worthy of mention. Fat pork is fried in a kettle until done, then fish, potatoes and onions cut in the pot with plenty of salt and pepper. The whole is cooked until it becomes a soft mass and is served hot in large bowls. This chowder and coffee is the principle diet of the men while on board. Towards evening we again ran in behind the beach and anchored as before. Dave and I packed our grip sacks and footed it to Long Beach station, and spent some time looking over the great hotel and the many attractions on and around the beach. This place promises to become the bon-ton resort near New York. At 8:10 we boarded the train and were soon being whirled towards Brooklyn. The trip was greatly enjoyed by us both for it brought before us another world, that we knew not of and furnished us food for pleasant reflections for a long time to come.

Talk about the Sandwich Islands.

It is to be much regretted that a larger audience did not assemble to hear the lecture of Dr. Murray in the Presbyterian church Monday evening. To the goodly number that came it proved of great interest and instructiveness. In a quiet, easy, but happy way the Doctor gave a narrative of his journeyings in the Sandwich Islands. His lecture so combines personal experience and facts of interest concerning places, customs, and the character of the natives as to give one a very satisfactory idea of the Islands. All who listened are indebted to Dr. Murray for an hour of rare enjoyment.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

HAVOC AND SLAUGHTER.

Burdette on the Ardmore Battle.

The sunshine never kissed a lovelier day nor blessed a fairer scene. All the land and the sky and the clouds were clad in the beauty of June. The lanes were fringed with emerald; the round-eyed daisies peeped out from the billowy fields of grass, and dainter wild flowers of the wood nestled like gems in the velvet moss. Down in the meadows the buttercups gleamed like buttons of gold. Over the low hills the soft winds whispered to the leaves about other summers, and down through the shadowy woods the little brook laughed and sung and babbled like a child playing by itself. Here and there a cottage nestled among the trees. The distant calls of children came rippling across the fields. The long road wound away, yellow and quiet, until it turned out of sight beyond the little church with its snowy walls and slender spire.

How quiet and peaceful all the world lay before the window of my prison that day in June. Far away the note of a meadow lark came, and was heard no more. Now and then the whistle of a robin;—at times the twitter of a bluebird. It was such an afternoon as you would wish to endure forever. White-winged peace smiled in the sunshine and sang with the zephyrs and the brook, and the far-away calls and scarcely heard laughter of the children, playing somewhere unseen. Its music is the crown of the day's beauty and tranquility.

Clear, mellow, distant, four or five notes of a bugle ring out over the low hills and come echoing down the forest aisles. A hush in woodland and meadow follows it. Again the ringing notes, softened by distance, call through the sunlight; but there is an imperious accent of command in the clear-cut tones, musical as they are. Once more the bugle call thrills through the beautiful May afternoon. The meadow lark answers it, and the robin whistles merrily back to its echoes.

How my heart leaped at the sound of the bugle-call! How my blood went surging through my veins like a tide of lava! Out of my prison window I looked with straining eyes. In the fluttering leaves I can see no flutter of bayonets. I listen, but down the road or across the meadow I can hear not the rumble of a battery hurrying into position. How silent it all is! and yet not silent enough. I wish the robin would hush his merry note. It is mockery. Does he know what he is singing about? Does he know what the bugle sang, that he answers with such merry defiance? And then I want him to keep perfectly quiet. I want the wind to hush and the leaves to keep still and the brook to stifle its babble and laughter. I am listening for a footfall, the crackling of a twig, the muffled tramp of a column of men stealing through the woods under leafy cover. I am listening for the neigh of a horse, a clatter of rythmic hoof-beats, a ringing carbine shot. Peering out of the window of this lonely cell, I am listening—ever since that first bugle call came winding over the hill I have been listening—for sterner music than the robin's note and the wood brook's murmur.

"March!"

There it is at last! I can see nothing from this window. The voice comes like a far away echo of the bugle—a boyish voice, softened into music by the day and the distance. I picture to myself the fair-haired lieutenant who commands the skirmishers. Ah! those days made men of boys; the school-boy fought beside the veteran, and the adjutant of twenty messed with the colonel of forty. Will the line never come in my sight?

"Halt!"

Silence again, and once more the bugle calls down the unseen line. Now I can hear the tramp of feet amid all the terrible hush of preparation. All about me the tide of battle will sweep, save only where I can see it, and I—penned in this prison like a caged rat, with ringing bugle and clanking saber calling me out, shouting my name in words that ring and ring again—and I am here.

"March!"

Away off the tap of the drum, the flam, flam, flam, cadencing the step of the marching column. Nearer it comes, and further away it sweeps, faints into quiet at last.

Tramp, tramp, tramp. Muffled, yet distinct, and stepping nearer with every footfall. "They're they come," shouts some one. I hold my breath; I press my hand on my heart and wait for the first shot of the skirmishers.

"Ready!"

The click of a musket so close it seems in the very room where I am. Gods! If the robin would only hush his song. I listen for the sound of the boyish voice again. It seems to me in my excited condition there is a childish treble to it. I wonder if—

"Fire!"

How the cheers, pealing up in waves of sound, drowned the crash I was listening for! Again the boyish voice calls "Fire!" and again the shrill cheers follow. They hush as the bugle [illegible] come pealing down the line again. I hear the wheels as a battery is [illegible] forward. [illegible]

[illegible] blue cap with its scarlet and white [illegible] I walk [illegible] arms and legs without bodies; [illegible] with dumb [illegible] upon their lips. I tread carefully over and around the broken, [illegible] bodies of the fallen men. Here is the flag, tattered and [illegible] crimson and gold [illegible] of the general's [illegible] alive [illegible]. And here, away off on the edge of the field, where just the spray of this angry wave of strife could have reached, my foot almost falls on a child lying prostrate, half turned on her face. The dainty feet peep out of a cloud of silk and lace; the tangled hair of gold, a skein of sunshine, half hides the brow and cheek. There is no sign of life in the beautiful face. Killed by the terror and fear born of the battle? I bend to lift the little form, and the arm upon which the child was lying is gone; a horrible gash reaches from the temple to the base of the brain, and the left eye is crushed in its socket. The child—the dear, sweet little girl, somebody's darling, fair sacrifice to the hideous Moloch of war, how could—

"Robbie, "I hear the voice of her little serene highness. "Robbie! Come, now, and pick up your toys, dear. You've left your dolly and all your soldiers scattered about over the floor, so that papa can scarcely walk across the room. And somebody has stepped on poor little Bessie's head. I'm afraid she'll have to go to the surgical institute."

A patter of flying feet, and the blue-eyed commander of the troops, aged six, comes charging into the room, and, resolving himself into an ambulance corps, collects the dead and wounded with both hands, scoops them into a big box, examines the fracture in the wounded dolly's head for sawdust, and appears surprised to find the skull lined with a big hole.

"Papa," he cries, "did you here 'e battle zis appernoon?"

"Yes, Major, I heard it."

"We fighted awful," the Major says, "an' I fell down on my drum and broked my cannon, but grampa will get me anuzzer one."

Kill The Caterpillar.

"Do not the birds eat these caterpillars?" asked the reporter.

"No. I know of no birds that will eat them. The sparrows did eat the measuring worms that were so plentiful here a few years ago, and that nuisance has now about disappeared. The present nuisance is what is known as a hairy caterpillar. They multiply very rapidly. I have counted 234 eggs in a space about 1 1-10 by ¾ inches. Each one of these eggs was capable of becoming a caterpillar."

"Is there any insect that preys upon these?"

"Yes; there is a sort of fly, the fachina, but there are not enough of them. I am satisfied that the only way to save our trees is for the authorities to employ someone to kill them off. Boys could do it. It would require someone to climb the trees and collect the worms and eggs and burn them."

"What is the course of propagation?"

"First you see this bundle of eggs I have spoken of. They are laid by the females on the cocoons. In about fourteen days these eggs are hatched into caterpillars. The caterpillars live upon the soft part of the leaves of the trees. You may see plenty of trees now without a whole leaf. Then the trees in time die of lung complaint, for the leaves are their lungs. Each caterpillar will eat say twelve or fourteen times its weight of leaves, until it gets to be about an inch and a tenth long. Each caterpillar discharges its skin about four times before it gets its growth. It then weaves its cocoon of silk and the hair of its own body, and there undergoes its change to the chrysalis state and becomes a moth. The species is well known to entomologists," continued Mr. Edwards. "It is indigenous to this country, and has been known ever since entomology was studied here. It was described by Abbott and Smith in 1722-4 among the lepidopterous insects of Georgia. You may imagine how rapid must be their increase when one insect lays 234 eggs. Fortunately the rain kills many, and other cases intervene to keep down the supply. I was glad to see that the voracious insects spared the tulip trees. The destruction of our city trees is pitiful, and some decisive action is needed to prevent its further progress. When very hungry these caterpillars will eat pear and apple trees, and the possibility that they may yet be numerous enough to go into that sort of business should be sufficient to stir up some official action to prevent it."—New York Sun.

Webster's Speller Still Selling.

When Disraeli wrote "Lothair" Mr. Appleton cabled him a large order for his book, which he accepted at once, and they published it at $1.50, and sold 80,000 copies. On the whole, however, Mr. Appleton thought there was more money to be made in special publications. For instance, he publishes 1,000,000 copies every year of Webster's spelling book. There is never any falling off in this sale. Some dealers order as many as thirty cases at a time, and each case holds seventy dozen primers. They are sold principally in the South and West, and by dealers in Yankee [illegible]

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 70,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter, that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

HALL'S
Vegetable Sicilian
HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

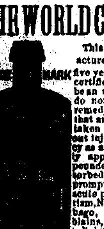
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

HAVOC AND SLAUGHTER.

Burdette on the Ardmore Battle.

The sunshine never kissed a lovelier day nor blessed a fairer scene. All the land and the sky and the clouds were clad in the beauty of June. The lanes were fringed with emerald; the round-eyed daisies peeped out from the billowy fields of grass, and dainter wild flowers of the wood nestled like gems in the velvet moss. Down in the meadows the buttercups gleamed like buttons of gold. Over the low hills the soft winds whispered to the leaves about other summers, and down through the shadowy woods the little brook laughed and sung and babbled like a child playing by itself. Here and there a cottage nestled among the trees. The distant calls of children came rippling across the fields. The long road wound away, yellow and quiet, until it turned out of sight beyond the little church with its snowy walls and slender spire.

How quiet and peaceful all the world lay before the window of my prison that day in June. Far away the note of a meadow lark came, and was heard no more. Now and then the whistle of a robin;—at times the twitter of a bluebird. It was such an afternoon as you would wish to endure forever. White-winged peace smiled in the sunshine and sang with the zephyrs and the brook, and the far-away calls and scarcely heard laughter of the children playing somewhere unseen. Its music is the crown of the day's beauty and tranquility.

Clear, mellow, distant, four or five notes of a bugle ring out over the low hills and come echoing down the forest aisles. A hush in woodland and meadow follows it. Again the ringing notes, softened by distance, call through the sunlight; but there is an imperious accent of command in the clear-cut tones, musical as they are. Once more the bugle call thrills through the beautiful May afternoon. The meadow lark answers it, and the robin whistles merrily back to its echoes.

How my heart leaped at the sound of the bugle-call! How my blood went surging through my veins like a tide of lava! Out of my prison window I looked with straining eyes. In the fluttering leaves I can see no flutter of bayonets. I listen, but down the road or across the meadow I can hear not the rumble of a battery hurrying into position. How silent it all is! and yet not silent enough. I wish the robin would hush his merry note. It is mockery. Does he know what he is singing about? Does he know what the bugle sang, that he answers with such merry defiance? And then I want him to keep perfectly quiet. I want the wind to hush and the leaves to keep still and the brook to stifle its babble and laughter. I am listening for a footfall, the crackling of a twig, the muffled tramp of a column of men stealing through the woods under leafy cover. I am listening for the neigh of a horse, a clatter of rythmic hoof-beats, a ringing carbine shot. Peering out of the window of this lonely cell, I am listening—ever since that first bugle call came winding over the hill I have been listening—for sterner music than the robin's note and the wood brook's murmur.

"March!"

There it is at last! I can see nothing from this window. The voice comes like a far away echo of the bugle—a boyish voice, softened into music by the day and the distance. I picture to myself the fair-haired lieutenant who commands the skirmishers. Ah! those days made men of boys; the school-boy fought beside the veteran, and the adjutant of twenty messed with the colonel of forty. Will the line never come in my sight?

"Halt!"

Silence again, and once more the bugle calls down the unseen line. Now I can hear the tramp of feet amid all the terrible hush of preparation. All about me the tide of battle will sweep, save only where I can see it, and I—penned in this prison like a caged rat, with ringing bugle and clanking saber calling me out, shouting my name in words that ring and ring again—and I am here.

"March!"

Away off the tap of the drum, the flam, flam, flam, cadencing the step of the marching column. Nearer it comes, and further away it sweeps, faints into quiet at last.

Tramp, tramp, tramp. Muffled, yet distinct, and stepping nearer with every footfall. "They're they come," shouts some one. I hold my breath; I press my hand on my heart and wait for the first shot of the skirmishers.

"Ready!"

The click of a musket so close it seems in the very room where I am. Gods! If the robin would only hush his song. I listen for the sound of the boyish voice again. It seems to me in my excited condition there is a childish treble to it. I wonder if—

"Fire!"

How the cheers, pealing up in waves of sound, drowned the crash I was listening for! Again the boyish voice calls "Fire!" and again the shrill cheers follow. They hush as the bugle notes come pealing down the line again. I hear the wheels of a battery [illegible] forward. [illegible] I hear the tramp of hurrying feet. [illegible] falls on a child lying prostrate, half turned on her face. The dainty feet peep out of a cloud of silk and lace; the tangled hair of gold, a skein of sunshine, half hides the brow and cheek. There is no sign of life in the beautiful face. Killed by the terror and fear born of the battle? I bend to lift the little form, and the arm upon which the child was lying is gone; a horrible gash reaches from the temple to the base of the brain, and the left eye is crushed in its socket. The child—the dear, sweet little girl, somebody's darling, fair sacrifice to the hideous Moloch of war, how could—

[illegible]

"Robbie, "I hear the voice of her little serene highness. "Robbie! Come, now, and pick up your toys, dear. You've left your dolly and all your soldiers scattered about over the floor, so that papa can scarcely walk across the room. And somebody has stepped on poor little Bessie's head. I'm afraid she'll have to go to the surgical institute."

A patter of flying feet, and the blue-eyed commander of the troops, aged six, comes charging into the room, and, resolving himself into an ambulance corps, collects the dead and wounded with both hands, scoops them into a big box, examines the fracture in the wounded dolly's head for sawdust, and appears surprised to find the skull lined with a big hole.

"Papa," he cries, "did you here 'e battle zis appernoon?"

"Yes, Major, I heard it."

"We fighted awful," the Major says, "an' I fell down on my drum and broked my cannon, but grampa will get me anuzzer one."

Kill The Caterpillar.

"Do not the birds eat these caterpillars?" asked the reporter.

"No. I know of no birds that will eat them. The sparrows did eat the measuring worms that were so plentiful here a few years ago, and that nuisance has now about disappeared. The present nuisance is what is known as a hairy caterpillar. They multiply very rapidly. I have counted 234 eggs in a space about 1 1-10 by ¾ inches. Each one of these eggs was capable of becoming a caterpillar."

"Is there any insect that preys upon these?"

"Yes; there is a sort of fly, the fachina, but there are not enough of them. I am satisfied that the only way to save our trees is for the authorities to employ someone to kill them off. Boys could do it. It would require someone to climb the trees and collect the worms and eggs and burn them."

"What is the course of propagation?"

"First you see this bundle of eggs I have spoken of. They are laid by the females on the cocoons. In about fourteen days these eggs are hatched into caterpillars. The caterpillars live upon the soft part of the leaves of the trees. You may see plenty of trees now without a whole leaf. Then the trees in time die of lung complaint, for the leaves are their lungs. Each caterpillar will eat say twelve or fourteen times its weight of leaves, until it gets to be about an inch and a tenth long. Each caterpillar discharges its skin about four times before it gets its growth. It then weaves its cocoon of silk and the hair of its own body, and there undergoes its change to the chrysalis state and becomes a moth. The species is well known to entomologists," continued Mr. Edwards. "It is indigenous to this country, and has been known ever since entomology was studied here. It was described by Abbott and Smith in 1722-4 among the lepidopterous insects of Georgia. You may imagine how rapid must be their increase when one insect lays 234 eggs. Fortunately the rain kills many, and other cases intervene to keep down the supply. I was glad to see that the voracious insects spared the tulip trees. The destruction of our city trees is pitiful, and some decisive action is needed to prevent its further progress. When very hungry these caterpillars will eat pear and apple trees, and the possibility that they may yet be numerous enough to go into that sort of business should be sufficient to stir up some official action to prevent it."—New York Sun.

Webster's Speller Still Selling.

When Disraeli wrote "Lothair" Mr. Appleton cabled him a large order for his book, which he accepted at once, and they published it at $1.50, and sold 80,000 copies. On the whole, however, Mr. Appleton thought there was more money to be made in special publications. For instance, he publishes 1,000,000 copies every year of Webster's spelling book. There is never any falling off in this sale. Some dealers order as many as thirty cases at a time, and each case holds seventy dozen primers. They are sold principally in the South and West, and by dealers in Yankee [illegible]

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skillfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics. Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 70,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter, that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

A WREATH OF ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

CHAPTER III.

A month passed away, and during that time Ethel Danvers had seen but little of Rowland Saxby.

She had heard all about the engagement, not from Rowland, but from Grace Thorne herself. Yes; Ethel had cultivated her acquaintance, and acted towards her as a great friend and well-wisher.

Little did Grace guess that this was only a mask—a mask which concealed feelings of a far different character to friendship.

Ethel hated Grace with a most fearful hate. While she congratulated her upon her coming marriage with Rowland, she wished that it would please Heaven to smite her dead at her feet.

While alone, her manner was indeed terrible. Alone in her dressing-room, she would pace the floor after the manner of a caged tigress.

Her mutterings of hate and her longings for the time to come when she could take a terrible revenge upon the girl who, she thought, had weaned from her the affections of the only man she had ever loved, would have shocked the stoutest [illegible].

She did not pause and consider the matter very carefully. Her hasty, ungovernable temper would not allow her to do that.

She did not think whether Rowland Saxby had ever hinted one sentence to her of love.

Had she thought over that she would have been compelled to admit that he never had.

But this was her principal thought as she paced the room day after day, night after night:

"I am not to be his wife, but by the Heaven above me, she never shall—never! I would kill her and then myself. Aye, that I would, and die happy—happy!"

One morning Leon was announced.

He did not often make his appearance, and although Ethel was by no means in a good temper, he was ushered into her presence.

Making a profound bow, much after the same manner as a courtier before the throne, he said:

"I hope I see Miss Ethel quite well?"

"Well, yes, I think so."

"That's right. I've some good news for you."

"Have you, indeed? I am very glad, for one so seldom hears good news now."

"This"—and Leon produced a note—"is for you."

"From whom?"

"Mr. Rowland Saxby."

Ethel started, but Leon did not notice it.

She stretched out her hand for it, tore it open, and read:

"DEAR MISS ETHEL.—We start on Monday for Bleyley. May I ask whether we may hope for the pleasure of your company? Leon will join us, and I hope your mother and yourself will do the same. Pray reply by Leon, who will return with the answer at once. Yours truly, ROWLAND SAXBY."

"I understood you to say that you had some good news for me," said Ethel.

"Is not that good news?"

"I see nothing very good about it. It [illegible] invitation to join Rowland at his father's residence at Bleyley."

"Just so; but can't you see the drift of it?"

"I cannot," replied Ethel, but her face showed that she lied.

"Well, then, said Leon, "in two weeks time Rowland leads Grace Thorne to the altar."

"At Bleyley?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I see. That's it, is it? Very well. Of course I shall have much pleasure in joining the party; so also will my mother, I am sure. But how strange! I saw Grace three days ago and she said she did not exactly know when it was to take place."

"Neither did she. The day has been fixed by Rowland's father."

"Oh, I understand. That is the reason. Well, will you say that we shall have much pleasure in being present?"

"Yes. And now, Ethel," seating himself, "I propose we talk about our affairs."

"Our affairs?"

"Yes, you know what I mean, Ethel."

"I really do not."

"Well, Ethel, I did not come here only to deliver that letter of invitation. I came on another matter as well."

"Hem! You are getting quite a business man, I declare."

"Don't mock me, Ethel. You must know for what reason I have called."

"I shall know immediately you tell me."

"Well then, Ethel," taking her hand [illegible], "I have called to tell you how [illegible] I love you. Oh, [illegible] And all this about [illegible] to be married makes [illegible] Ethel, [illegible] upon [illegible] my wife. I [illegible] and I [illegible] my wife, [illegible]

"Then I [illegible] and yourself will join Rowland at Bleyley?"

"Yes, please."

Soon after this Leon departed, and no sooner had the door closed upon him than Ethel rose from her seat.

Her face was very pale, and her eyes, which had worn a mild expression while Leon was present, now blazed with a dangerous light.

For some moments she stood erect, her hands clenched so tightly that the nails seemed to be imbedded in the delicate flesh.

Presently her fury found vent in words, and, raising her hand above her, she said in low hissing tones:

"The time is coming, Grace Thorne; the time is coming. Oh, how I have longed to be under the same roof with you! My revenge will be swift and sure. You don't go to Bleyley to be married. No!" and her voice rose into a shriek; "you go to Bleyley to meet your death, for as sure as I am a living woman, so sure will I kill you!"

At this moment the door was pushed suddenly open and Mrs. Danvers made her appearance.

She looked at her daughter, and for the space of a minute stood transfixed with astonishment and terror.

"Ethel," she said, "what do you mean by uttering those fearful words? Are you rehearsing some part for private theatricals?"

"No!"

"Then what on earth do you mean by crying, 'I will kill you!' Kill who?"

No answer; Ethel stood before her mother trembling from head to foot.

Of course she had not intended her voice to be heard, but, as we have before said, her ungovernable fury would not allow her to think of what she was doing.

"Ethel," said Mrs. Danvers sternly, "I hope you will not be the means of causing me to say that I curse the day you were born. Your conduct of late has been more than extraordinary, and by no means becoming a lady who has been brought up and educated in the manner you have. I am surprised—nay, disgusted at such unmaidenly conduct. Tell me, who has been here?"

"Leon Cathcart."

"Well?"

"What?"

"You know what I mean. He was here for the usual purpose, I presume?"

"I don't understand."

"Nonsense! He came here, I suppose, to again offer you his hand?"

"Not this time, mamma. He spoke no word of love," replied Ethel calmly, but she did not look her mother in the face.

"Then what did he come for?"

"This." And she handed her mother the letter of invitation.

"Oh, that is it. Well, we will go, of course, and as far as I am concerned, I shall be very glad when this marriage is all over."

"Why?"

"Because all your romancing will cease; all that romantic nonsense you talk respecting Rowland, and which I hear you utter even in your sleep, will end. And then you will take the hand of Leon, and you will both be very happy—as you ought to be."

At these words, spoken slowly and firmly, Ethel's breast rose and fell as if she were struggling for breath, and when her mother had concluded, she walked firmly from the room without uttering another word.

"Ah, me!" sighed Mrs. Danvers, sinking gracefully into a chair, and settling herself to again peruse the note of invitation. "It is a shocking thing to have a daughter with a violent temper, and that, I am sorry to say, Ethel has. But when this marriage is over she will see how foolish she has been. But what did she mean by 'kill her?' Kill who, I wonder? I never heard that anyone had injured her. Oh, dear! it's very sad—I think she wanders occasionally."

CHAPTER IV.

[illegible] House, the residence of Sir Rowland Saxby, was a noble building built in the Gothic style from Sir Rowland's own designs.

Attached to it was a lovely park of some twenty acres in extent, well wooded, and with a charming lake through it.

The interior of the house corresponded in every respect with the exterior, for it contained some of the finest furniture to be found in all England.

Statues and pictures of exquisite workmanship adorned almost every room, and the entrance to the building was guarded by several mail-clad knights, who, it must be admitted, never raised a finger to hurt anyone, nor turned their heads either to the right or to the left, by day or by night.

On one side of the building was Sir Rowland's study, and here he was pleased to show any one of his numerous inventions, some useful and others—so, so.

Sir Rowland had made a large amount of money by his own ingenuity; he was proud of it, and delighted to sit and talk of these matters to anyone who would sit and listen to him, of which, considering Sir Rowland's hospitality, there were not a few.

Still, as the years crept upon him, and caused his hair to turn "whiter and whiter still," he began to get tired of his inventions and his books relating thereto, and to think of an altogether different matter—to-wit, of his son's marriage to a suitable lady.

And when he saw Grace Thorne for the first time, the old man considered that his son had made a proper selection, and upon closer acquaintance, he was certain of it, and congratulated him.

The greater part of the old gentleman's life had been passed in London, and therefore he persuaded his son to marry at Bleyley, and thus avoid the necessity of his tiring himself by a journey.

To this Rowland, as a matter of course, consented, and on the day [illegible]

[illegible] accompanied [illegible] Rowland [illegible]

[illegible] that under that [illegible] was concealed a most deadly [illegible]

Little did they imagine that while she chatted, she was thinking of the best way of taking her (as she called it) revenge.

But so it was, the thoughts always uppermost in her mind were of the destruction of Grace Thorne.

For three days she watched their movements, and she saw that the principal place they visited was the summer-house near the lake.

Here they could almost always rely upon being alone, but they were not so often alone as they thought.

Several times had Ethel stolen by the furze on one side of the house, and had listened to Rowland's loving words to Grace Thorne.

She had listened until her heart seemed bursting to the kisses given again and again, and this only served to fan fiercer the flame which burned within her.

But suddenly it came to her knowledge that the lovers were in the habit of sitting by the lake in the moonlight.

And when this came to her knowledge, a terrible thought struck her.

She determined to put a plan into execution by which it was almost a certainty that Grace would lose her life.

And all this time Mrs. Danvers thought her daughter was so very happy.

"Ah, Ethel, I have found you then? I have been looking for you for some time. Where do you hide yourself?"

And the arm of Leon Cathcart stole round Ethel's waist.

He had caught her in the park, where she was strolling, her usual thoughts uppermost in her mind.

She started violently at the sound of his vocie, but she soon recovered her self-possession.

"I do not hide myself," she said; "I am frequently in the grounds."

"And yet I do not see you very often. However, I will, with your permission, take advantage of the present occasion. I know that you will have no objection to take a stroll with me?"

And he offered his arm.

"No, indeed," she said, in what she intended to be winning tones, "that I have not. Which way shall we go?"

"Oh, let us keep straight ahead. You have no objection to my smoking, Ethel? You know I am a great smoker."

"Oh, no; I rather like it, especially in the open air."

Leon lit his cigar, and then again attempted to put his arm round Ethel's waist, but she said gently:

"I don't think that is quite right, Leon, in case anyone happens to come this way. Why, they will think we are actually engaged."

"They may think so with pleasure. If such was rumored would you deny it, Ethel?"

"Deny it? Why—well, considering that we are not actually engaged, what could I do?"

"Leave them to think as they like."

"True. But then—well, we will not talk about that at present."

"I wish you would. The fact is, Ethel, I am getting decidedly impatient."

"Poor fellow! From my heart I pity you."

"Pity me?"

"I do, certainly. It is very shocking to be kept in suspense, I suppose, but for a litlte while it must be so."

By this time they had approached the summer-house by the side of the lake. Ethel had not taken any notice of the direction they were going, but when, suddenly, the lake and the summer-house came into view, she turned a shade paler.

"How strange," she thought, "that we should come here!"

"Isn't this a lovely spot, Ethel?" said Leon as he stood and surveyed the lake before him.

He was quite right, it was a lovely spot. The surface of the lake was dotted with myriads of magnificent lilies, and in and out of these glided several majestic swans.

On the opposite bank were several boats for the use of those who had a liking for such amusement.

"Yes," replied Ethel, "it is as you say, a lovely spot, but I would rather not sit here."

"What, not in the summer-house?"

"No, I don't like it."

"You amaze me! I should have thought it was just such a place as you would like. Still, there is no accounting for tastes. And yet I should like to know why you dislike it."

"I hardly know myself, to tell you the truth. But it is enough for me to say that I don't like the place, isn't it?"

Leon made but little progress during the walk. Ethel several times appeared to be lost in thought.

Leon noticed it and wondered.

"It's very strange," he muttered when Ethel had taken her departure to the house, "deuced strange."

Saying which, Leon flung himself upon the high grass, placed his hat over his eyes, and in less than five minutes was fast asleep.

CHAPTER V.

"I say, Ethel," cried Grace, as Ethel came up the front entrance to the house, "there is one thing which I had quite forgotten to show you. Come upstairs to my room and I will show it to you."

Ethel followed her.

"What is it, Grace?" she asked; "some new present from—from Rowland?"

"It is a present from him," replied Grace, "but not new; it was the first present he ever gave me."

"Oh, indeed; I'm quite curious."

"You will say it is a strange present," laughed Grace, "but it is very precious to me."

Saying which she placed the [illegible]

[illegible] until [illegible]

"Come now, Ethel," said Grace, "we must join the gentlemen."

But a few moments after joining the gentlemen, Ethel suddenly disappeared, and went direct to her room. There for some time she surveyed the wreath in silence, and then, in a hoarse whisper, she said: "She wear this? Never! To-night—to-night! Ah, let me think. It must be now; yes, at once—or it will be too late."

Sinking into a chair, and resting her head upon her hands, she thought; and then procuring writing materials, she wrote, imitating a man's hand, several lines. This she directed "Rowland Saxby, Esq.," and sealed up.

"Ha, ha!" she laughed, "I am as clever as you are, Grace Thorne. Your time on this earth is short, and then I shall be free to try to win his love once more. No one will suspect it is I who was the cause of her death. No, no; that would be impossible."

Ten minutes after this she joined her mother, and was as cheerful as possible. Truly, a most remarkable woman was Ethel Danvers.

* * * * * *

"Oh, dear!" murmured Leon, as he sauntered through the park, puffing lazily at the everlasting cigar, "what a miserable, unhappy wretch I am! No one to speak to! It is awful! And when I thought Ethel would go for a walk this lovely moonlight night, of course she is indisposed. Never mind; I'll make the most of it. I'll rest in solitude and make myself as miserable as possible under the circumstances."

And Leon took a seat upon a rustic bench, which was placed under the shadow of a gigantic oak.

There he sat until the last fragment of his cigar had been consumed, and it is quite possible that he would have dropped off into a quiet sleep; in fact, he had settled himself for that purpose.

Suddenly, however, he sat bolt upright and looked straight before him.

What was that black figure coming rapidly towards him? Was it a woman?

"Now, that's a strange thing," muttered Leon. "What on earth does it mean? Yes; it is a lady, but who?"

The figure rapidly approached, and Leon darted behind the oak. He determined to see who it was.

Nearer and nearer came the figure, and Leon could see that whoever it was wished to escape being seen, for she kept well in the shadow of the trees.

Now she passed the oak, and as she did so, Leon almost uttered a loud cry of astonishment.

"By Heaven!" he muttered, looking after her like one stupefied, "it is Ethel Danvers! And what a terrible expression is upon her features! What does this mean? What mystery is here? Ah, she goes in the direction of the summer-house. It is a dishonorable thing to do, but I must see what this mystery is, Ethel Danvers."

Buttoning up his coat, he followed her slowly but catiously.

* * * * * *

"My darling, only a little longer, and we shall be one!"

And Rowland, stooping full in the moon's rays, imprinted a passionate kiss upon the beautiful face upturned to his, beaming with a world of love.

"You make me very, very happy, Rowland. I often wonder whether there are any young girls in the world so happy as I."

"Of course there are, my pet. Thousands and thousands of hearts at this very moment are filled with love such as ours."

"Heaven bless them all!" said Grace, softly.

"Amen to that!" replied Rowland, as he pressed the slight form closer to him.—"And now let us go to our old spot, my dear. There we can talk about the future."

So, with their arms entwined, and happy beyond expression, walked the lovers towards the summer-house.

"I am sorry Ethel is indisposed," said Grace.

"So am I, indeed; but she has not seemed well lately. There has been a restless, strange look in her eyes, I fancy. I should not be at all surprised if she were to be very ill."

"Do you think she frets?"

"Frets! No; I don't know what she can have to fret about."

"I wish she would yield to Leon. He loves her so very, very much; and he is handsome and rich. I can't think what more she desires."

"You are quite right, but——"

Rowland was interrupted by the sudden appearance of one of the footmen, who, bowing respectfully, said:

"Beg pardon, sir, but Sir Rowland said that I should very likely find you here. A boy has just delivered this note, sir."

And he handed Rowland a letter.

"How very annoying," cried Rowland, tearing off the envelope. "Who can this be from?"

As he read it his face assumed an expression of wonder, and when he had finished he sat down and read it to Grace.

"Listen," he said, "what a strange thing. 'To Rowland Saxby, Esq.—Sir.—The writer of this has a most important communication to make to you. He is now waiting for you at the outside gates of the house. Strictly private.' What do you think of that?"

"I don't know what to think, Rowland. But you had better see what it is, had you not?"

"I suppose so. Well, this is extraordinary. Very well," he added to the man, "I will follow you."

"I will [illegible] you here, Rowland. You will [illegible]"

[illegible] there for minutes, I [illegible]

[illegible] into the [illegible] holding up her [illegible]

[illegible] the form of a man dart [illegible] other side of the summer-house. It was Leon Cathcart.

Throwing off his coat and hat he leapt into the water, and in a moment had clutched the drowning girl firmly by the waist. He was only just in time.

Another moment and Ethel Danvers would have been a murderess.

"Hold up, Grace!" cried Leon, holding her tightly with his left arm, while with his right he struck out for the opposite bank, for that was the safest, and there was more chance of him getting the poor girl out, because there were several boats at hand.

But, alas, Grace had become totally insensible, and consequently she was a dead weight upon the courageous Leon. Her long trailing skirts, too, impeded his progress.

Fortunately, however, he was a powerful fellow and a most accomplished swimmer. Had he not been, neither of their lives would have been worth much had not help been forthcoming.

Arrived at the bank, he clutched the first boat which came within reach. But it was only a very frail skiff, which rocked dangerously at his touch. He tried hard to hoist the insensible girl into it, but failed. Again and again he tried, but with the same result.

At last he began to get exhausted, despair began to take possession of him, and raising his voice, he cried out as loud as he was able:

"Help! help!"

But the only answer was the echo of his own voice.

"Oh, God!" he groaned, as a sob escaped his lips, "are we, then, to perish? True, I can save myself, but only at the risk of her life. No, no! I would not do that.—Rather perish together."

Again he cried aloud for help, and this time he was answered by the rush of many feet, and then a voice, which he recognized as a friend of his, and one of the guests at the house, cried out:

"Where are you? In the name of Heaven, where are you?"

"Here," replied Leon. "Run round, Attwell, and help us out."

Young Attwell and the friends with him required no second bidding. They were round on the opposite side in a twinkling, and had clutched Leon in a firm grip.

In a moment he and Grace—who was still insensible—were drawn on terra firma, and Leon was inundated with excited questions.

"I will tell you all later on," said Leon; "but for Heaven's sake take that poor girl at once to the house. I am too much exhausted, but you are strong enough, Attwell. Take her in your arms and hurry off. I will follow."

Yes, Attwell was strong enough. He raised Grace in his arms as if she had been a child, and ran off as fast as he could.

But someone had preceded him, and that was a very foolish young gentleman who had been in the company of Attwell and his friends. No sooner did he catch sight of Grace and the condition she was in, than, without a word he scampered off to the house.

* * * * * *

Sir Rowland Saxby was seated in the large drawing-room with Mrs. Thorne, Mrs. Danvers, and several other ladies and gentlemen. They were conversing upon a very important matter—to-wit, the coming marriage and the arrangements for its celebration.

Presently they were joined by Ethel, who had changed her black dress for a white satin one, and looked fairly well.

"Ah, Miss Danvers," said Sir Rowland. "I am glad to see that you have somewhat recovered from your indisposition. Have you seen anything of those truants?"

"Truants, Sir Rowland?"

"Yes; I mean Rowland and Grace."

"No; I——"

"Hem! Rowland, I think, was sent for by some one. Some letter came for him—somebody waiting. Where can they have got to? They don't give me much of their company, I must——"

At this moment the door was flung open and Rowland came into the room, looking as fierce as a trooper, an open letter in his hand.

"What on earth has happened Rowland?" asked his father.

"What on earth has happened?" cried Rowland. "Why I have been made a fool of, that's all—the victim of a hoax. I should like to find out the perpetrator of it."

"Explain, Rowland."

"Why, this letter was brought to me by the footman about half an hour ago——"

"Yes! I sent him to you as he said it was important."

"Just so. Listen."

And Rowland read it to the assembled company.

"I went, of course," he said; "but there was not the slightest sign of anyone there. I walked up and down, up and down, but no one came."

"Very extraordinary!" said Sir Rowland. "You must make enquiries respecting the writer. Whoever the person is we will let him—or her—know that practical jokes do not meet with approval here. And where did you leave——"

At this point a young gentleman dashed at full speed into the room. His face was very pale, and for a few moments he could not speak.

All that were seated hastily rose, and said: "What has happened?"

"Oh!" cried the young gentleman excitedly, "it is awful!"

"Awful! What is? Speak!" cried Rowland.

"[illegible]—she—she has fallen into the lake and is drowned."

Ethel stood erect, her face was now very pale and her lips trembled.

"We all thank God!" she said; "but tell us, Sir Rowland, who was the one who saved her?"

"Leon Cathcart—brave Leon—God bless him! But ah, here he is," he added, advancing to him and shaking him warmly by the hands, an act in which he was followed by almost all in the room. "Leon, my boy, accept my thanks, and those of her poor mother there. Mrs. Danvers cannot thank you; her heart is too full."

"But I can thank him on her behalf," said Ethel.

And before Leon could prevent it she had taken his hands, but he did not raise his eyes to hers.

"How did it happen, Leon?" asked Sir Rowland.

"I don't know exactly," said Leon calmly. "I think she must have got too close to the water and over-balanced herself. I was some distance away from the lake, but hearing her cries, I hurried to the spot, and arrived only just in time to save her."

"Brave boy!" cried Sir Rowland, again shaking him by the hand, "we shall hear how she managed it when she comes to."

Leon now retired to change his clothes, but he thought he could not face Ethel again that night, and instead of again coming down stairs, he went to bed.

"What a shocking accident," said Mrs. Danvers to Ethel as they were about retiring; "but for a merciful Providence she would have drowned! Even now, the immersion in the water may be the cause of her death."

"I hope it may prove so!" thought Ethel. Then aloud she said: "It may, indeed. Let us hope it may please Heaven to spare her for Rowland's sake."

When in her own room, Ethel was very thoughtful for some time. Eventually she commenced to pace the room.

"I wonder," she muttered, "whether Leon saw me? No, no, that is not likely. I did it all too secretly for that. And even now I am foiled!" she said bitterly, as she wrung her hands in despair. "Everything seems against me. What am I to do? Shall I give up all attempts as useless? Perhaps it would be better so. Perhaps it would be better for me to give my hand to Leon, and never see Rowland again. Yes, yes, that would be better; to-morrow I have no doubt he will ask me again, and this time he shall not be denied."

With these thoughts uppermost in her mind she retired, but not to rest. Far from it. For hours she tossed upon her bed, and not until the sun poured in through the cracks in the shutters did she fall into a restless slumber.

S. E. LINCOLN,
Fulton, N. Y.

[illegible] is off on his vacation [illegible] at Albany, as [illegible] The Governor [illegible] in the North Woods.

The Oswego Times has made its periodical flop. A few days ago the Times was doing everything in its power to promote the candidacy of Senator Lansing. Now it has found out that "Map[illegible] Worts is the choice of the Republicans for the Senatorial nomination."

The New York Sun again made a garbage barrel of its first page last week by printing another contribution from Star Route Dorsey, in which he again attempts to blacken the character of Garfield. The most amusing part of the whole interview is that, although Dorsey says that an immense amount of money was used in Indiana by the Republicans in 1880, he never touched any of it.

The New York Herald is advocating the building of a line of telegraph by the government. It should be done. No individual or corporation has yet been able to withstand the amalgamating and consolidating attacks of the monopolistic Western Union concern. The government alone can do this. A move of this nature would mean cheaper telegraphic rates and fair and equitable wages to telegraph operators.

The Presidential party did not expect to get thirsty on their journey to Yellowstone Park. The Washington Post speaks as follows of the supplies of the party: "Palace car No. 353 was elegantly fitted up for the President's private use. The wine department was stocked with six cases of best champagne, three cases of Rhine wine, four gallons of old Bourbon whisky of 1860, fine Cognac brandy, Bordeaux, and other wines, and four cases of Appollinaris water. A large stock of cigars was also provided." President Arthur is the official head of the Republican party—the party of temperance and "great moral ideas."

THE CROPS.

Their Condition in Neighboring Counties—Evaporators.

Caughdenoy, August 6.—For the benefit of those interested in the crop prospects I will give a brief sketch of a short ride in the western part of the State. Starting from Syracuse west on the Auburn road I found in the western part of Onondaga county grain looking good with the exception of corn, which was very poor; potatoes fair. Through Cayuga and Seneca counties crops looked fair, but are coming on rather late. Arriving at Phelps, I was met by Mr. W. W. Crittenden, General State Agent for the American Fruit Evaporator, who very cordially invited me to stop over with him till the next day which I consented to do. A short walk found us at his house, a fine residence pleasantly located on First street, where he introduced me to his wife, a very sociable and pleasant lady of fine appearance. Mr. Crittenden, having built a supply depot on the New York Central which he keeps filled with dryers &c., sends all goods direct from there making the freight much less than if ordered from the company. This, in connection with his large correspondence keeps him very busy. As the next morning dawned we drove out into the country a number of miles looking up the fruit prospects etc. We first halted at a Mr. Seger's where we found him running a No 4 American dryer on black raspberries. He has quite a large place and expects to pick over 3000 quarts (or 1000 lbs) to the acre. He gets 35c. per pound evaporated, a very paying industry for most any farmer. Other places we visited with like results. After bidding my friends good by I learned that along the whole line of the road the apple crop was a complete failure, peaches plenty. Ontario county and west grain of all kinds looks exceedingly fine, corn tasseling out and their large potato fields they think never looked better than at present. They expect a heavy crop.

South Granby, Aug. 13 '83.

A small child of Edner Palmer of Jacksonville, about 13 or 14 months old, was found drowned in a pail of swill last Saturday. The accident occurred about noon. The child had wandered out of doors and when found its head was immersed in the pail, where it had fallen. The funeral will be held at Jacksonville to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

The recent discovery of a family of skeletons near Lampasas, Texas, shows that when Texas lightning strikes a man he sits up, perpendicular, for a number of years. But when Jersey lightning strikes him he becomes horizontal in five minutes.

[Binghamton Republican.

The Sun thinks the telegraphers should be put down because their business is conducted in secrecy. When Jay Gould goes in for a corner everybody knows it—that is, after he has been successful and pocketed several millions.

[Binghamton Republican.

There is a law in New Jersey, says the [illegible] Times, prohibiting the [illegible]

[illegible] Mrs. Charles [illegible] her husband with a twelve pound girl last week.

[illegible]

Will Berleigh of [illegible] had a narrow escape from the loss of a portion of his nasal organ this morning. He was assisting in grinding a mowing machine scythe when it slipped from the stone, one section striking him on the side of the nose, cutting a deep gash and severing a small artery. He was brought to Dr. Hamill's office where he fainted from the loss of blood. The flow of blood was stopped, the wound closed with a stitch and he soon revived.

[Phœnix Register.

South Granby.

South Granby, August 6.—Mr. and Mrs Albert C. Gifford of Hannibal Centre have been spending a few days with friends here.

T. C. Quade is treating his new barn to a coat of paint. A. C. Gifford is doing the painting.

Mrs. E. S. Hoagland of lower Oswego Falls has been visiting friends here the past week.

Farmers are complaining that the blight has attacked their potatoes already, which, with the wet season, will make the potato crop rather slim.

The past week has been a bad week for farmers to do their haying and a good many have not finished yet. Some complain of their wheat sprouting in the field and a good deal has been drawn in the barn in rather bad condition.

The green worm, the pest of tobacco growers, has made its appearance in the tobacco fields.

F.

South Scriba.

South Scriba, August 9.—Saturday afternoon Mrs. Mack Jones put some Paris green on some potato and placed it in a cupboard to poison mice. Shortly after her little three-year-old son was seen with some of the potato; Investigation showed that the little fellow had not only eaten it himself but had divided with the dog. Things were lively about the Jones residence for a few minutes and Dr. Phelps was called to the rescue. The child was saved. The would-be poisoned mice enjoy the pleasure of the cupboard while Mr. and Mrs. Jones anxiously watch the result of their experiment.

The Greenman school closed Friday with a picnic after a successful term of sixteen weeks, with Miss Baker of Volney as teacher.

Mrs. Ira Parker of Waterford, N. Y., is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Potter.

Died, Friday, August 10, in the town of Albion, Mrs. Almyra McEwin, relic of the late Eli McEwin, of Mt. Pleasant. The funeral was held from Mt. Pleasant church Saturday the Rev. A. M. Roe of Fulton officiating. Mr. McEwin was married twice, her former husband being the late Marquis Crooks.

Palermo.

Palermo, August 13.—Leonard Barnes died at the residence of his father-in-law, John Jackson, last Wednesday with typhoid fever. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Sanford of North Scriba Sunday at the Clifford M. E. Church, and was largely attended. He leaves a wife and one child, mother, brothers and sisters who have the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction.

Cyrus Severance of Mexico, is confined to the house at his father-in-law's C. C. Davis. It is expected, however, that he will be around in a few days as he is only rocking the cradle. It is a boy!

Mrs. J. Y. Wilcox has gone to Batava to spend a few days.

Our poor master, George S. Babcock, was quite severely injured last Saturday by being thrown to the ground by a runaway team. Several ribs were broken, besides other injuries being sustained.

Granby Centre, August 14—Mrs. J. Mackosy, who has been visiting at her father's, L. W. Austin, for a few weeks, returned to her home in Jersey City last Saturday.

The tract of ground which is being cultivated by H. Parks on the Cornell premises is presenting a good prospect for tobacco.

Caughdenoy.

To the Editor of The Fulton Times:

Caughdenoy, August 6.—Through sympathy for the fruitless knowledge of the Palladium correspondent of this place I am called to answer in reply to his most eloquent lines of last week's issue written by him. It seems that some time back he has been using his mightier powers to play a joke on one of his old friends through the press and he not being to heavily blessed with knowledge of this kind failed to make a point without using the name of a refined and highly respected young lady of this place which, the way it is written, showed small intellect, yet intended for nothing but a joke. But remember jokes sometimes when not properly written look much differently to the unacquainted reader and before this writer enters very extensively into the corresponding ranks he should expand his mental powers a little more that he may understand more fully the points of writing an article for the press without unintentionally injuring the feelings of lady associates or parties referred to. And I can only say that he will be held excusable only upon the grounds mental disability.

Board of Health.

Fulton, Aug. 2d, 1883.

Board of Health met at the office of Health officer Pardee. Present, Messrs Crahan, Chairman, Foster, Secretary, and J. Lalonde. Health officer Pardee and village attorney Stephens. On motion the following preamble, resolutions and ordinances were unanimously passed:

Whereas complaint has been made to the Board of Health of the village of Fulton, that by reason of the discharge into the Oswego river by divers persons of saw dust, shavings and wood refuse and by reason of the accumulation thereof in the channels, still water and along the banks of said river a nuisance has been created, dangerous to the public health, and

Whereas the said Board of Health have examined into the matters of said complaint and made personal inspection thereof, therefore said Board of Health do hereby pass the following resolutions and ordinances relating thereto.

Resolved, that the accumulation of saw dust, shavings and refuse of wood in the channels, still water and along the banks of the Oswego river and more particularly in the waters of said river and along the banks thereof upon and and adjoining the lands of John H. Merton in said village is a public nuisance, detrimental and dangerous to the public health and that the discharge of such saw dust, shavings and wood refuse into said river constantly increases and aggravates said nuisance thereby contributing to the extension thereof and to the injury and detriment of the public health. Therefore be it

Ordained, that all persons whomsoever be and are hereby strictly enjoined and forbidden from throwing, discharging or depositing in said Oswego river or waters leading thereto, within the village of Fulton any shavings, saw dust or refuse of wood after the date of the publication of this ordinance.

Be it ordained that any violation of the forgoing ordinance shall subject each and every person violating the same to a penalty of fifty dollars.

Resolved, that the Health officer of this Board be and is hereby authorized and directed to cause the publication of the foregoing resolutions and ordinances in the village papers and to serve a copy ot said resolutions and ordinances on each and every person engaged in the doing of acts prohibited and forbidden by said ordinances and to strictly enforce the requirements of said ordinances.

Resolved, that the question of the abatement of the nuisance already existing in the accumulation of said saw dust, shavings and wood refuse in the waters of the Oswego river and on the banks of said river within the village of Fulton be and the same is hereby respectfully referred to the Board of Trustees for its action, this Board having been advised that it has no power in relation thereto.

Board adjourned subject to call of the Chairman.

M. F. Crahan, Chairman.
G. H. Foster, Secretary.
[illegible]

[illegible] Roxbury, Delaware county [illegible] with the whole family [illegible] they were very nice people. Mr. Gould was small in stature, slender and lame. He was a Democrat, and took a great interest in local politics, attending every town meeting, and electioneering with the greatest earnestness. The male members of the Gould family were remarkable for their precocity. They came into manhood much earlier than most boys, and at 15 Jay was as sharp as most young men are at 22. Jay's mother and sisters were all intelligent, refined women. In the fall of the year that Jay was 16 years old his father proposed to trade his farm for my place in town. We managed to come to an agreement, and the bargain was made, the transfer to take place the following spring. Young Jay had a desire to attend the village school, so he offered to work for me for his board, and I kept him all winter. He was an excellent boy. His habits were good and he devoted the most of his evenings to study. He was always the first one up in the morning, and he had the fire burning and tea kettle boiling by the time my wife was ready to prepare breakfast. The next spring I moved to the farm and Jay's father took possession of my house in town. I was running a tinshop, and as I could not very well attend to that and the farm, Jay bought me out and for a year turned his attention to selling milk pails and doing jobs of tinkering. The business did not suit his tastes, however, and he disposed of the shop. He was a fine penman and a first-clas accountant, and he soon secured a position as confidential clerk to a merchant, who combined the real estate business with his merchantile pursuits quite extensively. It was in this position that Jay first gave evidence of the shrewdness which is a part of his nature. A portion of an estate which had been a supject for litigation for years was about to be sold, and Jay's employer had endeavored to purchase it. There was some disagreement about the price. The executors asked $3,500. but the man for whom young Gould worked was not willing to give more than $2,000. Jay of course read all and wrote part of the letters that passed between the two, and it occurred to him that he might make a strike. He discovered that the property was worth at least $4,000 in the market, and understood that there was a chance to speculate. Accordingly without his employer's knowledge, he borrowed $2,500 from his father and went down to Kingston, where the executor of the estate resided. He said that he had come to purchase the land and laid down the money. The bargain was soon closed. The deed being made out in his father's name, and inside of two weeks Jay sold the land for $4,000, clearing $1,500 by the transaction. This breach of faith caused a separation of Gould and his employer, and also burst a little matrimonial bubble in which the former and a female relation of the latter were the central figures."

"While at school Jay paid considerable attention to mathematics, and acquired quite a knowledge of civil engineering. The attainment came into play at this time. A man named Oliver was making a sectional map of Ulster county, which joins Delaware, and he wanted an assistant, Jay tendered his services and was employed. His duties consisted of wheeling a perambulator along the country roads and across fields, and noting the distances. He remained with Oliver for one season, and in that time acquired so much knowledge of map making that he started out for himself to make a map of Delaware county. He next took his cousin, who lived at Albany, into partnership and they sent men to Ohio to make the first maps of Lake and Geauga Counties. Men were also sent to Michigan to map the county in which Pontiac was situated. These undertakings were never completed by Gould, the work having been transferred to a man living in Philadelphia.

"At this time, when Gould was between 19 and 20 years of age, he was considered a good surveyor and his services were in great demand. A short distance from Roxbury lived Colonel Pratt, who had been sent to Congress from that district. He was an ignorant man, but being worth about $100,000 was considered the most important person in that section. He felt his own importance, and had delighted to see his own name printed on his large bills. He was a farmer, tanner and sheep raiser, and he usually placed all the titles after his name when he wrote it. He had a great desire to make his the model farm and add fresh laurels to his wealth of renown. Accordingly he sent for young Gould to come and make a survey of the place and arrange it in a tasty manner. Gould saw that the old man was susceptible to flattery, and when he had concluded his work and was about to leave, he said:

"'Colonel, you are a statesman, farmer, tanner and sheep grower. You ought to make yourself more famous still by building the largest tannery in the world.'

"'By George! I would,' said the Colonel, 'if I knew where I could get plenty of bark.'

"That was enough for Gould. He went [illegible] age, he induced his relatives to take a large portion of the stock and appoint him their proxy. He was elected director of the bank, and everything went on swimmingly. All the notes issued by the bank bore a picture of the tannery or some part of it, and the tannery controlled everything in Gouldsborough. Gould withdrew from the bank and deposited $25,000 of the bank's funds with Leupp & Lee, brothers, of New York, and thereby obtained a credit which did him good service later and all this time Colonel Pratt was putting money into the business until he had invested $55,000,000. He realized little on his investment, and became uneasy. He sent a man down to Gouldsborough to investigate affairs, and when he returned with the report 'you had better get out of there or Gould will break you up,' the old man decided to dissolve the partnership. He met Gould in New York and offered to sell to him for $40,000 or pay in $10,000 to leave the business. Gould was given ten days to consider the matter, and at the end of that time he surprised the Colonel who had supposed him without ready funds, by agreeing to purchase the tannery. He gave Leupp & Lee of New York as security, and Colonel Pratt was satisfied to get out. Charles Leupp then became partner in the business, and as he furnished the money of course he footed the bills, which came in so fast that on the memable Black Friday Leupp & Lee went to the wall. Leupp could not withstand the strain, and he killed himself by sending a bullet through his brain. Leupp left two daughters and the only thing left them in the wreck was their father's interest in the tannery. Lee was appointed administrator of his partner's estate, and he decided to take possession of the tannery and drive Gould out. Then occurred the great war, an account of which has been published. Lee went to Scranton, Pa., and consulted a lawyer named Willard, who advised him to resort to force. The two went to Gouldsborough and organized a band of roughs, who marched to the tannery and took possession. Gould, hearing the news, came from New York, rallied about him 100 or more ruffians, who armed themselves with clubs, guns, scythes and all sorts of weapons. Gould hung a red flannel shirt on a pole, and under this banner the force was marched to the tannery, and after a severe fight the Lee forces were dislodged and driven from the field. The matter was then taken into the courts, but Leupp's daughter's never got anything. The tannery rotted, down and nothing but ruins now mark the spot where the great railroad king began his speculative career."

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE."

284 Adelphi St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
March 29, 1881.

No family should be without Allcock's Porous Plasters; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficacy far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and known them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint, bronchitis, neuralgia, lumbago, inflammation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weakness, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with Brandreth's universal life-giving and life-healing Pills, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good sound health.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"Valdosta, Georgia, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"Clinton, Iowa. April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

William Drew of Jacksonville Fla., who has been a guest at the residence of W. S. Nelson for the past fortnight, bid adieu to Fulton yesterday morning.

A young man named Rickett, son of John Rickett, of Battle Island, cut the shin bone of his left leg badly last Saturday with an axe. Dr. C. M. Lee dressed the wound.

Marcus F. Crahan, William Heatherington, Will Betts, Charles Pratt and others of Fulton, with Rev Father Green of Cleveland are camping out near Morseman's lock, where they will remain about one week.

Another Colorado letter will be found in The Times this week from the graceful pen of Prof. A. B. Roe. Mr Roe left town for New York on Monday and will remain there for a few days before returning to his school duties.

Last Friday the Oswego Falls Observer came out enlarged to eight pages or just double its former size. Heretofore two pages of the Observer have been printed in New York and two pages in Oswego Falls. Now the same number are printed in Oswego Falls and six of its pages are printed in New York.

The Thousand Island excursion of the N. Y. O. & W. R'y, on Monday August 20th, is attracting a great deal of attention. It looks as if a large number would avail themselves of [illegible]

Hiram Ladd was recently the recipient of a pension amounting to $1,133. He has purchased himself and wife a snug little home at Oswego Falls at a cost of $900 and had a nice little balance left in the bank.

Says the Phœnix Register: "Some weeks ago the Register stated on what it believed to be good authority that Rev. A. U. Hutchins had gone to Idaho, but the report proves premature. He has not gone, but is expecting to start shortly."

The genial face of Superintendent of the Poor Spencer was conspicuous on the street last Friday. Was he discussing politics? As he has business here every Friday, it is to be presumed he was not, though politics are becoming a rather absorbing topic, nowadays.

Last Friday a private picnic party boarded the canal boat Alfred M. Hoyt, owned by W. S. Nelson and were conveyed to a point near the mouth of Ox Creek, on the Oswego River where they held a pleasant picnic, enjoying fully three hours of recreation and delightful social intercourse. During the stay on the grounds a lunch of tempting viands was spread and heartily partaken of by the picnicers, who returned home at an early hour well pleased with the afternoon's sport. The party consisted of A. Howe and wife, Misses Lillie and Grace Howe, Mrs. William C. Stephens, William Lovejoy, Miss Georgia Lovejoy, Murray Nelson, jr., of Chicago; William Drew, Jacksonville, Fla.; Charles Howe, Harry DeForest, Miss Hattie Nelson, Frank Waterman, Misses Julia and Jessie Kimball, Miss Lillie Twitchell and Miss Allie Stephens. W. S. Nelson kindly furnished the boat free of charge.

B. J. Dyer continues his closing out sale, and is desirous of disposing of his present line of goods as soon as possible. This stock is offered to the public at rates so low that it will be for the interest of every one to give him a call before purchasing elsewhere. 9tf

A Decided Acquisition.

Miss Julia Doubleday, formerly preceptress of Falley Seminary, and a graduate of Cornell University at its last commencement, has been elected to fill the vacancy made in the Academic Department of Fulton Union School and Academy, by the resignation of Miss A. Howe of New York. Miss Doubleday accepts the position, and will be present at the opening of the fall term, Monday, August 27. During Miss Doubleday's stay in Fulton she made many warm friends and proved herself an earnest instructor and worthy and estimable lady. Her return to the scene of her former labors will be hailed with delight by all who were fortunate enough to form her acquaintance. Miss Doubleday was preceptress at the Seminary when Prof Boothby was an instructor at that institution.

Resolutions of Respect.

At the regular meeting of Fulton Lodge, No 424, I O G T, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father in his wisdom has seen fit to remove our sister Hattie McCarthy from our Lodge to that temple not made with hands, therefore,

Resolved, That we recognize in her death the call of that voice that we all must obey. Regretting the early death of one who was willing while in health to aid us in our temperance work, and who evidently had an influence for good among those who loved her so dearly, it is also

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the relatives of our deceased sister in their bereavement.

Resolved, That as an outward expression of sorrow we will drape out lodge room, charter and regalia with the emblems of mourning for thirty days and that these resolutions be published in the village papers, a copy presented to the friends of the deceased and that they be recorded on the minutes of our lodge,

Mrs I Darrow,

To The Public.

The undersigned desires to submit to the citizens of Fulton and Oswego Falls the question of a proposed course of lectures and entertainments the coming winter and at so early a time, for it is at this season that engagements are mostly made. The course proposed would be made up of lectures by the following named persons: Rev. Joseph Cook, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, and Genl. N. P. Banks or Rev. Robert Collyer, besides the following entertainments, The Royal Hand Bell Ringers, and The Temple Quartette or Fisk University Jubilee Singers, making a course of five entertainments which is thought would give very great satisfaction to patrons.

While there can be no considerable profit as the result of such a course there should be no loss. A casual patronage cannot be relied upon as a protection against loss and the question is therefore submitted, whether a sufficient patronage can be guaranteed in advance to justify the undertaking.

For this course the sum of two dollars and twenty-five cents would be the price of each course ticket, entitling the holder to a reserved seat for each entertainment and is the least price which can be afforded even if the patronage is very considerable as will be explained to any person wishing to make inquiry. It must be left to the public to determine if this course shall be undertaken. Subscriptions will be taken by Charles R. Nichols and at the Opera House ticket office until the 10th of September and citizens are respectfully requested to determine at their earliest convenience their wishes upon the subject.

[illegible] Said I to the editor of the Colorado Sun, "Are you able to keep the whisky out?" "Well pretty much," was his reply. He said that it was sometimes smuggled in; but the place is really a Sanitarium for those who wish to be out of the sight of the debasing fluid. By means of irrigation, fine crops are produced; but the character of the surrounding country can be estimated when it is learned that the chief hotel in town is called the Oasis. The settlers are mostly from the Eastern States and have carried their home thrift and economy with them. The confines of civilization are reached when the team deposits us at Ft. Collins, eighty miles north of Denver. Here Senior Vice Com. Sawyer welcomed us in a glowing speech to the hospitalities of the town, which we soon afterwards learned meant a very indifferent dinner at seventy-five cents a plate, the usual price of which was fifty cents and at this rate even there was no provision made for more than one-half of the party. Here a member of 126th Ohio, in my brigade of the 6th corps, left me in high dudgeon because I didn't enthuse over my surroundings and because I intimated that I was glad I was not obliged to remain there. He was a stock raiser and thought the country admirable. So did I, in vastness. Notwithstanding the turning out of its two fire engine companies to squirt for us, we left the place with rather a poor notion of its hospitality. Thence we ran down the river, one of the tributaries of the Platte, into the Rocky Mountains at our right and very close at hand. On every side, we saw the efforts to carry water to the thirsty crowd. In one case a sluice was visible for several miles capable of carrying many thousands of gallons and even crossing the railroad, not going over it, but under it by means of a covered conductor, and then rising to nearly the same height on the other side, went on its merciful way. At Bonedu, we are at the very foot of the mountains and a before breakfast stroll would take one to the top of the first spur. Here is the State University apparently well honored and prosperous. "Mr. R., I think," said a young Miss extending her hand and I found myself facing a girl who had been in my school more than two thousand miles to the eastward. She says "I shouldn't have graduated at the High School in Worcester till next year; but I am in the University here." Mining is the industry that keeps the town alive. As we move out I note among other tents, one where a mother under her floorless canopy rocks her baby's cot and runs a sewing machine. Were ever the frontier and civilization better blended? Denver is reached at nightfall and notwithstanding some disappointments we vote the day if not the country a success. I might have stated that at Ft. Collins is located the State Agricultural College and in its immediate vicinity we saw better indications of crops than any where else in the State. So ended the first day's trip. At half past seven a. m. we were off once more to the southward. We were this morning separated into two parties, one going first to Leadville and thence around through the Royal Gorge, of the Arkansas, and the other going via. Manitou, Royal Gorge Gunnison etc. to Leadville and so back to Denver. The two trips were just the reverse of each other. The day is Sunday, but the West knows no Sunday when it wants a railroad trip, and so we ride away on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, a narrow tracked road that long since solved the problem of how to get over the Rocky Mountains, viz., lay the track and ride over. Castle Rock is a hamlet getting its name from a singular outcropping of limestone in its immediate vicinity. Lake Kalmic is a diminutive lake hollowed out by man and filled by pure cold water from the mountains, and, lying as it does, eight thousand feet above the sea has become a favorite picnic resort for Denverites. Colorado Springs is pronounced the most beautiful place in the extreme West and I am not going to gainsay it. Here is Colorado College, a fine institution maintained by Eastern wealth and presided over by Rev. E. P. Tenney, of sterling worth. There is no more finely appointed hotel in the country than the "Antlers," the chief hostelry of this town. Here the train runs off on a side track to Manitou, where the springs really are. Sulphur and soda are the chief ingredients, but there is one that contains much iron. Hotels and boarding houses abound here, but their capacity is sorely tried by the irruption of over two hundred hungry and restless [illegible]

[illegible] make and yet transactions are 550 boxes in excess of last week. This shows that the make is large, notwithstanding considerable shrinkage in milk. Sales for the day are as follows: Nine lots, 250 boxes, at 8¾ cents; 69 lots, 6,770 boxes, at 9 cents; 3 lots 350 boxes at 9¼ cents; 9 lots, 1,189 boxes, half of which was small cheese, at 9¾ cents and 6 lots at p. t. Sales of 9,773 boxes; commissions, 2,772 boxes; total, 12,515 boxes Ruling price 9 cents.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The cheese market Monday was very dull, and according to advices from New York it was claimed that prices should not have exceeded 9 cents. As it is they are fairly ¼ cent lower than those of a week ago. Salesmen hesitated more than usual in selling and some declined to accept offers made, but the number was not large. Sales were considerable lighter than for several weeks past, but the general expression is that it is safer to sell right along than to hold. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
6	200	8¾
63	4,633	9
86	2,951	9¼
1	100	9½
1	107	9¾
18	1,482	Commission
124	9,592
Farm Dairy	664
Total	10,256

AT FULTON.

There were 2,418 boxes of cheese on the market Monday evening, representing twenty-two factories. The bulk of which was sold at 8½ to 8¾ cents. One lot sold for 9 cents. Messrs. Nash and Osborn were the buyers.

[illegible] George L. [illegible] was employed [illegible] a holiday visit. He was much the superior of his brother Henry in refinement, morals and ability to get along in the world respectably. When he came home he brought presents to his sisters and treated them kindly. Naturally they liked him better and paid him more attention than they did to Henry, who was coarse and brutal to such an extent that they all stood in fear of him. The brothers quarrelled about a trivial matter, when Henry drew a revolver and shot George through the brain killing him instantly. The case possesses something of a local interest from the fact that the family were some years since residents of this county and at the present time the mother of William Henry, his brother Stephen, and sister Samantha reside at Williamstown.

Dr. Augustus Pool, an old and esteemed physician of Oswego, died at his home in that city last Thursday afternoon. He was well known in this vicinity, where he has practiced. In the Oswego Times of Monday Dr. W. L. Woodbury of Fulton pays the deceased the following glowing tribute: "The friends and acquaintances of the late Dr. A. Pool are pained to hear of his death. He was professionally known by quite a number in this village and vicinity. The writer has known him for more than thirty years, and can testify to his genial and unobtrusive life, his kind heart, his readiness to assist those that had needs and his untiring and unselfish endeavor to honor his calling as a physician, early and late, in sunshine or in storm did he sympathetically but earnestly minister to the sick and dying. Many a poor family will miss his presence and kind voice at the bedside, as well as others who had for years looked to him for help in the hour of anxiety and sickness. He was always tender of the feelings of others although he had strong convictions of his own. Failing health has for years past greatly impared his usefulness." In him we lose a worthy citizen, a kind friend and a loving and honored physician. The funeral services of the deceased were held at Oswego Sunday and Dr. Woodbury acted as one of the pall bearers.

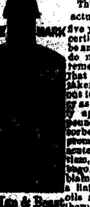
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

For Man & Beast.

[illegible] O. Nichols, of the First, [illegible] He was a Major of volunteers [illegible] senior Major on the active list in point of years is Edward Collins, of the [illegible] Infantry, who is fifty-nine. He came into the service in 1846 as a private in the Battalion of Engineers and has been in the service ever since. He was promoted from a sergeant of engineers to be a First Lieutenant of infantry in 1861. The oldest Lieutenant Colonel in the line of the army is Brevet Brigadier General Joseph N. G. Whistler, of the Fifth Infantry, who is sixty-one, and Lieutenant Colonel John Hamilton, of the Fifth, is sixty, the oldest of his grade in the artillery. General H. J. Hunt is the senior Colonel of artillery. He will be sixty-four in September. General Gilbert, Colonel of the Seventeenth Infantry, is the oldest Colonel of his arm of the service, being sixty-one and John P. Hatch, of the Second Cavalry, is the senior in years in the cavalry. The youngest Major General is Schofield and the eldest is Pope, who is sixty-one.—Hancock is fifty-nine and retires in 1888. Mackenzie is the youngest Brigadier General in the army. He is forty-two, and Miles, the next, is forty-four. Angler is the oldest Brigadier General, and is sixty-two. There will be a Brigadier General made in 1885, a Major General and a Brigadier in 1886, and again in 1888. The youngest Colonel of artillery is Ayers; of cavalry, Merritt, who is forty-two; and of Infantry, Pennypacker, who is forty-one. The youngest Lieutenant Colonel on the staff of the army is J. M. Whittemore, of the ordnance, and Morrow, of the Sixth Cavalry, is the youngest Lieutenant Colonel in the line. S. E. Tillman, Professor of Chemistry, Mineralogy and Geology, at West Point, has the correlative rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He is thirty-five and is, therefore, the youngest of the grade in the United States Army. The youngest Major in the army is William H. Smyth, of the Pay Department, who is twenty-nine, and George R. Smith, late of the Twelfth Infantry, who graduated from West Point in 1875, being only a few months older. The youngest Captain of cavalry is Otho W. Budd, who graduated from West Point in 1868 and F. V. Greene and Carl F. Palfrey are the youngest in the Corps of Engineers. The average age of Captains of artillery is forty-two, and in cavalry and infantry about forty. In the general staff of the army the youngest general officer is General Benet, Chief of Ordnance, who is fifty-six and the senior in date of commission. Adjutant General Drum and Surgeon General Crane are fifty-eight, and Paymaster General Rochester and Commissary General Macfeeley are both fifty-seven. The oldest retired officer of the army is General W. S. Harney, who was born in the last century and who entered the army in 1818. He lives at St. Louis and is probably the richest man in the army. Next to General Harney in years is General Pitcairn, Colonel of the Eighth Infantry in 1861, who entered the service in 1820. General Hunter entered in 1822 and General E. B. Alexander, who was Colonel of the Tenth Infantry when he retired, graduated from the Military Academy in 1823.—General Day also graduated in 1823 and retired as Colonel of the Sixth Infantry in 1863. While promotion is slower in some respects in our army than in any service in Europe, yet there is neither in England nor on the continent an officer of General Mackenzie's age, outside of royal blood, who has attained his rank.

The Complaints against the Railroads.

While on all hands the indebtedness of the community to railroad enterprise is gladly acknowledged, and while the average return on railroad investments throughout the country is but three per cent. and the charges generally are lower than elsewhere in the world, yet the complaints made against some of the leading lines are so serious as to have given rise to one of the angriest discussions of the time.

The chief complaints, of course, have been made against the lucrative roads, those which run through thickly-settled regions, like the New York Central; and against lines which, like the Central Pacific, are monopolies pure and simple. The complaints are of exorbitant charges, of discrimination in favor of individuals, firms, and localities; that the railroad companies lend themselves to the aggrandizements of monopolies such as the Standard Oil Company, and of minor subsidiary organizations, car, bridge, express, stock-yard, and elevating companies which absorb parasitically profits which should belong to the railway shareholders, and which, if rightly appropriated, would tend to relieve the burdens borne by the general public. The complainants furthermore aver that the railroad companies make use of their influence, as employers of large bodies of voters, to corrupt Legislatures and courts that they may remain unpunished in committing acts of fraud and rapacity, and defeat attempts by the State to exert the control which the highest authorities declare to be within its rightful powers.—Popular Science Monthly.

Our Sugar Industries.

An English paper expresses surprise that this country does not produce sugar enough to supply all the inhabitants. It quotes a South Carolina paper as saying that a small farmer in Rowan has had a sorghum crop on seven and a half acres of land which yielded over 2,200 gallons. Allowing for shrinkage, the income from this crop was double what it would have been from the same acreage of cotton. Sorghum can be made from some varieties of the sorghum cane. The last American census report showed that 509,731 pounds of sugar had been made in 1880. The amber cane has yielded as much as 65 pounds of sugar to the ton, and can be made to yield much more. As sugar and molasses are the heaviest articles of importation in the United States, amounting in 1881 to [illegible] which the country [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] but the husk is [illegible] To handle it easily bind it near the middle into small compact bundles, tying with rye straw or tarred twine. After a dozen or so are tied, set them up carefully in shocks. As soon as possible after husking carry them under sheds or into barns, or have them ricked or stacked convenient to barn or cattle yards. The great essential is to keep them from being washed and bleached by the rains. By exposure, the carbo-hydrates, the nutritious parts are changed to fiber. Dr. Lawes is authority for the statement that dried fodder loses nothing but the water in the drying. Therefore its value is equal to that of green fodder, and it can be restored to its original condition by soaking in water. Whether fodder whole, cut or steamed is best for cows, or will cause a greater flow of milk, is a disputed point. If given whole it is not eaten as close as when cut, yet the waste, though it looks heavier, is only about one-tenth of the whole weight, and if thrown into the cattle-yard becomes a manure for a succeeding crop. If cut, there is no waste, and if mixed with bran or meal it makes an excellent provender. Cutting and steaming has been found by experience to produce a very large quantity of milk, yet steaming and cutting are expensive, and in a trial of two methods—one cutting and steaming, the other giving dry fodder with luke-warm drink, and bran and meal fed as warm slop—the cows did equally well and gave an equal amount of milk.—Vaughan's Corn Manual.

The Secret of True Dignity.

The common note of all men, says the London Spectator, who are remarkable for true dignity is, however, a conscious self-respect; and this is getting less and less common as the contemplative temper merges in the competitive temper of modern times. Mr. Arnold has, with more than his usual skill, described the dignity of the East, in its contrast with the restlessness of the West, in the lines in which he paints the scorn felt by the East for the Roman conquests:

> The East bowed low before the blast,
> In patient deep disdain;
> She let the Legions thunder past,
> And plunged in thought again.

You have the whole secret of true dignity in that verse. It is patient; it is inward, and it really prefers the inward to the outward scenery. Dignity cannot be impatient; it cannot be external; yet, even if a mind is both patient and inward, it will have no true dignity so long as its whole feeling for the inward secresy it contemplates is that of displeasure and disapprobation. A dignified man must feel a certain amount of interest and pleasure in expressing himself adequately in speech and conduct. He must keenly value the moral symmetry of his own thoughts, and also the symmetry of his thoughts with his action, and therefore it is that, in the externality and hurry and irritability of our day, dignity is starved.

An Ape's Revenge.

Apes, when their anger is aroused, are very dangerous creatures, as they will dare almost anything in order to avenge their wrongs. Many of their deeds of revenge are well known, but the following anecdote, which comes from Italy, is as amusing as any we have yet heard of. Il Rosso, a disciple of Angelo, resided in Florence in a house overlooking a garden belonging to some friars. Il Rosso possessed an ape which was on friendly terms with one of his apprentices called Battistoni, who employed the animal to steal the friar's grapes, letting it down into the adjacent garden and drawing it up again by a rope. The grapes being missed a watch was set, and one day a friar caught the ape in the very act. He tried to inflict a thrashing, but the ape got the best of it and escaped. Il Rosso, however, was sued, and his pet sentenced to wear a weight on its tail. But few days elapsed ere the culprit had an opportunity of avenging this insult. While the friar was performing mass at a neighboring church, the ape climbed to the part of the roof under which the altar stood, and to use Vasari's words, "performed so lively a dance with the weight on his tail that there was not a tile or vase left unbroken; and on the friar's return a torrent of lamentations was heard that lasted three days."—Harper's Young People.

Apples for Market.

In selecting early apples, it is important to regard appearance, as such fruit is judged by the eye. A friend told us, a few years ago, that two trees of the "Summer Queen" were the most profitable of any in a large orchard. It is later than some others, but its large size and showy character, it being handsomely striped and shaded with red, caused it to bring the highest price. Another very showy fruit—and one of the most attractive—is the "Duchess of Oldenburg." It ranks, perhaps, as an early autumn, rather than as a summer fruit, but is so hardy, productive, and handsome, that it should not be omitted. Among other excellent early sorts are: "William's Favorite," a handsome red fruit; "Tetofsky," a Russian apple, now becoming very popular; "Red Astrachan," a beautiful red, but sour apple, and perhaps more generally planted than any other; "Carolina Red June" is similar in color. "Early Harvest," "High-top Sweet," "Large Yellow Bough," and "Summer Pippin," are among the best of the yellow or green apples. We have given a sufficiently large selection for a market orchard. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skilfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 70,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

[illegible] "Well, every small manufacturer is continually on the alert to find a brand of tobacco which has some quality peculiarly its own about it. When he discovers a bale that is of a slightly odd color or of an uncommon flavor he buys it and makes it up into cigars. Under an attractive name—the Hoodoo or the Gymnasticus, maybe, anything that is likely to catch—he puts it on the market. In the great majority of cases it will pass unnoticed by the public. But if it happens to make a hit—why, then, the dealer simply can't supply the demand. It is immense. Of course, after the first bale is used up and the cigar's reputation made it's of no consequence what kind of tobacco is used. The run on the cigar continues often for a year, though generally not so long. But, as cheap cigars can be manufactured at an enormous profit, the results of five or six months of heavy business will satisfy the ordinary mortal."

"I'll give you an instance or two that occur to me. A small manufacturer in Davenport, after pegging away for years, made a hit with a cheap cigar, manufactured under the system of selection that I have named. His success was enormous. In six months his little factory was enlarged into a big one, and he had a fortune in the bank. Another case is that of a firm in this city. They kept a basement shop, sold to a small trade, and worked at the bench themselves. One of their cigars took. That was three months ago. Now they have given up their retail business, employ a large force of clerks shipping goods to fill their immense orders, and they have more money than they can use. Still another illustration of this luck, for it's nothing else, you can see in the published accounts of sales of a certain brand at a prominent drug store down town. This cigar is worked off at the rate of over 10,000 a month at that one stand alone."

"It's a great business is the manufacture of cigars," he went on. "You'll make you're hit sooner or later, and after that the rest is easy. Probably eight men out of ten smoke, and six out of this eight are as unable to select a good cigar as a monkey is to refuse a chestnut. A vast proportion of smokers buy cheap cigars. Many do so from necessity, though not a few prefer the rank flavor and the taste of the composite that is sold for a nickle to the choicest imported. I know a number of wealthy men in town who habitually smoke "five-centers." The stronger and ranker they are the more they are to their liking, apparently. I have seen men who are scrupulously careful about what they eat and drink, requiring the best of cooking and choicest liquors, puffing away at vile rolls of a little tobacco, and much that is miscellaneous, with positive enjoyment. They want to taste the smoke, they say, and they do. People who live on the South Side get a sample of what it is when the odors of Bridgeport float gently on the luscious summer nights. There is a high salaried army officer at the Palmer House, two judges, the owner of a great corporation on the West Side, a large wholesale merchant, a retired real estate millionaire, who constitute fair examples of a class who turn from the delicate cigars of Cuba to the black, sticky articles made in reeking lodging houses in the purlieus of the city. It's a peculiar and an anomalous trait in the character of men refined in other respects."

"What are cheap cigars made of?"

"Well, there you have me. Ask what does not enter into their composition, and I can name a few articles that are too bulky. But perhaps I would be wrong. They may be part of the nickel cigar after all. I cut one open the other day. In it I found a rusty tack, two long straws, a piece of cotton cloth, some mud and the balance of the filling I conjecture was tobacco. It smelled like it, but it was dirtier and more broken up than any tobacco I ever have seen except that which exists in the stub a man throws away as worthless.

"Are stubs collected?"

"Of course they are. It's no tradition. It's an open practice in the East, and if you watch the streets closely you will see small boys gather up the fling-away cigars from the gutter. Competition is too strong. It forces adulteration into the trade. You may put it down as a fact that the nickel cigar, which is wholesaled for about one-fifth of that price, is a fraud. Often the cover is nothing more than paper. Seldom is it better than cheap Connecticut or Wisconsin waste leaves. And the filling—go into the shops and see the rubbish and dirt that is piled in heaps mixed with waste cuttings of weak leaves, the fragments and odds and ends collected from every source, including the gutter, see this mess rapidly rolled into cylinders, and these put on the market, and you'll wonder, as I do, that there are many human constitutions strong enough to stand them."—Chicago Herald.

About Mackinaw Hats.

Taking up a white, lustrous straw hat with a broad brim and rather shallow crown, the dealer handed it to the scribe and said:

"This hat is all the rage this season. We sell more of them than of any other style. It is a Mackinaw braid, the crown is three inches and a half deep and the brim is two and a half wide. The crown, you will notice, is rounded at the top, while the style of last year was square. These hats are standard, and never go out of fashion. The form may change a little from year to year, but the change is very slight. The tendency this year is to a broader brim and a shallower crown. We sell these hats from St. Paul to Galveston and from ocean to ocean."

"Where are they made?" said the reporter.

"They are made in the East. The straw is grown in Canada mostly. It is grown and cared for in some peculiar way known only to the natives. It is the straw of some grain, I am unable to say which, but in curing and preparing the straw no attention is paid to the grain, which is entirely lost. The rich [illegible] this straw possesses is due to the method of curing [illegible] [illegible]

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

A WREATH OF ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

CHAPTER VI.

A week passed away, and Grace Thorne had recovered and once more moved among the guests. True, she was pale—very pale, and had wasted considerably, but the doctor said that all she required now was plenty of fresh air and exercise to bring her round again.

Poor Leon had had rather a hard time of it. Six days passed before he could leave his bed. He had caught a severe cold, and it was feared that rheumatics would set in, but, happily, that fearful complaint was arrested

On the seventh day Leon left his room, and going out by the back way, took a walk in the direction of the lake.

He wanted to enjoy his cigar in peace and quietness. It was a most lovely day, and Leon, as may be supposed, was delighted, for he had found it anything but jolly to be cooped up in a bedroom for a week.

Entering the summer-house, he found it deserted, and muttering his satisfaction at such a desirable state of affairs, he proceeded to stretch himself at full length on one of the seats.

But he was not allowed to remain by himself for long. He had not been there ten minutes before the crunching of the gravel told him someone was approaching.

Looking through one of the little windows, he saw that the person advancing was none other than Ethel Danvers.

She was coming along slowly and thoughtfully, her eyes being cast upon the ground.

She was the last person he desired to see, but there was no help for it, for he could not move from where he was without her seeing him.

Arriving at the entrance to the summer-house, Ethel looked up, and then gave a great start, turning a shade paler as she did so.

"You here, Leon?" she said.

"Yes," replied Leon shortly.

"Gracious me!" cried Ethel. "You were the very last person I should have thought of finding here. I thought you were still in your room."

"What made you think so?"

"Because not long since I inquired of one of the servants—no, your valet, of course, and he said that he supposed you were in your room, as he had visited you two hours previously."

"Ah, I see!"

"Yes. You see, Leon, I wanted to know how you were getting on."

"Very kind of you, and believe me, I fully appreciate your thoughtfulness."

"But, Leon"—seating herself beside him—"why was it you issued instructions that no one but Rowland was to visit you?"

"Because I was very ill and wanted to be quiet. It was also the doctor's directions as well as mine."

"How cruel of you and him! For besides wishing to know how you were progressing, I—I—wished to tell you how brave I think you were in rescuing from certain death poor Grace, whom we all love so well."

"You think me brave?" This was said in very indifferent tones.

"Brave!" cried Ethel; "brave is hardly the word."

"It is only what any man would have done."

"I can't say that, for all men are not so brave as you. And how singular it is that Grace cannot recollect how she managed to tumble in. All she seems to remember is that she heard a great rushing sound, and then that she found herself struggling in the water."

"It is singular," replied Leon, calmly puffing his cigar, "very singular."

"And, Leon, you—you will forgive me what I am about to say?"

"Certainly."

"I do so love a brave man. I think I should be very, very happy as the wife of a brave man. Leon, it was not so very long ago that you asked me to be your wife."

"True."

"And I said that some day I would give you an answer."

"You did."

"That answer, Leon, I give you now. It is that I will be your wife."

And she laid her small white hand upon his arm and looked earnestly into his face, wondering, however, as she did so, what made him look so grave.

Suddenly the face of Leon underwent a complete change. A fierce light blazed in [illegible] and, flinging his cigar from him, [illegible] to his feet, and looking full in [illegible] he said:

"[illegible] Danvers, were it to save my [illegible] to save my soul, I would not [illegible] my wife!"

your soul. I see now the reasons of your repeated refusals of me, but that I need not mention. All I ask of you is, never speak to me again."

"Oh, Leon!" cried Ethel, as she cast herself at his feet and raised her hands in supplication, "have mercy upon me! have mercy upon me!"

"Have I not been merciful? Have I uttered a word respecting it? Could I not have done so? But no; that I would not do. I——"

"You will not expose me? For my mother's sake, I implore you, do not expose me!"

"Aye, I will not; not only for your mother's sake, however, but for your own. But do not ask mercy of me. Rise and seek your room, and when there ask mercy and pardon of your God. Oh, I would freely give my whole fortune could that fearful night be forever erased from my memory!"

And burying his face in his hands, Leon sobbed bitterly.

Ethel slowly rose. There was now no sign of emotion visible upon her features.

Waiting until Leon's emotion had somewhat abated, she said: "I will obey your desire, and will not see you again. But you will promise not to mention a word of the matter to anyone?"

"I do promise."

"Farewell. Do you forgive me?"

"Yes, I forgive you, for I believe that you must have been mad—consumed by a foolish passion. Therefore I forgive you, and may Heaven do likewise."

"Will you take my hand?" she asked softly, as she stepped close up to him.

"Do not ask me—it is impossible!"

"Yet you had better, or one—one day you may regret not having done so."

At that time Leon did not attach any importance to her words.

After a short pause he held forth his hand; Ethel took it and pressed it warmly, but the pressure was not returned.

Heaving a deep sigh, Ethel turned and with slow and stately steps returned to the house.

* * * * * *

On the following morning, just after breakfast, Grace came hurriedly into the sitting-room in which Rowland was seated. She looked scared and excited.

"What is it, my dear?" asked Rowland, rising and folding her in his arms.

"Why, Rowland, what should you think? I cannot find my wreath."

"Your wreath? Why, is it not in the box?"

"No, the box is empty."

"Strange! Well, you must have mislaid it."

"No, indeed; that would be impossible, for previous to my accident it was in the box, and I placed it in my trunk and locked it."

"Are you sure?"

"Oh, quite. I recollect that I showed it to Ethel, and after that I put it away again."

"Well, that is most extraordinary. How on earth could it have vanished? Did you lock your trunk? But there, no one would take such a thing as a wreath of orange-blossoms. It is, putting it in the words of the advertisements, 'of no value except to the owner.' Had you not better question the servants?"

"I will, a little later on, but I don't think it will be of much use. Surely none of them would tamper with such a thing. I——"

At this moment Sir Rowland entered, followed by Mrs. Danvers.

"Rowland," said his father, "have you seen anything of Ethel?"

"This morning?"

"Aye, my son."

"No, indeed. In fact I have not seen her since yesterday morning."

"Nor I," said Grace.

"Gracious Heavens!" cried Sir Rowland, "where can the girl be?"

"My poor child!" moaned Mrs. Danvers, falling into the nearest seat.

"What has happened?" asked Rowland, amazed beyond measure.

"She is not in her room," said Mrs. Danvers, "and her bed has not been touched.

"Surely you are mistaken!" cried Grace, turning very pale.

"No, no. There is no mistake, she has gone—gone!"

"Gone. But where would she go? I—"

The maid now appeared at the door, her apron to her eyes, and in one hand she held a letter.

"Have you examined her boxes?" asked Sir Rowland.

"Yes sir. But there are no dresses missing. Everything is in the same place as I put them yesterday morning, after assisting her to put on her white satin. But in one of the boxes I found this letter," handing it to Mrs. Danvers; "it is addressed to you, madam."

Mrs. Danvers eagerly took the letter and tore it open.

All bent over her, and suddenly Grace and Rowland uttered cries of astonishment.

And well they might, for the first thing Mrs. Danvers brought forth was a long tress of shining dark hair.

There could be no mistake about it; all recognized it as Ethel's.

Around it was a slip of white paper, and upon that these words:

"TO ROWLAND SAXBY,
This keep in remembrance of me."

Mrs. Danvers sank again into a seat. Handing the letter to Rowland, she requested him to read it.

Her eyes were blinded with tears.

Rowland did as desired, and in a low voice read as follows:

DEAR MOTHER.—Ere this letter is in your hands I shall have left you never to return. Ah, me! You and you alone know how well and truly, how passionately, I loved Rowland. [Rowland started, and Grace hung her head] And oh, to think that my love was so totally ignored for Grace. Why is it that he loves her so well, I wonder? Well, well, that matters not now. It is past. I have taken my resolve. Without him life is not worth having. But not only does he not love me, but one whom at one time did, loves me not. He scorns me because—but that I will leave him to speak about if he thinks proper. [illegible]

Farewell! May Heaven have mercy [illegible]

Mrs. Danvers [illegible]

Alas! The party at Blexley House was suddenly plunged from happiness into gloom and misery.

CHAPTER VII.

Another week passed away. Search had been made in every direction for Ethel, advertisements had been scattered broadcast over the country, calling upon her in endearing terms to return.

From the time of Ethel's disappearance Mrs. Danvers had been laid upon a bed of sickness—ay, and dying, slowly but surely, of a broken heart.

One evening, or rather night, Sir Rowland and his son, Leon, and Grace with her mother, and numerous guests, were seated in the drawing-room discussing the advisability of employing the services of experienced detectives, when the footman announced that one of the gamekeepers wished to see Mr. Rowland at once.

"Show him in," said Rowland.

The man hastily entered, but no sooner had he done so, than the gun he was carrying dropped with a loud thud to the floor. He was violently agitated, and looked around at the guests with a frightened stare.

"What is it, man?" cried Rowland.

The man opened his lips but no sound issued from them.

Rowland rang the bell violently, and desired the servant to immediately bring brandy.

This was done and the man drank off a large glass. Then he said in trembling tones: "Oh, Master Rowland, do come to the lake; she is there!"

All leaped to their feet. They knew what the man meant.

"In the lake, do you mean, man?" cried Rowland, taking him by the arm.

The man nodded his head.

"How do you know?"

"I know it, sir. Oh yes, it's her, or I'm not a living man. She is floating among the weeds. She is——"

Rowland waited to hear no more. He rushed wildly from the house followed by Leon and several gentlemen.

The night was very dark, huge black clouds floated overhead, giving signs of a coming storm, the lake was in darkness, and for some moments not one of the now excited persons assembled on its banks could see any object in the water.

They were beginning to fancy that what the gamekeeper had said existed in his own imagination, when suddenly, much after the manner of a flash of lightning, the moon burst through the clouds and illuminated the lake.

Simultaneously a cry of horror escaped the lips of all present.

There, in the very centre of the lake, and in the midst of several clusters of lilies, was a white form.

The form of a female. Her face was turned upward, her hands meekly crossed upon her breast, and upon her brow was—a wreath of orange-blossoms!

It was indeed a striking and awful picture, and one which was never forgotten by those who saw it.

Leon did not wait to run round the lake for a boat, but tearing off his coat he plunged in, and shortly the body of the unfortunate girl was lying upon the bank.

As they looked at that wet form, and noticed the peaceful expression upon her face, more than one strong man burst into tears.

Leon took her in his arms and followed by the others, walked slowly to the house.

It was a mournful procession.

They were met at the entrance by Sir Rowland, who had had the forethought to tell the ladies to keep inside.

Poor old Sir Rowland saw that what the gamekeeper had said was correct, but he felt he could not look at the unfortunate Ethel, so turning his face away, he allowed them to pass in.

Pillows were brought and they laid her tenderly upon the table in the sitting-room.

They touched nothing. The wreath of orange-blossoms, which she had fixed tightly upon her brow by a small brooch on either side, they did not attempt to move.

Grace and her mother begged hard to be allowed to take one look, but they were gently but firmly denied.

Sir Rowland determined to wait until the morning before the news of the discovery of Ethel should be broken to her mother.

But when the morning dawned two persons lay dead in that house.

Mrs. Danvers had passed peacefully away in her sleep. A merciful Providence had spared her the agony of knowing that her daughter had taken her own life.

And, strange to say, this occurred on the very day that Rowland was to have led Grace to the altar.

One by one the guests sadly departed to their homes, and then the relatives and friends of Mrs. Danvers and her daughter were summoned to Blexley.

Two days after being found, an inquest was held upon Ethel, and after a most minute investigation, the jury returned the merciful verdict that "Ethel Danvers was found drowned, but how she came into the water there was no evidence to show."

Mother and daughter were laid side by side, and at this present moment there exists in Blexley Churchyard the granite tombstone upon which is recorded their names and ages, and any visitor may see it if he will slowly traverse the first gravel path after entering the gates.

* * * * * *

The marriage between Rowland and Grace was delayed twelve months, but at last Blexley was en fete, triumphal arches were erected in the roads, the bells rang a merry peal, and the lads and lasses of Blexley and the surrounding neighborhood footed it right merrily to the tunes of the spirited band from London.

And though old Sir Rowland did not join in the sports, he was none the less happy.

The one desire of his life was eventually fulfilled, and that was to live to nurse one [illegible] of his son's children. Ay, but it was more than fulfilled, for he lived to nurse [illegible] than four.

A Waif of the Ball.

'Tis only a little rosette so blue,
It might vie with the tint of a [illegible] sky;
It dropped from a dainty dancing shoe,
At a country ball in the days gone by.
'Twas one of those fanciful things, you know,
Tacked onto the shoe with a silken thread,
And perched like a bird on the wearer's toe,
As she tripped in the dance, light as fairies tread.
I had been introduced, you must understand,
And I saw there was room for another name
On the card she held in her white-gloved hand,
And I pressed for the favor ere others came.
She smiled, an approving smile, methought,
As the glance met mine of her deep blue eyes
When she turned to me, and her breath seemed fraught
With the perfume of flowers 'neath tropical skies,
As she answered me: "Yes, 'tis a galop—the last."
"I must leave you now. You will not forget?"
The next was a valse. As she glided past
There fell at my feet this small rosette—
A mere bit of ribbon—a waif of the ball;
And I hid it away, lest the loser might see
When 'twas missed from the shoe so dainty and small;
And she smiles sweet as ever—but not upon me'

THE JOURNALISTS' GRUDGE.

How a Misdirected Bounce Made a Great Difference With the "Blue-Eyed Boy of Destiny."

"What trivial circumstances sometimes change the whole course of a man's life," moralized an old New York journalist turning lazily to his companion.

"Right you are," yawned the other. "What is the matter? Are you thinking of dying; or shaving your head and doing missionary work?"

"Nothing is the matter, and I am not going to do anything absurd," rejoined the other; "but something recalled to mind this afternoon a little circumstance in the lives of two men, which started a long chain of events of the greatest consequence, completely changing the current of many careers. You have probably heard the story before, but I will tell it to you anyway."

"Go ahead."

"Sometime after the war Whitelaw Reid was knocking around looking for a good opening. He was one of those lucky war correspondents who were required by the war department or some other ruling martial authority to attach a nom de plume to everything they sent to their journals from the front. This gave to their work a personality and force that would not have otherwise attached to it, and when the war was over Mack, Reid and others were well known. Horace Greeley had seen some of Whitelaw Reid's work, and liked it. He gave the young man a situation on the Tribune. It was one of those unsettled, unsatisfactory jobs one sometimes strikes on a newspaper, and Reid was discontented. The salary was only $30 a week, and he saw no prospect of advancement. One day he went over to see John Swinton, now chief of staff on the Sun, who was then managing editor on the Times, and asked him for a job, telling him he was not getting enough to enable him to live as he wanted to live, and as he thought he ought to live. There was no place open on the Times just then, but Swinton promised to give him a show the first opportunity that was presented. Not long afterward he wrote Reid offering him work, but the latter called to say that he had been promoted and his salary increased, and that he believed he would not change. He had been promoted to do 'scrub editorial,' as the light paragraph work was called.

"At this period John Russell Young was managing editor of the Tribune and Amos Cummings city editor. Young was conceded to be one of the very best newspaper men of America, and his prospects were brilliant. Now comes the queer incident that upset everything and caused a general shaking up.

"John Russell Young sent a messenger to Amos Cummings one day with a note giving instructions about some assignment of work. At the moment the boy gave the note to Cummings the latter was telling a tramp printer, who was imploring him for a dollar that he would not give him anything.

"'Now, Amos, just gimme a dollar, this time, wont yer?' pleaded the banner-carrier.

"'I'll be d—d if I will,' responded the irascible Cummings.

"The messenger wanted to hear no more. He flew back to Young and breathlessly told him that Cummings had taken his note and then he said he 'would be d—d if he would do it.'

"Without waiting to make inquiries, Young wrote a note to Cummings discharging him peremptorily. The beheaded city editor tried to see the manager and try and get an explanation but Young would not give him a hearing and sent the curt message, "You are discharged for insubordination and profanity.'

"Years before this Cummings had saved Robert Bonner from heavy loss by fire, and the Ledger editor on that occasion had told the young man to call on him if he ever wanted a favor. Cummings gave him a call and reminded him of the circumstance.

"'What can I do for you?' asked Bonner.

"'You can give me a letter to Charles A. Dana. I want a position on the Sun.' Dana was under the very greatest obligations to Bonner, who had advanced him money to pay for his stock in the Sun. Armed with a friendly note from Bonner, Cummings called on Dana. It so happened that they were making some changes in the force at that juncture, England, the managing editor, having been put in charge of the business office, and other men moved about. 'What did you leave the Tribune for, Amos?' asked Dana.

"'I was discharged for insubordination and profanity,' was the reply.

"'I think you are just the man I want for managing editor,' said Dana, and Amos was forthwith installed in the position. A few weeks afterward the Sun published a full page [illegible] charging John Russell Young with stealing associated press dispatches and sending them to a Philadelphia paper. Young lost his place, and [illegible] Two or three years afterward [illegible] Cummings [illegible] [illegible] of the Tribune [illegible] instead of Whitelaw Reid, and that the latter would still be holding a subordinate [illegible] sort of a place on some of the New York dailies, or perhaps [illegible] never have been [illegible] against his better judgment [illegible] a candidate for president. This [illegible] tale-bearing messenger boy did more mischief in sixty seconds than a thousand men could undo in twenty years. One move of the most insignificant pawn on the board completely changed the result of the game."—New York Ledger.

It took $780,000 to settle up the affairs of the late C. J. Vanderbilt, and his brother paid most of it.

Household Hints.

Man milliners are on the increase in Europe. They are employed in all the fashionable millinery establishments of Paris and London.

A handsome tidy is made of linen scrim, with the ends fringed, or with drawn work at each end, or it may have this work and the fringe at the bottom only. Then with black etching silk work some pretty figure in the center. A vine-like border is a great addition.

A lamp-shade of pale blue may have the proper æsthetic touch given to it by running a fine wire through lace, and then bending it around the bottom of the shade so that it forms a little flounce. The lace should be about three inches deep and scant. There should be just fullness enough to make it hang gracefully.

Dr. Donald Padman, of Louisville, says: "To quiet a baby roaring with colic lay it upon its back and pat it from the neck downward over its little abdomen, taking care not to pat upward. This usually not only brings relief to the infant but to the family and the neighborhood and all young married people should have the recipe."

A lovely cushion for a gift, or to adorn your own parlor is made by embroidering a spray of old-fashioned pinks on a ground of pale blue. Around the edge of the cushion put a full puff of pale pink satin. Where the puff is joined to the blue satin sew a good-sized pink silk cord. The cushion when completed should be about half a yard long, but not quite so wide.

A handsome satin antimacassar may be made in this way: Take a piece of pale blue satin a quarter of a yard wide and one yard long. On either side sew a strip of pale pink satin six inches wide. Embroider or paint on the ends of the blue a design of morning-glories, trim the edges with lace, gather the center in scarf fashion, and when fastened to a chair spread out the ends.

To make a perfume sachet, take a piece of blue satin, a half yard long and eight inches wide; fringe the ends a quarter of a yard deep, sew the edges of the plain piece together on the wrong side, and turn carefully right side out. Take a half sheet of white wadding and place a little perfume on it, then make a roll of it large enough to fit exactly from end to end of the satin cover. Tie as tightly as possible a piece of pale blue ribbon around either end of the satin to keep it in place, and finish with bows. The side may be ornamented with painting, embroidery, or applique.

American Landed Principalities.

It is astonishing, says the Troy Times, what large farms in the United States are owned by titled Englishmen. Of individual owners there are Sir George Reed, 2,000,000 acres; Earl of Dunmore, 100,000 acres; Earl of Dunraven 60,000 acres; Duke of Sutherland, 400,000; the next largest farms are owned by Phillips, Marshall & Co., 1,300,000 acres; heirs of Col. Murphy, 4,100,000 acres; H. Disstord 12,000,000 acres; Standard Oil Company 1,000,000 acres; and scores of others. Nine men own a territory equal to that of New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island combined. Then there are great railroad corporations, whose free gifts of land from profligate Congresses amount to upward of 200,000,000 acres. Eleven of these corporations have been given 120,000,000 acres. The Northern Pacific Road has received the biggest slice, 47,000,000, and the grants have ranged all the way from 1,000,000 acres and upward.

Young Mr. Tremble, who is quite bright, was at a party one night, and he was quite well looked at by the girls before he was introduced. After the introduction he soon caught on, and was making himself very popular.—"Oh, la, Mr. Tremble," laughed Miss Mollie at one of his witty remarks, "you remind me so much of a friend of mine." "Indeed, miss," said Tremble, "in what way?" "Oh, he looked just like he hadn't a bit of sense, but when one knew him, he was just too awfully cute for any use."—Merchant and Traveler.

Killed by a Too Long Argument.

In a hearing before a fat old New Orleans French judge, Col. Grymes was compelled to listen to a speech of two days from an old Irish counselor. On the third day, when the lawyers assembled in the court were waiting for the judge, a deputy sheriff suddenly announced that the judge had that night died of apoplexy. On the lawyer's appearance in another court, with his usual stiffness and grave expression, he was questioned by his brethren as to the cause of the death of Judge P.

"He was murdered," replied the solemn old counselor.

"And by whom?" was the next query.

"By I. N.," referring to his old adversary.

"How?"

"By a two-days' argument on a peremptory exception."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

[illegible] Wheats.

The red wheats are becoming more in demand [illegible] owing to the new process of making flour by [illegible]. There are two distinct varieties, the Lancaster or bearded, a red chaffed wheat, and the velvet chaffed or early Michigan; both of the above named wheats are also called by other names in different provinces.

There is also a smooth red chaffed wheat which was extensively distributed by the agricultural department at Washington City under the name of Red Rappahannock and called by some parties Hickman red, which is of a glutinous nature and grinds like the true red wheat.

These wheats are superior to the amber wheats in this, that the flour from them makes a sweeter and stronger bread than the light, starchy amber wheat, and the flour sells alongside of the famous spring wheat flour of the Northern Pacific railroad country.

The red wheats are also good yielders to the farmer, and more reliance can be placed in the crops than those of the amber wheats.

The objection that the bearded variety is troublesome to bind is now avoided by cutting the crop with self-binding machines, and another objection that they scatter in harvesting, or that they sprout easily, could probably be overcome by more care on the part of farmers.

What Causes the Timber Line.

The causes of what is known as the timber line on high mountains continue to be discussed in scientific periodicals, and the attempt continues to connect the line in some degree with mean annual temperatures. The writer of this paragraph has had the matter in mind when on these high elevations, and the explanation seemed very simple. On all these high peaks there is a continuous, though in some cases slow, descent of the soil from the summit to the base of the hill. He has never seen a case where there was soil enough to grow a tree that trees were not growing. As the wash from rain or melting snow will be nearly uniform in a given range, there will be of necessity some uniformity in the timber line. On Mount Washington and other high places little plots of dark vegetable earth can often be found far above the present timber line, the remainder of trees which existed before the earth was washed away. What is called the timber line seldom shows graduated sizes as a mere matter of temperature would call for. Generally the line is formed of very tall trees, and immediately scrubby plants, from the absence of deep soil, begin.—Independent.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address, The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams.

The call for the seventh annual congress of the national liberal league, to be held in Milwaukee, September 21 to 23, has been issued.

The citizens of Richfield Springs have offered a purse of $1000 for a race between Hanlan and Courtney to be rowed between the 18th and 21st of September.

The Prohibitionists of Michigan have voted to raise $100,000 as a campaign fund and declared the Republican party incompetent to deal with the liquor question.

It is claimed that Hanlan promised Ross and Lee $50 each if they would outrow Courtney in the trial heat and that he paid them the money after the race.

Hanlan is defeated at last. In a regatta at Fall River, Mass., Monday, his shell was swamped by a steamboat and he came in fourth, behind Teemer, Hosmer and Ross in the order named.

The Boston Herald regards Senator Edmunds as the only Republican who can carry New York state. The 200,000 Democratic majority of last year does not augur a very bright prospect of its being carried by Senator Edmunds or any other Republican.

The telegraphers' strike is a failure. Last Friday Master Workman Campbell, of the telegraphers' brotherhood, issued a circular declaring the strike at an end and allowing the operators to make the best terms they could with the company. The Times regrets that such is the result of the strike.

The Oswego Times of last night prints a malicious letter from a Granby correspondent, who is doubtless no other than the "cheese editor" or one of his satellites, stating that Willard Johnson was ignored by Superintendent Shanahan when that gentleman was in Fulton last week. The fact is that Mr. Shanahan sent for Mr. Johnson to come and see him and to the personal knowkedge of a representative of The Times, who was a witness, the meeting between the two gentlemen was of a most cordial and friendly nature. We desire to add that this paragraph is no "inspired," but we dislike to sit by and see a respectable citizen, whoever he may be, continually and spitefully lied about and the Oswego Times in allowing its correspondents to keep up this malicious petty warfare upon decent citizens is belittleing itself in the eyes of all fair minded men.

Ex-Judge Jeremiah S. Black of Pennsylvania is dead. He was born in Glades, Somerset county, Pa., on the 10th day of January, 1810. He was admitted to the bar in 1830. In April, 1842, he was appointed a Judge in the Judicial district in which he lived, and in 1851 was elected to the Supreme Court of Pensylvania, of which he was chosen Chief Justice. He was re-elected in 1854. In 1857 he was appointed Attorney General of the United States by President Buchanan, and in 1860 was made Secretary of State, remaining in the Cabinet until the close of Buchanan's administration. This was the last political office held by him, but his sound opinions on the leading questions of the day were sought by his party whenever a crisis arose in the Democratic ranks. Probably no other man was held in greater esteem by men of all shades of political opinion. The Salmon Fishways.

Fishermen will be pleased to learn that preparations are being made to put a system of fishways over the dams of the Oswego, Oneida and Seneca rivers. Two weeks ago The Times recorded the preliminary surveys by State Surveyors Stuart, Whitford and Richmond, who reported the result of their labors through State Engineer Seymour to Superintendent of Public Works, James Shanahan. Last Thursday, Superintendent Shanahan, accompanied by a representative of the United States Fish Commission, J. V. Simmons of West Virginia and a party of gentlemen from Oswego passed through Fulton on a tour of inspection of the dams of the Oswego and Seneca rivers. Mr. Shanahan said that to complete the system it would be necessary to put fishways over the following dams: Oswego river—High dam, 12 feet; Oswego dam, 12 feet; Minetto dam, 11¾ feet; Van Buren dam, 12½ feet; Fulton dam, 10¼ feet; Oswego Falls, 10 feet, Phœnix dam, 12 feet. Oneida river—Oak Orchard dam, 5 feet. Seneca river—Baldwinsville dam, 13 feet.

Chapter 308 of the laws of 1883 re-enacted chapter 252, 1880, which appropriated $5,000 for the construction of three fishways on the Oswego river, and provided for the letting of the contract and the supervision of the work by the Superintendent of Public Works. The enactment of 1883 also made it his duty to see that the work was done and it is not likely that the money appropriated for this purpose will again be allowed to lapse into the State Treasury in consequence of the non-fulfillment of the law. Superintendent Shanahan has taken preliminary action under the law, and the work will probably be prosecuted by the McDonald fishway Company of Lynchburg, Va., who, it is said, have agreed to do it within the appropriation.

Last Friday's Syracuse Journal says that Superintendent Shanahan and J. V. Simmons met in Syracuse after a thorough examination of the State dams and concluded that fishways must be put over seven dams to make the system effective. Mr. Simmons said this could not be done within the appropriation but thought four of them could be put in consequently those nearest Oswego will be first attended to. Superintendent Shanahan thought the Legislature would not hesitate to appropriate money enough to complete the work another year.

A wasp went buzzing to his work
And various things did tackle,
He stung a boy, and then a dog;
Then made a rooster cackle.
At last upon a drummer's cheek
He settled down to drill;
He prodded there for half an hour,
And then he broke his drill.

[Phœnix Register.

The Albany Argus says that Solomon Ostrander, father of W. H. Ostrander, who was hanged in Utica, formerly lived at Mechanicsville, and was a brother of George L. Ostrander, who emigrated west thirty years ago, and was hanged at Alton, Ill., for killing a railroad track hand in a gang he was overseeing.

"Printers on a racket!" This inscription appeared on the door of our office the other day (somebody was libelous enough to change the last word to drunk!) when all went off to Pleasant Point on Thursday afternoon and had a most enjoyable picnic. * * * Drunk!—Good people, especially printers, must expect to have mean things said of them.

[Mexico Independent.

The city of Oswego is a very poor city. The assessors valuation of the personal estate of that city, liable to taxation, is only $425,230; $15,816 less than last year. Bad showing for a city like Oswego. Only think, all the wealthy men, banks, bankers, manufacturing establishments in that city foot up in personal subject to taxation only $325.230. Poor indeed, and growing beautifully less.

[Hannibal News.

Ostrander was the twelfth man that has been hung upon the gallows used for his execution at Utica. They are as follows: Eaker, at Fonda; Fralick, at Syracuse; Bresnahan and Van Dyke, at Canton; Hiram Smith, at Watertown; a tramp murderer at Malone; Lindsly and Nathan Orlando Greenfield, at Syracuse; Felix McCann, at Norwich; Sam Steenburg, at Fonda, Edward Earl, at Sageville, Hamilton county.

A Mysterious Duel.

A duel was lately fought in Texas by Alexander Shott and John S. Nott. Nott was shot and Shott was not. In this case it is better to be Shott than Nott. There was a rumor that Shott was not shot, and Shott avows that he shot Nott, which proves either that the shot Shott shot at Nott was not shot, or that Nott was shot notwithstanding. Circumstantial evidence is not always good. It may be made to appear on the trail that the shot Shott shot, shot Nott; or, as accidents with fire arms are frequent, it may be possible that the shot Shott shot, shot Shott himself, when the whole affair would resolve itself into its original element, and Shott would be shot and Nott would be not. But we think, however, that the shot Shott shot, shot not Shott, but Nott; anyway it is hard to tell who was shot.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

The condition of affairs in the cheese market Monday was very unfavorable. There were fifteen factories registered, offering about 1,800 boxes of cheese, most which were sold on private terms. Two lots were sold at the ruling price of 9 cents, and two lots at 9¼ cents; although the offering was light, the cheese sold pretty well.

AT UTICA.

The market for cheese Monday was rather dull. Sales were about 800 less than last week, and again only five and six days' cheese were sold. There is a determination not to overstock the market, as it is beleived that the cheese will all be wanted sooner or later. Transactions for the day are as follows: 150 boxes at 8c.; and 280 at 8⅛c., both partly skimmed; 1,109, in nine lots, at 8¾c.; 50, at 8⅞c.; 6,696, in 57 lots, at 9c.; 544, in 5 lots, at 9⅛c.; 923 in ten lots at 9¼c.; 391 in three lots, at p. t. Sales of 10,218 boxes; commission 1,530 boxes; total, 11,748 boxes. Ruling price 9c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The cheese market Monday was not very brisk. Some could see no profit in cheese at the rates paid and bought but very little; others appeared confident and took the goods freely. Quite a number of factories [illegible]

[illegible] news, [illegible] pending all his alleged ability and wit in an attempt to belittle Mr. Warren G. Wheeler of The Fulton Times. A few days since he sent a malicious statement to the Oswego Times concerning an appointment which the correspondent alleged Mr. Wheeler had received at the hands of Congressman-elect, Nutting. The item as published was inaccurate and the correspondent knew it was inaccurate and wrote it in a spirit of pure malice. The editor of the Watertown Times saw the item in the Oswego Times and unwittingly made mention of the matter in the columns of his own excellent journal. In turn the Oswego Palladium copied the item from the Watertown Times and doubtless did so in anything but a spirit of malevolence. This, however, gave the "combination" their opportunity, for, be it known, the homœpathic member of the combination looks after the "Fulton items" for the Oswego Falls Observer, so this enterprising busybody wrote a new paragraph, basing his information upon the Watertown Times item, but which hardly bore a shade of resemblance to the Watertown Times item and comprised a mere twaddle which was born entirely of his own maliciousness and his greatest desire was that it should have the effect of placing Mr. Wheeler in the most ridiculous possible light before the public. This paragraph he caused to be printed in the Observer. Now, we do not suppose that a great many people saw it in the columns of our obscure contemporary so to cap the climax and to give the paragraph as wide a circulation as the limited resources of the combination made it possible for him to do, this virtuent would-be facetious newsmonger sent the paragraph as it was printed in the Observer, to last Saturday's Oswego Times, thus forcing the poor Observer to shoulder the obluquy of falsehood and to bear the brunt of a spiteful personal attack.

That Mr. Wheeler is "telling around" what this statement alleges that it is, is a bare-faced lie. And when this correspondent says that he learned this piece of alleged news from the Watertown Times he lies again, because it was he who first sent the item adrift in the columns of the Oswego Times.

From the Oswego Times we can expect nothing better, as it is so in the habit of maligning people for whom it has a personal dislike that it should allow its correspondents to make malicious personal attacks upon decent and worthy citizens is not strange. But to the editor of the Observer, who is comparatively a stranger in Fulton and Oswego Falls we desire to address a few words of friendly admonition, for it is evident, that like poor dog Tray, he has fallen into bad company. If you must employ this homœpathic Mother Grundy member of the combination to edit your Fulton news, would it not be advisable to insist that she shall devote her attention exclusively to the gathering legitimate and fresh news and not allow her to purloin it from Fulton or other papers.

Last Friday the Observer printed 21 news paragraphs under the caption of "Fulton items." Of these 11 had appeared in one form or another in The Times on the previous Wednesday. Under the heading of "local brevities," the Observer printed 25 news paragraphs and the news contained in eight of them was published in The Times of Wednesday the same week. Besides these there were fourteen other items of local import in the Observer, and The Fulton Times records the news told in three of them on Wednesday. But six of these fourteen items were original with the Observer, eight having been taken from other papers. There was quite a number of paragraphs in the correspondence from neighboring towns in last week's Times that are essentially the same in the Observer of Friday.

Last Wednesday The Fulton Times printed 94 paragraphs of local news. Of these 30 had been printed before, but not more than a dozen of this number had appeared in any form in a weekly newspaper. That daily newspapers should sometimes head us off is not strange, as they have six opportunities to our one of printing the news. But in the majority of cases reporters of The Times are informed of news items as soon as were the correspondents of the dailies.

Comparisons are sometimes odious, but we desire to ask the public if it is not rather small business for an editor who "issues as large a paper as is published in Oswego county" to print but 23 items of fresh local news and in the same edition of his paper publish a virulent personal attack upon a brother editor. And what kind of a showing is this in the face of the [illegible] the columns of the Observer [illegible] the papers [illegible] [illegible]

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used, Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your bitters."

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance

The following letters tell their own story.

"Valdosta, Georgia, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"Clinton, Iowa, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * *. By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case. Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

Last week a TIMES representative met C. T. Brockway of Mexico, who managed the "boat race" at Fulton, and that gentleman virtually admitted that Fulton "race" could be considered but little better than an exhibition. He said that his party took about 800 out of the town and that he was satisfied.

Mutual invitations have been extended and accepted by the officers of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches for the Baptist congregation to attend the Presbyterian church during the last two weeks in August, and for the Presbyterian congregation to attend the Baptist church during the first two weeks in September.

Sullivan got him out; a few minutes later Montague found a pocket book under the table which he handed over to Sullivan, who examined it and found no money in it, whereupon he asked Rafferty if he had lost any money. Rafferty examined his pockets and exclaimed: "I'm a thoroughbred! What do I care for three or four dollars."

Upon regaining his sobriety Rafferty claimed he had lost $16.25 and had Sullivan arrested for stealing it. While being cross-examined Levi became apprehensive that an attempt was being made to fasten the crime upon him, and he vigorously protestnd: "I am no thief! I didn't take his money!" etc. After hearing the evidence the justice discharged the prisoner.

ABLY DEFENDED.

At 3:30 Mary L. Hatch was brought before Justice Rice on complaint of John Howe for poisoning chickens. Alonzo L. Hatch, an employee of THE TIMES, and who is a son of the defendent, appeared as counsel for her and so ably did he act his part that after a short trial she was discharged. In fact, Mr. Hatch remarked afterward that he considered the complainant's case so weak that he did not really have an opportunity of displaying his legal ability.

A RUSTY REVOLVER.

Gardner Perry went to Charles Van Buren's house Monday afternoon to see his sister, who is Van Buren's wife and Perry on going into a room where Van Buren was, was ordered to leave the premises. Perry refused to do so, whereupon Van Buren threatened to shoot Perry and attempted to adjust a rusty revolver, which went off and VanBuren was shot through the hand. Yesterday on complaint of Van buren. Perry was arrested and brought before Justice Rice on a charge of assault and battery. After hearing the evidence Justice Rice discharged the prisoner.

Captain Edward Scouton, a Fulton boatman, claims that he saw a snake 30 feet long and twelve or fifteen inches through the body, in the Seneca river, near New Bridge, the other day.

Skippers who have really seen the sea serpent will laugh at the Seneca river story. The captain of a lumber scow and his son maintain that they descried the monster, 30 feet long, with a head the size of a two year old heifer. Now, this was evidently an eel. The genuine sea serpent is several hundred feet long, with eyes as big as saucers and a head as big as a barrel. [New York Sun.

A. Hall, Fred A. Emerick.

Fair Ground Sports.

There was a game of base ball and a foot race on the Oswego Falls fair grounds last Saturday. The base ball game was between the Oswego Falls Reading Room club and a picked nine from Fulton. All but one or two members of the Fulton nine had not played before for several years and their playing evinced a decided lack of practice. In fact the errors of the Fulton nine demoralized the Oswego Falls boys and in a game of five innings, lasting from 4 o'clock to 7, a score of 18 to 11 was made, the Oswego Falls club winning. The score by inning was as follows:

Fulton	0	2	6	3	0	—11
Oswego Falls	4	7	3	0	4	—18

Previous to the game Ed. Waugh caught a ball in one of his eyes which completely closed that useful member.

At about 5 o'clock occurred a 100 yard dash between Moses Tyning and Charles Jones, in which Jones won with ease, coming in six yards ahead. Time—11 seconds. The race was for a purse of $50, and considerable interest was manifested from the fact that quite a rivalry existed between the two men and their friends as to their respective merits.

[illegible] in town yesterday, [illegible] of Mr. L. G. Curtis.

[illegible] is visiting in Fulton and [illegible] [Chicago [illegible]

[illegible] has been engaged as instructor of the South [illegible] band.

Prof. Flick of Hamilton College will occupy the the Presbyterian pulpit next Sunday.

The congregations at Zion church were large both morning and evening last Sunday.

The topic of Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien's discourse at Zion Sunday evening will be "The Meek."

Mrs. H. K. Cornell and daughters, Misses Louise and Grace, spent the day in Fulton yesterday.

The health of Mrs. Hanna Schenck has not improved and but little hope is entertained of her recovery.

A six-year-old daughter of Daniel Hennessy of Oswego Falls, broke her leg last Friday, while playing in the yard.

Misses Allie Case, Bertha Lee and Carrie Jennings have returned from an extended sojourn on the shores of Canandaigua lake.

John Stevenson, who has been engaged in railroading in Ohio for a number of years, has returned to his home in Oswego Falls.

The premium list of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society is out. The fair occurs Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 25, 26, 27.

Last week C. W. Streeter bought the house which was formerly the property of Joseph Yorker. Mr. Streeter will immediately renovate, repair and move into it.

Fifty widows, who are members of the Fulton Methodist church, gave $250 toward the support of the church during the last quarter or one-fifth of the entire contributions.

Isaac Darrow and family, Frank Darrow and wife, James Waugh and family, Amos Youmans and family, and Frank Croak and wife are camping out for a week on VanBuren's Island.

A sportsman's club was organized in Oswego Falls Saturday night, with Newton Johnson as president, and Charles Dexter as secretary and treasurer. About fifteen members were enrolled and a large number have signified their intention of joining at an early day. This evening the club will meet and a name will be selected. A number of new guns, a trap and 600 glass balls have been purchased.

Last week G. H. Fassell erected a handsome cottage monument standing nine feet in height over the grave of Clarence H. Howland, who was killed by an explosion May 1. The monument is of the finest quality of Eureka marble and rests upon three bases. The tablets are raised and the plinth is beautifully chased. It is surrounded by a molded gothic cap and urn. The monument is a decided addition to Mount Adnah.

The school in lower Oswego Falls opens next Monday with J. F. Cooper as principal, Miss Carrie Willard as instructor in the primary department and Miss Frankie Connor as assistant. The school has been under the supervision of Mr. Cooper for the past year and a half, and the patrons are highly gratified with the progress which their children have made. The instructors will spare no pains to make the school one of the best in the vicinity.

The Oswego Falls Board of Trustees met Friday evening and the office of Street Commissioner was declared vacant, because John McCarthy, who was recently appointed to that office, had not filed a certificate of his sureties with the Clerk of the Board. McCarthy was reappointed and has complied with all the legal requirements. The board passed a resolution providing that bids should be received for the building of a new bridge over the creek crossing the road at the tannery at lower Oswego Falls.

Go to Robinson & Langdon's and get some of that LINCOLN BAKING POWDER. It is put up [illegible] and you get a Butter Dish, Sugar Bowl or some other piece of Glassware without extra charge. 14t4 [illegible] Denver [illegible] along the Arkansas [illegible] in which [illegible] these [illegible] of the [illegible] of the old dwellings of the natives still further south. [illegible] the Mexicans we pass [illegible] brick structures, street railroads, extensive smelting works and finally to the greatest steel manufactory in the South-west. Here are hundreds of men running blast furnaces, puddling fires and making steel after the Bessemer process. The rails for Denver & Rio Grande Road are made here. This city has an assured future which is more than can be said of places of ambitious names in this state. Off once more, along the waters of the Arkansas, we halt at noon at Canon City, where a most delightful reception is accorded us at the hands of the ladies. We march to the estate of Ex-Governor Rudd and in his orchard are treated to a fine spread, served by young misses who have for the nonce dressed in white and wear on their sashes the names of the thirty-eight States of the Union. I was told that this was the only apple orchard in the State. It certainly was the only one I saw. The yield of fruit was enormous, but it seemed not a little strange to see streams of water running through the orchard. It is simply the familiar irrigation. The trees in eight years had reached the height of grown trees, but they didn't have the sturdy, substantial look of our northern slow growing ones.

The whole heartedness of the reception was conspicuous. Men ran out and passed boxes of cigars along the line and with bands of music to enliven the march we found our visit exceedingly pleasant. Here is located the State Prison, past which we went to a fine mineral spring whose waters were, as usual, sampled. Minneral springs are a peculiarity of this section and just across the river is a hot one whose waters stand at about 100 deg. Farenheit. We took the cars just in time to escape a terrible storm which for a few moments raged with great fury; but the force of the storm had been spent further on among the mountains. This was evident in the rapidly rising river and in the great amount of debris floating down past as we were entering the famous canon of the Arkansas, called the Royal Gorge, we were brought to a stop, to wait, we were told, for the train from Utah. It was this stop and its cause that gave rise to the cruel canard which carried consternation into so many homes throughout the country. The storm had forced down upon the track, in one of the narrowest places, an enormous rock. To chip off pieces from this and to move out the railroad track a foot or more demanded several hours of time and we had to wait. What was telegraphed would doubtless have been true had we run upon the rock. All things have an end. So did our waiting. The entrance reminds one forcibly of the celebrated Delaware Water Gap. But soon comparisons are idle. Every man is at a window or upon the platform. Cinders are disregarded as we sweep along in this marvelous moutain path. Water gap upon water gap would not equal the dizzy heights up where almost perpendicular sides, we crane our heads to look. Wonder succeeds wonder, till at last the train halts just after passing a bridge which, from inverted V's, is suspended over the stream lengthwise. Here the conductor says "the rocks above you are twenty-five hundred feet above the bed of the stream and the workmen first obtained a foot hold by being suspended over the precipice and were let down to this point." The place was simultaneously named "Oh!" For miles along this gorge the road bed is simply a narrow cut hewed out of the solid rock itself, a very coarse granite whose feedspar is a bright red. It is evident that we cannot reach Gunnison to-night, and at Salida the final halt is made. Rooms and food are the great objects of quest. The "Monte Christo" is neat and modern and is soon filled. The "Virginia" is fair and is more than full, ten men sleep, or try to, in a small bed room. In the bar room, bullet holes in the plastering and a broken stove tell of the amusement of the citizens. The bar tender says he wouldn't stand behind the bar without a shot gun at hand, for the fee simple of half the village. In the last three years over twenty men have died in their boots here, and one of the constables keeps a hell where he fleeces unwary strangers if he can and arrests him if he shows fight. It is to be a railroad center and has a future. Just now it is a trifle too volcanic. In the morning early we are off again and are soon climbing the sides of the mountain leading to the Marshall Pass. Up, up we ride, one track rising above the other till at the Pass we are 10,725 feet above the sea and below us we can see four lines of [illegible] that have led to this [illegible] place. The engineer who [illegible] this and first rode here [illegible] than did Hannibal when he led his troops over the Alps. [illegible] This is a triumph of [illegible]

[illegible] Again downward and we go [illegible] into the famous South Park; across it and we stop for supper at Buena Vista. Again upward we go and at 10 p. m. we are 10,200 feet above the sea and in Leadville. A whole letter should be given to this town. Gambling is as open as the selling of groceries selling in Fulton. Back of several tables I see these words "This game is backed by John C. Morgan, president of the Board of Trade." Whole streets of vacant houses proclaim what has been and what is. In the morn I look from the "Clarendon" window to the hills apparently just at my level and great banks of snow greet my eye. Coal fires are in order the year around. Our cars are thus heated as we go away. Foot racing is not popular nor possible here. You can't walk rapidly and sing "Marching through Georgia" at the same time. Teams of four mules each, draw vast quantities of ore through the streets to the smelters and to the cars. Failing this, the city would quickly slide down into the valley. Should you get shaved here you will pay twenty-five cents for it and your breakfast you will remember a long time more on account of what you wanted and didn't get than for what you really had. Unless they have peculiarly close dishes, potatoes can't be boiled here since the rarity of the air admits of the entire escape of the water into steam before it is hot enough to cook the food. Down we go again to Buena Vista, thence across South Park, fifty miles and we begin to ascend once more. One carries away a most delightful memory of this Park. Entirely surrounded by mountains it is a level, fertile plain 9,500 feet above the sea. One ranchman has in eight years cleared $40,000 on his stock. At Como, we pause for dinner, and get a good one. Finally we began the descent of the Platte Cannon. This is grand, but as one of our party tersely expressed it, "It is not quite so gorgeous as the Royal Gorge." Wednesday night found us back in Denver, dusty, tired; but filled with most thrilling recollections of one of the most remarkable excursions that a man can make in this world. Hereafter, all mountain scenery must be tame. Were this to assure Colorado prosperity, her future would outshine all her sister States. But man cannot live upon scenery. Her deserted mining camps, her ariel plains

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

SULPHUR BITTERS

[illegible] With the compounding system of railways, already about 1,000 miles in length, the navigation for the Ganges for steamers now extended to Cawnpoor, with a canal 350 miles long, making navigation possible to Hardwar, 1,300 miles from the sea, the farmers of Northern India will soon have ample and cheap transportation facilities to enable them to get their surplus wheat into European markets. If, with these advantages and a climate not subject to extremes of cold, the rude methods of Indian agriculture were replaced by more modern systems, India could easily become a formidable competitor with America in the world's wheat markets.

But the most significant fact for the consideration of American wheat growers, who imagine that they can always control the foreign wheat markets, is the result of some recent experiments made in England to test the qualities of Indian wheat. In October last the Secretary of State for India instructed a milling firm of London to institute a series of experiments to ascertain how far Indian wheats compared as to the yield and the quality of flour with American and other supplies. The London Economist of the 9th ult. gives a complete and detailed account of the result of these tests. In the experiments four varieties of Indian wheat, American winter and spring and California varieties, two kinds of Russian and Turkish, and one of English, Australian and New Zealand, were experimented on. The result is thus stated: "The unprecedented yields of flour, as shown by these (four Indian) wheats, ranging (by ordinary grinding) from 77.46 to 80.52 per cent., against English 65.2 and American spring 72.2, speak volumes in their favor, and their value is still further increased by another point of merit of almost equal importance—viz., a larger percentage of bread may be obtained than from any other of the flours included in this review." Two hundred and eighty pounds of Indian flour yielded on the average 366 pounds of bread; the same weight of California flour, 364; American winter wheat flour, 346, and spring wheat flour, 354. While the quality of the bread made from American flour seems to have been in some respects superior, the great dryness and soundness of the Indian wheats "render them invaluable," it is said, "for admixture with English wheats that are in any degree out of condition through moisture." If American wheat is to maintain its hold on European markets against the competition likely to be soon developed by its Eastern rival it will be necessary to extend our system of free canals and to rid our farmers of all unnecessary burdens now imposed on them.

Comp tition.

Competition is the cause of all progress; it is the great force of industrial activity, the source of our power. But it is productive of an endless agitation, of permanent uneasiness and of general instability. No one is satisfied with his lot, no one feels secure as to his future. The rich burn to acquire greater riches, and he who labors fears the loss of his daily bread. Every man is free, and all fulfill their destiny; there is no class set apart, no inaccessible trade; equality is legally established, but in point of fact inequality exists, and is the more irritating because every man may aspire to all. There are more bitter awakenings, as more lofty dreams are indulged in. All may climb to the highest step on the ladder, but few reach it, and those who remain below curse those who are above them while coveting their place. Men formerly were not worried by the wish for change, because they saw no means of getting it. They were possessed of no ambition to change their state, nor of any thirst for riches; for all this was beyond their reach. Their lot in this world was fixed, and their hopes were for the next. Now they desire happiness for this present life and aim at destroying all that may prove an obstacle to the equal distribution of earthly joys. We must not forget that there are many reasons why men of the present day should pursue wealth with much greater ardor than formerly. In the first place, it can procure them many more enjoyments than at the period we speak of—home comforts and luxuries of every kind, the pleasure of traveling all over the world, summers passed in charming Alpine resorts, and winters on the enchanting coasts of the Mediterranean—all this has replaced the monotonous existence of the feudal baron, who could only spend his superfluous revenues in entertaining his subordinates. At the present time the old feeling of good will between masters and servants, landlords and their tenants, has wholly disappeared. The proprietor and capitalist now look only to the increase of their revenue, and in this they conform to the principle of orthodox political economy, for the greater greed with which riches are individually pursued must result in the rapid spread of general wealth. On the other hand, tenants and workmen of all classes are becoming daily more convinced of the truth of the terrible adage, "Our master is our enemy." The class-struggle which has broken out in Ireland in all its horror is at present an exception; but the sentiments which gave it birth are to be found fermenting in the breasts of nearly every rural population. In the country villages of Russia, Germany, Spain, Austria and Italy are to be heard only words of sorrow, hatred and revolt.—Contemporary Review.

Osculation Extraordinary.

A rather strange incident occurred in a yard at Norwich a few days ago. [illegible]

[illegible] the cheap literature [illegible] deals with the commonplace of the poorly fanciful adventures of persons in their own rank. There are wild, cheap novels, in which the heroes are noble-hearted burglars, and there is a kind of converted penny dreadful, for family reading, in which adventures, stolen wills, wicked guardians and the like abound, while a general air of evangelical piety prevails among the virtuous heroes and heroines. In these classes of cheap literature there is a lack of humor which may be felt, and an entire absence of diverting dialect and of well drawn and discriminated character. The whole interest turns either on crime or on the sudden acquisition of fortune by the lowly but virtuous. A successful claimant, who has been left as a child on the steps of a work-house, and has developed into an exemplary and Bible-loving maid-of-all-work, is the favorite heroine of the converted penny dreadful. Her lover is a wicked Baronet, who, like King Easter and King Wester in the ballad, loves her "for her land" and "for her fee," which he is aware that she is to possess, while a young man of the class of Sam Gerridge is a disinterested and finally successful adorer. The close of the novel leaves the happy pair in the enjoyment of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice. This sort of cheap literature is not positively harmful, but it encourages the eternal day-dream of the poor—the hope of sudden wealth coming in from some unexpected quarter, the expectation of impossible uncles from Australia and San Francisco. These dreams are preferred to all the human art and pathos of really good novels which require some disinterestedness, some fancy, and some education in the reader. It is probable, however, that Dickens is still immensely popular with many of the class that absorbs cheap literature.—Saturday Review.

The Use of a Dry Well.

There are certain household wastes which can not be fed to the poultry or pigs, can not be burned, and will not decay on the compost heap. These, in a country place, where the cart of the city scavenger is unknown, will accumulate. The articles we refer to are old fruit cans; tinware, past mending; saucepans, which a crack has rendered useless; old bottles and leaky stoneware jugs and jars. These and others will accumulate, and a proper regard for neatness forbids following a too common custom of throwing them into the road. If a rubbish heap is established in an out of the way place, enterprising boys will find it and scatter its accumulations. There is but one effective way to dispose of rubbish of this description—bury it. A dry well is a useful adjunct to every neatly kept country place, be it large or small. In an out of the way corner dig a well or pit, cover it with pieces of plank too heavy for children to remove, and drop into this all kinds of indestructible rubbish. When this well, which need be but a few feet deep, is partly filled, dig another near by, using the earth taken out to cover the rubbish in well number one. This effectually disposes of the unsightly accumulations of rubbish, while the amount of labor required is not large, and the incidental drainage afforded may be beneficial.

Skeptics and Electric Railways.

The foremost electricians do not predict that electricity will immediately supersede steam as the motive power for the railways of the country, but they do assert that its introduction on the elevated railways of New York and on such short lines as those which run to Coney Island is likely to be soon effected. There are some skeptics who say that because electric motors are not already in use the inventors have failed to solve the problem undertaken by them. Let those skeptical persons remember their predictions that the electric light would never be introduced to common use, and yet its progress has been steady in all parts of the world. Mr. Edison's success in the down-town district which he now illuminates in New York is unmistakable, and there is no room to doubt that nearly the whole city will be illuminated by electricity almost exclusively within a few years. There has been much progress in the adaptation of electricity for use on railways, and the construction of a tunnel under the Thames in London, for a railway to use electric motive power, is an example to show what is being done. The skeptics may expect to see electricity take the place of steam on the elevated railways of our city within a very few years.—New York Mail and Express.

A Short Sermon to Young Ladies.

Ladies—caged birds of beautiful plumage but sickly looks; pale pets of the parlor, who vegetate in unhealthy atmosphere, like the potato germinating in a dark cellar—why do you not go into the open air and warm sunshine and add luster to your eyes, bloom to your cheeks, elasticity to your steps, and vigor to your frames? Take exercise; run up the hill on a wager, and down again for fun; roam the fields, climb the fences, leap the ditches, wade the brooks, and, after a day of exhilarating exercise and unrestrained liberty, go home with an appetite acquired by healthy enjoyment. The beautiful and blooming young lady—rosy-cheeked and bright-eyed—who can darn a stocking, mend her own frock, command a regiment of pots and kettles, and be a lady when required, is a girl that young men are in quest of for a wife. But you pining, screwed-up, wasp-waisted, doll-dressed, consumption-mortgaged, [illegible] daughters [illegible]

[illegible] HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,

SARAH C. WHITTIER.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skillfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics. Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 10,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind. It but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfillment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

The obelisk is built of Quincy granite, the finest and most durable in the world. No expense has been spared, and there is no better finished piece of work in any cemetery. The engraving of the letters cost $300 alone. Daniel Murphy, who erected the obelisk and caused the inscription to be put upon it, lives in simple style on the northwest corner of Madison and New Chamber streets, this city. He is worth $300,000, and occupies the first floor of a double-apartment house, which he owns. He is seventy-three years old, and was stricken with blindness two years ago, after a severe attack of Bright's disease. He came to this country in 1832, and worked as a farm hand in New Jersey, receiving $8 a month and his board.

"The inscription on the coping is my own," he said. "I want the obelisk to outlast the British monarchy. For the government of England I have nothing but undying hate, instilled in me by successive generations."

"Is it merely a matter of patriotism?"

"No. The estates of my ancestors in the County Wexford were confiscated during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, because they would not renounce their religion. A vast fortune was taken from them, and that great wrong, together with my patriotism, induced me to erect the obelisk."

"What will it cost?"

"I have already spent $24,800 upon it and shall expend more. I do not mind the money and am ready to give $50,000 in cash to the leaders of any formidable and legitimate movement that is inaugurated against England in the cause of Ireland."—N. Y. World.

A Hard-Working Millionaire.

Orrin Gowell, a large owner in the Manzanita hydraulic mine at this city, says the Nevada (Cal.) Enterprise, is worth in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. He owns considerable valuable property at San Jose and has a palatial home at Fruitvale. He spends several months of each year in Neva City, and is one of the most industrious men on the coast. He dresses as commonly as does the humblest laborer in his employ, and no man around the mine gets to his work so early in the morning, or stays so late at night as he. He doesn't stand with his hands in his pockets like some superintendents and foremen that we know of, but with pick or shovel puts in as many "licks" in a day as though his situation depended upon the industry he displayed. A few evenings since a friend was rallying him good naturedly on his lack of "style," when he laughed heartily and said that it was sometimes a source of much amusement to him. "One day last summer," said he, "I was doing some work near my house at Fruitvale when an Irishman came along the street and, seeing me there, jammed his face against the pickets of the fence and called out cautiously: 'Soy, Pat, can't yees ship into the kitchen widout missus seein' o yees and git me a bit of bread?' The poor fellow looked hungry and honest, and I went in and got him some of the best the cook could give me. When I brought it out he was the most grateful man you ever saw, and congratulated me on my shrewdness in making such a good haul without being caught and losing my place."

One of the Sharp Contrasts to be Met With in Life.

In this land of beauty, as I swung in an easy hammock that swayed in the profound shadow of a Norway maple this long, dreamy afternoon of perfect June, I was and am the happiest man in all the land of free America. I was and am at peace with all mankind, and, better still, with all womankind. I held my hand full of luscious cherries, and in my excess of comfort I thought with tenderest sympathy of the people sweltering in the cities. How happy I was! And how grateful! For I was blessed in basket and in store; in my coming in and in my going out; I was blessed in the fruit of my ground, for the robins and Robbie had left me, of all the trees, a whole handful of cherries. My enemies that came out against me in one way had fled before me seven ways; at least they would if I had any. I was blessed in all that I set my hand unto, even to knocking down the mud wasp's nest in the bath-room, for the wasp himself came out of one end while I was poking in the other, and blessed me for that. The heaven had given me rain in season. I had nothing to pay, and twice as much to pay it with. "My days have been of gold, my nights of silver," and what more could I ask, and why shouldn't I be happy and glad and grateful?

And just then a nest of caterpillars in the maple broke loose and came down squirming and wriggling all over me, from the nut-brown locks that clustered lovingly about my brow of marble clear down to my daintily slippered feet (the caterpillars, not the curls) the hammock "run down by the head" and laid me out on a brick and an inverted garden-rake that I didn't know was there. I rolled over on the cherries and mashed every one of them as flat as postage stamps. A lurking tramp of a rain-cloud broke all to pieces right over the maple, and chased me into the house and ruined my new white hat that I left in the tree, so full of water that it isn't dry yet, although it has changed shape and taken on a new, but not attractive, crushed nutmeg melon color, and as I rushed up the porch steps I trod on the cat, and fell over a chair, breaking its spine and abrading, as it were, every tibia I have to my name, to wit, two, one on each leg. "Man never is, but always to be blest." —R. J. Burdette, in Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Connecticut youngster whose emotions were aroused by the glowing periods of a Fourth of July address, delivered with flashing eyes the following patriotic sentiment: "Oh, if the British lion's tail were only longer, how I would tread on it."

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

The Old Reading Class.

WILL CARLETON.

I can not tell you Genevieve, how oft it comes to me—
That rather young old reading class in District Number Three,
That row of elocutionists who stood so straight in line,
And charged at standard literature with amiable design.
We did spare the energy in which our words were clad
We gave the meaning of the text by all the light we had;
But still I fear the ones who wrote the lines we read so free
Would scarce have recognized their work in District Number Three.

Outside the snow was smooth and deep, the winter's thick laid dust
The storm it made the windows speak at every sudden gust;
Bright sleigh bells threw us pleasant words when travelers would pass;
The maple-trees along the road stood shivering in their class;
Beyond the white browed cottages the woods were cold and dumb
And far away the mighty world was beckoning us to come
The wondrous world of which we'd learned what had been and might be,
In the old fashion reading class of District Number Three.

We took a hand at history—its battles, sieges and flames—
And uniformly mispronounced the most important names;
We wandered through Biography, and gave our fancy play,
And with some subjects fell in love—"good only for one day;"
In Romance and Philosophy we settled many a point,
And made what poems we assailed to creak at every joint;
And many authors that we love you with me will agree,
Were first time introduced to us in District Number Three.

You recollect Susanna Smith, the teacher's sore distress,
Who never stopped at any pause—a sort of day express?
And timid young Sylvester Jones, of inconsistent sight,
Who stumbled on the easy words and read the hard ones right?
And Jennie Green, whose doleful voice was always clothed in black?
And Samuel Hicks, whose tones in most the plastering all to crack?
And Andrew Tubbs, whose various mouths were quite a sight to see,
Alas! we cannot find them now in District Number Three.

And Jasper Jenks, whose tears would flow at each pathetic word
(He's in the prize fight business now, and hits them hard, I've heard);
And Benny Bayne, whose every tongue he murmured as in fear
(His tongue is not so timid now; he is an auctioneer;)
And Lantie Wood whose voice was just endeavouring hard to change,
And leaped from hoarse to fiercely shrill with most surprising range;
Also his sister Mary Jane, so full of prudish glee,
Alas! they're both in higher schools than District Number Three.

So back these various voices come, though long the years have grown,
And sound uncommonly distinct through Memory's telephone;
And some are full of melody, and bring a sense of cheer,
And some can smite the rock of time, and summon forth a tear;
But one sweet voice comes back to me, whenever sad I grieve,
And sing a song, and that is yours, O peerless Genevieve!
It brightens up the olden times, and throws a smile at me—
A silver star amid the clouds of District Number Three.

[Harper's Magazine.

HIS BABY WAS DEAD.

The jolly conductor had been lying off for a few days on account of sickness at home, but one day he appeared on his train looking pale, and the brakeman who had run with him for years knew that the conductor's mind was away at the bedside of his sick baby. With punch in his hand and his heart in his throat the conductor entered the smoking car and said: "Tickets," in a voice not at all like its usual sound. It was more like an appeal to his Heavenly Father to watch over the baby at home.

Four drummers were sitting together in two seats, all good friends of the conductor, and as he took their thousand mile tickets to punch, one of them said: "Old man you were up late last night. Beware of the wine cup," and he laughed and the other boys laughed, and the conductor tried to smile, but he couldn't.

Another drummer who had traveled with the conductor for years and loved him as a brother, thinking he was a little off, said: "Oh, boys, wait till he goes through the train and collects a few cash fares, and he will brighten up. Then I will tell him the last story," and they all laughed at their old friend, and he punched the last of their tickets and went on with a forced smile, and as a tear rolled down his dark cheek the boys thought he had a cinder in his eye. The last drummer slapped him on the arm and said: "Come back soon to your own chickabiddy," and as he went out of the car a laugh arose, and he stood on the platform a minute, because he felt faint, and then entered the car.

He knew almost every passenger, and on any other day he would have been pleased to have them speak to him as they [illegible] but that day [illegible] a bullet. He [illegible] his mind was [illegible] the band of the lady's turban hat instead of putting it on the window, and she blushed, and the passengers laughed, they thought he did it for a joke, but it was because he did not know what he was doing, his mind being with the sick baby at home.

He hurried along and a lady with a little three-year-old girl was next, a child just the age of his sick one. The mother thought it would please the conductor to let the child hand the ticket to him, and the little one had the ticket in her fat hand, and was striking back behind its mamma, trying to muster up courage to hand the ticket to the big conductor, who had often held her in his lap when she was on his train, when he would laught so hearty that the child would be surprised, and he would tell her of his little baby at home.

The child peeked around mamma's shoulder and saw the conductor before he saw her and he looked so changed and sad that the little one opened her eyes in wonder, and handed up the ticket carefully, as though he would bite, and when he saw her he almost fainted, and when she said, "where's oor baby," he thought his heart would jump out of his breast. The tears ran down his face and he whispered, "she may be dying now," and as he went out on the platform at a station he felt that it would almost be a mercy if the train would run over him.

He went into the car and finished his work, and returned to the smoker and sat down in an end seat, then got nervous and went into the baggage car, passing the large hearted drummers, who were full of fun and wanted him to be, and they said, "Come old boy, sit down here and have a smoke," but he said in a husky voice, that he hadn't time, and as he went out the door he braced up enough to turn and smile at the boys through the window, and throw a kiss at them, for he didn't want them to think he would go back entirely on old friends; but when he got into the baggage car and sat down in a chair he looked like a man that had lost every friend.

At the next station a woman with a little girl was cross to the child, and jerked it along by the arm, and he snatched the little one from the mother and tenderly lifted it on the car, and the mother looked indignant, and she got on the car and pushed the little one along the aisle and sat it down in a seat as though she would like to break its bones, and the conductor looked at her as though if she were a man he would everlastingly wipe the platform with her.

He got on the car in the rear of the smoker that time because his old friends, the drummers, were so thoughtless of his feelings. He did not realize that they were unaware of his sorrow. Every kindly expression from the passengers seemed to him an unfeeling remark, and he would have given a month's salary to have been at home, or anywhere that everybody felt as bad as he did.

At the next station he got a dispatch and his hand shook like a leaf, he dare not look at it out doors, but he went in in the smoker and sit down in front of the drummers and opened the dispatch, glanced at it, and put his head on his hand and leaned his elbow on the window. The boys looked at him, and one said, not thinking that anything had occurred more than the usual order to hold the train for another to pass, "Hello, the old man has got his discharge. O, I have been expecting it since he collected that 25 cents from that tramp last week and knocked it down."

Then they laughed and one of the boys touched the conductor on the shoulder and said, "Never mind, old boy, us fellows will see you through. We will get a sample case for you to carry."

The conductor reached the dispatch over to the traveling man and said "read it," and the friend read, "Your baby is dead." Come back on No. —. Give your train to your head brakeman." It was signed by the division superintendent.

The four pair of eyes that read the dispatch had tears in them, and four throats choked up so it was a minute before anyone could speak, and then one of the boys went and sat down by the conductor, who was crying like a child, and said: "Old friend, all of us have babies at home, and not one of us would have joked you had we known of your sorrow. Forgive us, old pard."

The conductor said it was all right, and he knew they pitied him, but it had almost broken his heart to have them talk so, and he went into the baggage car to prepare to leave at the next station. As he left the train four large-hearted drummers, who looked as though they, too, had been bereaved, shook hands tenderly with the conductor and bid him good-bye, and then went into the car and agreed that they couldn't be too careful about their levity, and their thoughts were all the afternoon with the stricken conductor and his dead baby.

When the brakeman went through the train with his pale face and took the tickets the passengers knew something had happened, and to every question he said, "The conductor's baby is dead, and he has gone back," and then every passenger looked as though it was a funeral train, and a hundred hearts felt sorry for their old friend, and none more so than the hearts of the drummers.

At the funeral there was a bank of flowers that almost covered the little coffin, which came by express from 200 miles away, and the conductor will always believe the flowers came from the drummers, and he is right.

"Who held the pass of Thermopylæ against the Persian host?" demanded the teacher. And the editor's boy at the foot of the class spoke up and said: "Father, I reckon; he holds an annual on every road in the country that runs a passenger train."

GLEANINGS.

There are 1,200 towns west of the Mississippi river without churches or regular preaching of any kind. And still the cry is for money for foreign missions.

It was the Duc de Morny who defined a polite man to be one who listens with interest to things he knows all about when they are told by a person who knows nothing about them."

Alabama newspapers report that the price of common labor in that State has increased 25 cents per day, as the result of the recent growth in manufactures, the building of railroads, and the wonderful mineral developments.

Scientific engineers say that the bridge over East river is the last long bridge that ever will be erected, and that, had engineers known as much in 1870 as they do now, this bridge would not have been erected. Tunnels are to take the place of bridges.

A petition was circulated in Austin, Texas, last week to permit a young man to marry in Mexico. It seems when a young man marries in that country the law compels him to exhibit a petition from good citizens of his old home as to his good character, that he has not been previously married, etc.

An agile tourist spent half a day climbing up the face of a precipice in California in order to paint his name high on the rock in large letters. Then he was informed by the owner of the property that he might repeat the feat of scraping off the [illegible] letters or stand a lawsuit for damages.

In 1872 the production of copper in the United States was 8,000,000 pounds, and in 1882 it had risen to 88,000,000 pounds, an increase of 80,000,000 pounds. The consumption of the metal in 1872 was [illegible] pounds, or 6,[illegible] pounds more than were produced. Last year 77,000,000 pounds were used, or 11,000,000 pounds less than were produced.

Miss Jenny Blake of Baltimore, won a sewing machine by making a guess at the number of pills in a bottle in a window. There were [illegible] pills in the bottle and she guessed 26,[illegible]. There were over 5,000 guesses, and the worst one was a guess of 4,000,000. The man who guessed that was one of those fellows who get their education by reading [illegible].

A farmer who claims to have tested the matter says that upon soft ground he can draw two tons with wheels that have a four-inch tire as easily as one ton with a tire two and a half inches. As farm wagons are used in crossing meadows, fields and plowed land as much as any purpose, it will be well to bear this in mind when ordering wheels for farm wagons.

Of the eight or ten large steamers which sail every two or three days from New York harbor, carrying as many first-class passengers as can be crowded into a large opera house, not one sails under the American flag after it has cleared the bar. The British, the German, the French, the Belgian, the Dutch and even the Danish flags may be seen, but not the Stripes and Stars.

A railroad only 6,000 feet long, but with a grade of one-fifth rise in every five [illegible] the average, and at the steepest one in three has been built straight up Green Mountain, near Bar Harbor, Me. The road-bed is solid rock, cut away to a plane, upon which the ties are bolted. The locomotive pushes a passenger car up the ascent by means of cogwheels plying in a center rail, as on the Mount Washington road.

The Hon. Hannibal Hamlin has been offered as high as $50 a column for all he may write of his political reminiscences. The veteran statesman thus far has not yielded to the tempting offer and hesitates to accept for fear a failing memory might lead him to do an injustice to somebody. We will give Mr. Hamlin $50 for a column explaining how he manages to pull through a New England winter without an overcoat.

In speaking of railroad accidents and the earth's rotation, R. Randolph shows that the deflective force arising from the earth's rotation is entirely too small to determine derailments, and also that, as an excess of right-handed derailments has been credited solely to north and south tracks, this proves it to be wholly imaginary, for the deflective force at any latitude is the same for all directions.

To remove the unpleasant taste often noticeable in new wooden vessels, says the Brewing World, "scald them thoroughly several times in boiling water, then dissolve some pearlash or soda in lukewarm water, adding a little lime to it, and wash the insides of the vessel well with the solution. Afterward scald them several times thoroughly as before. This method may be applied to the cleansing of new butter packages."

If you have cold chicken left from dinner, and do not know what to do with it, as there is not enough for a meal, try this way of disposing of it: Mince it quite fine, adding some minced ham and breadcrumbs, moisten with cream, season with pepper and salt, put it in a pudding dish, and spread a thin coating of butter over the top: set it in the oven and let it bake until it is nearly browned on top. This is a good dish for tea.

If every one had the same idea of what constitutes a "good time," what a monotonous old world this would be. Now take the shady side of the street; go slow, eat lightly, skip alcoholic drinks; don't worry; hang on to your temper. It is not the weather that heats the blood half as much as the fuel, wet and dry, that a man puts into his stomach, or the exercise that he gives his body and mind.—Rochester Democrat.

Dr. Ertel, Inspector of Schools in China, says in his last report that he noticed several cases in which Chinese girls living at a great distance from school—having to traverse on their way to and fro the most crowded portions of the town—were dressed like boys, and attend the girls' school all dressed as boys. This was owing to the prevalence of kidnaping girls, and the curious change of dress was done to deceive kidnapers.

Henry Labouchere, M. P., has a very democratic contempt for the fuss and feathers of royalty, and uses a democratic freedom, too, in speaking his mind. "What," he asks, apropos of the recent doings at Moscow, "is in reality this medieval nonsense? An individual, neither better nor worse probably, than any other, has a metal pot put on his head, called a crown, a stick, called a scepter, put in one of his hands, and a ball, called an orb, put in the other. If this amuses him it does no harm to anyone else, but why spend millions on this curious ceremony?"

Quite a curiosity is on exhibition in Davenport, Iowa. In May, 1872, Simon Snyder, while living in Ohio, injured his hand so that amputation was necessary. The hand was buried. Two weeks after, over the place of burial, was found a fungus-like plant, the exact shape of the severed hand, the fore-finger shorter than it should be. Mr. Snyder lost his finger two years before the amputation. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, upon their removal to Iowa, brought the fungus preserved in alcohol. Mr Harrison is trying to secure it for the Academy of Science.

The Restraint of Culture.

This sense of the limitations of their own powers and knowledge imposes upon college men restraints that are not felt by men whose education stopped at the high school. A great deal is written about the insipid fruit from the universities, but if the truth be told it will be found that the forcing houses lower down in the grade of intelligence are mainly at fault. The ambitious poet who sends to a country newspaper a translation of Horace's Ninth Ode picked up his Latin at the high school, but has never entered college. The contributions to the rhymers' corner in the weekly prints, the romances which never find a publisher, and the bushels of rejected manuscript emptied into the junk-shops from the offices of newspapers and periodicals, are seldom the work of college men, but are generally from the hands of high school graduates or ambitious and sanguine women. The college men may not be able to do any better work but they know it. The tendency of their education is to keep not only the pen—that most unruly of modern members—but the tongue and the life under restraint. The man in general conversation makes the most sweeping assertions on the narrowest premises; who has his theory about everything from a brisk cyclone to a hard cold in the head, and is ready at a moment's notice to proclaim his views on every possible contingency of human affairs, is not a college man. His education was interrupted somewhere below the university level, so that he has never felt the restraining influences of his own limitations. The graduating collegians are in some sense conscious of those limitations, and they enter upon the practical business of life with greater deliberation and increased intelligence as the result of that knowledge. Mediocrity in the colleges cannot be converted into genius any more than dandelions under glass can be developed into rose-geraniums. But it is a great point gained if mediocrity knows itself.—New York Tribune.

A Literary Fiasco.

The first attempt to meet, and, if possible, beat the American magazines on their own ground here, has proved a lamentable failure. Cornhill has gone in for illustrations, and at the same time reduced its price from one shilling to sixpence. The old, familiar, bright orange colored periodical, made so popular by Thackeray, has simply been spoiled. Its old peculiar features of excellence have been abandoned in the frantic but futile effort to copy the style of Harper's and the Century, and in striving to grasp the shadow the substance has been lost. The first number of the new series has fewer pages and is printed in larger type, the full-page illustrations are done away with, and in their stead are numerous more or less (generally less) artistic wood cuts mixed up with the letter press l'Americaine. You can imagine the disgust of old readers who can remember the monthly treat presented to them when Thackeray was the editor, to find that for the future Cornhill is to consist of nothing but fiction: the old literary, scientific, and imaginative articles are gone forever. All this is a great mistake. Entremets are excellent in their place, but the British palate won't stand a dinner consisting of nothing else but entremets. The proprietors of Cornhill have printed upwards of 100,000 copies of the first issue of this new series in the expectation that cutting down the price by one-half and throwing aside every sensible feature of their magazine would double its circulation.—London Letter in Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Loading of Hay.

There is a "how to do it," in loading hay and pitching it upon the wagon, which nearly all understand but few practice. I do not refer now to the various mechanical contrivances which are coming into use in some parts of the country, whereby the services of a "pitcher" are dispensed, but to the old-fashioned, back-aching method that ninety-nine out of every one hundred farmers are perfectly familiar with. In our experience there are but few hired men (and they almost always have this part of the work to do) who know how to pitch on a forkful of hay. They stick the fork into the hay-cock or wind-row wherever it happens, and then waste their strength in tugging at an unwieldy weight which is more often delivered on the side of the load than on the top. By a little care taken in inserting the fork well over on the opposite side of the hay-cock, but not too deeply, and by taking hold of the stale well down toward the fork with one hand and with the other grasping it about midway, one can lift the weight with less exertion than by any sort of leverage he can devise. In this way the forkful can be laid in an inverted position and the fork can then be easily withdrawn. This is what the "loader" wants, for he then can place it easily on any part of the load.

The forkful being on the load it is for the loader's interest to take some pains in laying it since he generally "pitches off." One-half the fretting and tugging could be averted by laying each forkful in order upon the load, beginning, for instance, at the forward ladder and loading around, and binding with small forkfuls in the middle to prevent sliding off. The farmer's work is hard enough at the best, and whenever, by using a little thought, he can lighten his burden no one can blame him for so doing.

Washington is thronged by "dead-beats." Some of them are fallen newspaper men, and others are promoted Congressmen.

The Voice in Society.

Truth's readers are admonished to cultivate a pleasant voice. Regular features cannot be cultivated. A kindly expression can be cultivated. So, too, can a pleasant voice; meaning a smooth voice—once that is agreeable to the listener—tender in its quality, though strong, clear, and musical.

The voices of really consummate orators are the result, in a very great measure, of cultivation. Not that they would have been dumb without cultivation, nor that they would have set the teeth of their friends upon edge. The voices of many of them, however, would have been weak, absolutely painful; others still, which were naturally strong and smooth and musical, would have become thin and harsh through carelessness and neglect.

One charm only, of all which a woman can possess, is to equal that of a musical voice in conversation. That one charm is a cultivated intellect to use the musical voice. With wit enough to use them well, sweet womanly accents are more attractive than a beautiful pair of eyes or a fair complexion, regular features, full lips, a dimpled chin, plump shoulders, a luxuriant head of hair, or a pretty hand. Even the presence of wit, indeed, is but an aggravation when it finds expression in tones which are harsh, or shrill, or thin. Every gentleman remembers the disappointment he has felt, on approaching a handsome woman in a drawing-room, to hear an unpleasant voice issue from a beautiful pair of lips. Every other charm is forgotten; one hardly realizes that the woman is intelligent and witty as well as beautiful if her voice is not agreeable.

It behooves the ladies, then, to care for their voices, if not to "cultivate" them. The English tell us that the voices of our ladies are, as a rule, too shrill—too much, they say, of the American eagle scream. Strangers are better critics of ourselves then we are. This may be true. Who has not slackened pace upon the street to hear the voice of a French woman, a note or two of which is caught in passing? Mothers should be as careful in the training of their daughters' voices as they are in giving them other accomplishments and graces which make them delightful in society.

A Frog's Appetite.

One of the big frogs in Terrell Brothers' tank swallowed a trout about six inches long yesterday afternoon. The frog was resting at the surface, and was bothered by the trout which kept nibbling at its long legs. The frog's good nature finally gave out, and, diving for the speckled teaser, he swallowed him at a gulp. The trout was too long for the frog's stomach, and the end of its tail produded from its mouth. Crowds last evening watched the efforts of the frog to get the trout down. The trout-eater was swollen like a maddened turkey gobbler, but he was as lively as ever, and jumped in and out of the water as nimbly as if he were not gorged with a quarter of a pound trout. He swallowed a perch a year ago, and has eaten several small turtles.

Torpedo-Proof.

As we have neither guns nor ships in this country to defend the cities upon our sea coast, we are depending upon the torpedo system to protect our harbors in case of possible war; and this in spite of the fact that torpedoes have proved ineffective in all modern wars to defend assailable harbors. Admiral Farragut showed his contempt of the torpedo in Mobile Bay in his attack on New Orleans. Sir Edward Reed, the eminent naval constructor, has invented an improvement on armor-plated men-of-war which he thinks will make them absolutely safe against the explosions of a torpedo. In his design for a warship the magazines and engines are placed in the upper part of the hull. To the vessel he gives great breadth above the water-line, and he covers her with a dome-shaped turtle-back deck, intended to be entirely shot proof—partly in consequence of its thickness and partly in consequence of its inclination. The hull of this vessel is intended merely to float the armed upper part, and is not to be used either for engines, stores, or quarters for the men. It is to be furnished with a vast number of small water-tight cells and even if the whole of it is blown to pieces by torpedoes, the upper part of the ship will float like a vast raft. The hull can be made with lines adapted for great speed, and no matter what breadth of beam may be given to the vessel above the water-line it cannot affect her speed, except by the resistance its surface may offer to the wind. With a few such vessels as these in the navies of other nations what a ridiculous figure the United States would cut in a foreign war! According to General McClellan, our war vessels "enjoy the unique distinction of being unable to fight or run." In fact, if we sold off the old hulks we would save a great deal of money, and be quite as well protected. To fight other navies we are as helpless to cope with them as are our savages, who offer battle with spears and arrows against trained troops using rifle, cannon, and armes de precision.—Demorest for August.

The Latest Theory of Sea-Sickness.

Perhaps the most acceptable theory to-day is the one which places the origin of the trouble in the inner ear. The ear consists of three parts: the outer of these runs in as far as the drum; the middle part is inside of the drum, and contains the chain of ear bones; while the inner ear is a complicated affair, containing the essential organs of hearing.

As far as we are concerned, the inner ear is a membranous bag filled with fluid, and situated in the solid bone. From the back part of this bag run out three semicircular tubes communicating at both their ends with the bag or vestibule. These run in three different planes, and are lined with hair-like nerve-filaments, which are much more abundant and more sensitive at the anterior part of the tubes. The tubes are filled with liquid in which float little calcareous particles, the otoliths. These tubes are known as the semicircular canals. It was difficult to see what connection with the sense of hearing these canals could possibly have, and some time ago it was noticed that injuries to these impaired the sense of hearing in no way, but caused most curious effects in the loss of equilibrium.—R. W. Lovett in Popular Science Monthly.

A medical journal tells of a young man in Vermont whose brains have dried up until they rattle like shot in a gourd every time he shakes his head. Since his case has been made public he has received more than fifty offers of a position as clerk of a seaside hotel. But his friends hardly think him suited to the position as long as he has enough brains to rattle.—Middletown Transcript

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF Stem Winding Open Face Case,
MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July 20, 1882.
"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.
I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. R. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.
"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

The Old Reading Class.

WILL CARLTON.

I can not tell you Genevieve, how oft it comes to me—
That rather young old reading class in District Number Three,
That row of elocutionists who stood so straight in line,
And charged at standard literature with amiable design.
We did spare the energy in which our words were clad,
We gave the meaning of the text by all the light we had;
But still I fear the ones who wrote the lines we read so free
Would scarce have recognized their work in District Number Three.

Outside the snow was smooth and clean—the winter's thick-laid dust;
The storm it made the windows speak at every sudden gust;
Bright sleigh-bells threw us pleasant words when travelers would pass;
The maple-trees along the road stood shivering in their class;
Beyond the white-browed cottages were nestling cold and dumb,
And far away the mighty world were beckoning us to come—
The wondrous world; of which we conned what had been and might be,
In the old-fashion reading class of District Number Three.

We took a hand at history—its altars, spires and flames—
And uniformly mispronounced the most important names;
We wandered through Biography, and gave our fancy play,
And with some subjects fell in love—"good only for one day;"
In Romance and Philosophy we settled many a point,
And made what poems we assailed to creak at every joint;
And many authors that we love, you with me will agree,
Were first time introduced to us in District Number Three.

You recollect Susanna Smith, the teacher's sore distress,
Who never stopped at any pause—a sort of day express?
And timid young Sylvester Jones, of inconsistent sight,
Who stumbled on the easy words and read the hard ones right?
And Jennie Green, whose doleful voice was always clothed in black?
And Samuel Hicks, whose tones induced the plastering all to crack?
And Andrew Tubbs, whose various mouths were quite a sight to see,
Alas! we cannot find them now in District Number Three.

And Jasper Jenks, whose tears would flow at each pathetic word
(He's in the prize fight business now, and hits them hard, I've heard);
And Benny Bayne, whose every tongue he murmured as in fear
(His tongue is not so timid now; he is an auctioneer;)
And Lantie Wood whose voice was just endeavouring hard to change,
And leaped from hoarse to fiercely shrill with most surprising range;
Also his sister Mary Jane, so full of prudish glee,
Alas! they're both in higher schools than District Number Three.

So back these various voices come, though long the years have grown,
And sound uncommonly distinct through Memory's telephone;
And some are full of melody, and bring a sense of cheer,
And some can smite the rock of time, and summon forth a tear;
But one sweet voice comes back to me, whenever sad I grieve,
And sing a song, and that is yours, O peerless Genevieve!
It brightens up the olden times, and throws a smile at me—
A silver star amid the clouds of District Number Three.

[Harper's Magazine.

HIS BABY WAS DEAD.

The jolly conductor had been lying off for a few days on account of sickness at home, but one day he appeared on his train looking pale, and the brakeman who had run with him for years knew that the conductor's mind was away at [illegible] of his sick baby. With [illegible] hand and his heart in his [illegible] conductor entered the smoker [illegible] said: "Tickets," in a voice [illegible] its usual sound. It was more like an appeal to his Heavenly Father to watch over the baby at home.

Four drummers were sitting together in two seats, all good friends of the conductor, and as he took their thousand mile tickets to punch, one of them said: "Old man you were up late last night. Beware of the wine cup," and he laughed and the other boys laughed, and the conductor tried to smile, but he couldn't.

Another drummer who had traveled with the conductor for years and loved him as a brother, thinking he was a little off, said: "Oh, boys, wait till he goes through the train and collects a few [illegible] and he will brighten up. [illegible] the last story," and [illegible] their old friend, and [illegible] last of their tickets and [illegible] smile, and as a [illegible] dark cheek the [illegible] cinder in his eye. [illegible] him on the [illegible] back soon to [illegible] and as he [illegible] and [illegible] the band of the lady's turban hat instead of putting it on the window, and she blushed, and the passengers laughed, they thought he did it for a joke, but it was because he did not know what he was doing, his mind being with the sick baby at home.

He hurried along and a lady with a little three-year-old girl was next, a child just the age of his sick one. The mother thought it would please the conductor to let the child hand the ticket to him, and the little one had the ticket in her fat hand, and was striking back behind its mamma, trying to muster up courage to hand the ticket to the big conductor, who had often held her in his lap when she was on his train, when he would laugh so hearty that the child would be surprised, and he would tell her of his little baby at home.

The child peeked around mamma's shoulder and saw the conductor before he saw her and he looked so changed and sad that the little one opened her eyes in wonder, and handed up the ticket carefully, as though he would bite, and when he saw her he almost fainted, and when she said, "where's oor baby," he thought his heart would jump out of his breast. The tears ran down his face and he whispered, "she may be dying now," and as he went out on the platform at a station he felt that it would almost be a mercy if the train would run over him.

He went into the car and finished his work, and returned to the smoker and sat down in an end seat, then got nervous and went into the baggage-car, passing the large hearted drummers, who were full of fun and wanted him to be, and they said, "Come old boy, sit down here and have a smoke," but he said in a husky voice, that he hadn't time, and as he went out the door he braced up enough to turn and smile at the boys through the window, and throw a kiss at them, for he didn't want them to think he would go back entirely on old friends; but when he got into the baggage-car and sat down in a chair he looked like a man that had lost every friend.

At the next station a woman with a little girl was cross to the child, and jerked it along by the arm, and he snatched the little one from the mother and tenderly lifted it on the car, and the mother looked indignant, and she got on the car and pushed the little one along the aisle and sat it down in a seat as though she would like to break its bones, and the conductor looked at her as though if she were a man he would everlastingly wipe the platform with her.

He got on the car in the rear of the smoker that time because his old friends, the drummers, were so thoughtless of his feelings. He did not realize that they were unaware of his sorrow. Every kindly expression from the passengers seemed to him an unfeeling remark and he would have given a month's salary to have been at home, or anywhere that everybody felt as bad as he did.

At the next station he got a dispatch and his hand shook like a leaf, he dare not look at it out doors, but he went in in the smoker and sit down in front of the drummers and opened the dispatch, glanced at it, and put his head on his hand and leaned his elbow on the window. The boys looked at him, and one said, not thinking that anything had occurred more than the usual order to hold the train for another to pass, "Hello, the old man has got his discharge. O, I have been expecting it since he collected that 25 cents from that tramp last week and knocked it down."

Then they laughed and one of the boys touched the conductor on the shoulder and said, "Never mind, old boy, us fellows will see you through. We will get a sample case for you to carry."

The conductor reached the dispatch over to the traveling man and said "read it," and the friend read, "Your baby is dead." Come back on No. —. Give your train to your head brakeman." It was signed by the division superintendent.

The four pair of eyes that read the dispatch had tears in them, and four throats choked up so it was a minute before anyone could speak, and then one of the boys went and sat down by the conductor, who was crying like a child, and said: "Old friend, all of us have babies at home, and not one of us would have joked you had we known of your sorrow. Forgive us, old pard."

The conductor said it was all right, and he knew they pitied him, but it had almost broken his heart to have them talk so, and he went into the baggage-car to prepare to leave at the next station. As he left the train four large-hearted drummers, who looked as though they, too, had been bereaved, shook hands tenderly with the conductor and bid him good-bye, and then went into the car and agreed that they couldn't be too careful about their levity, and their thoughts were all the afternoon with the stricken conductor and his dead baby.

When the brakeman went through the train with his pale face and took the tickets the passengers knew something had happened, and to every question he said, "The conductor's baby is dead, and he has gone back," and then every passenger looked as though it was a funeral train, and a hundred hearts felt sorry for their old friend, and none more so than the hearts of the drummers.

At the funeral there was a bank of flowers that almost covered the little coffin, which came by express from 200 miles away, and the conductor will always believe the flowers came from the drummers, and he is right.

GLEANINGS.

There are 1,200 towns west of the Mississippi river without churches or regular preaching of any kind. And still the cry is for money for foreign missions.

It was the Duc de Morny who defined a polite man to be "one who listens with interest to things he knows all about when they are told by a person who knows nothing about them."

Alabama newspapers report that the price of common labor in that State has increased 25 cents per day, as the result of the recent growth in manufactures, the building of railroads, and the wonderful mineral developments.

Scientific engineers say that the bridge over East river is the last long bridge that ever will be erected, and that, had engineers known as much in 1870 as they do now, this bridge would not have been erected. Tunnels are to take the place of bridges.

A petition was circulated in Austin, Texas, last week to permit a young man to marry in Mexico. It seems when a young man marries in that country the law compels him to exhibit a petition from good citizens of his old home as to his good character, that he has not been previously married, etc.

An agile tourist spent half a day climbing up the face of a precipice in California in order to paint his name high on the rock in huge letters. Then he was informed by the owner of the property that he might repeat the feat of scraping off the disfiguring letters or stand a lawsuit for damages.

Oscar Wilde is described as hardly to be recognized since he had his hair cut short. As he has never worn in England the knee-breeches which he masqueraded on this side of the ocean, he is not eccentric in appearance, but simply ugly. His brother, Willie, aspires to pose in his stead as an æsthete, but is regarded as a failure.

In 1872 the production of copper in the United States was 28,000,000 pounds, and in 1882 it had risen to 88,000,000 pounds, an increase of 60,000,000 pounds. The consumption of the metal in 1872 was 34,000,000 pounds, or 6,000,000 pounds more than were produced. Last year 47,000,000 pounds were used, or 41,000,000 pounds less than were produced.

A feature of vegetation in Australia is the number of distinct species to be found. There are more than 10,000 species of flowering plants, being more than can be found on the whole continent of Europe. The highest tree in the world, being 480 feet in height, was found in Australia, and trees are frequently seen there which are more than 400 feet in height.

Miss Jenny Marks, of Baltimore, won a sewing-machine by making a guess at the number of pills in a bottle in a window. There were 25,100 pills in the bottle, and she guessed 25,190. There were over 5,000 guesses, and the worst one was a guess of 9,000,000. The man who guessed that was one of those fellows who get their education by reading gas meters.

A farmer who claims to have tested the matter says that upon soft gound he can draw two tons with wheels that have a four-inch tire as easily as one ton upon those with a two and a half inch tire. As farmers' wagons are used in crossing meadow lands and plowed lands as much as any purpose, it will be well to bear this in mind when ordering wheels for farm wagons.

Of the half dozen large steamers which sail every two or three days from New York harbor, carrying as many first-class passengers as can be cowded into a large opera house, not one sails under the American flag after it has cleared the bar. The British, the German, the French, the Belgian, the Dutch and even the Danish flags may be seen, but not the Strips and Stars.

A railroad only 6,000 feet long, but with a grade of one-fifth rise in every five on the average, and at the steepest one in three has been built straight up Green Mountain, near Bar Harbor, Me. The road-bed is solid rock, cut away to a plane, upon which the ties are bolted. The locomotive pushes a passenger car up the ascent by means of cogwheels plying in a center rail, as on the Mount Washington road.

The Hon. Hannibal Hamlin has been offered as high as $50 a column for all he may write of his political reminiscences. The veteran statesman thus far has not yielded to the tempting offer and hesitates to accept for fear a failing memory might lead him to do an injustice to somebody. We will give Mr. Hamlin $50 for a column explaining how he manages to pull through a New England winter without an overcoat.

In speaking of railroad accidents and the earth's rotation, R. Randolph shows that the deflective force arising from the earth's rotation is entirely too small to determine derailments, and also that, as an excess of right-handed derailments has been credited solely to north and south tracks, this proves it to be wholly imaginary, for the deflective force at any latitude is the same for all directions.

To remove the unpleasant taste often noticeable in new wooden vessels, says the Brewing World, "scald them thoroughly several times in boiling water, then dissolve some pearlash or soda in lukewarm water, adding a little lime to it, and wash the insides of the vessel well with the solution. Afterward scald them several times thoroughly as before. This method may be applied to the cleansing of new butter packages."

If you have cold chicken left from dinner, and do not know what to do with it, as there is not enough for a meal, try this way of disposing of it: Mince it quite fine, adding some minced ham and breadcrumbs, moisten with cream, season with pepper and salt, put it in a pudding dish, and spread a thin coating of butter over the top; set it in the oven and let it bake until it is nearly browned on top. This is a good dish for tea.

If every one had the same idea of what constitutes a "good time," what a monotonous old world this would be. Now take the shady side of the street; go slow, eat lightly, skip alcoholic drinks; don't worry; hang on to your temper. It is not the weather that heats the blood half as much as the fuel, wet and dry, that a man puts into his stomach, or the exercise that he gives his body and mind.—Rochester Democrat.

Henry Labouchere, M. P., has a very democratic contempt for the fuss and feathers of royalty, and uses a democratic freedom, too, in speaking his mind. "What," he asks, apropos of the recent doings at Moscow, "is in reality this medieval nonsense? An individual, neither better nor worse probably, than any other, has a metal pot put on his head, called a crown, a stick, called a scepter, put in one of his hands, and a ball, called an orb, put in the other. If this amuses him it does no harm to anyone else, but why spend millions on this curious ceremony?"

Quite a curiosity is on exhibition in Davenport, Iowa. In May, 1872, Simon Snyder, while living in Ohio, injured his hand so that amputation was necessary. The hand was buried. Two weeks after, over the place of burial, was found a fungus-like plant, the exact shape of the severed hand, the forefinger shorter than it should be. Mr. Snyder lost his finger two years before the amputation. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, upon their removal to Iowa, brought the fungus preserved in alcohol. Mr Harrison is trying to secure it for the Academy of Science.

The Restraint of Culture.

This sense of the limitations of their own powers and knowledge imposes upon collegians restraints that are not felt by men whose education stopped at the high school. A great deal is written about the insipid fruit from the universities, but if the truth be told it will be found that the forcing houses lower down in the grade of intelligence are mainly at fault. The ambitious poet who sends to a country newspaper a translation of Horace's Ninth Ode picked up his Latin at the high school, but has never entered college. The contributions to the rhymers' corner in the weekly prints, the romances which never find a publisher, and the bushels of rejected manuscript emptied into the junk-shops from the offices of newspapers and periodicals, are seldom the work of college men, but are generally from the hands of high school graduates or ambitious and sanguine women. The college men may not be able to do any better work—but they know it. The tendency of their education is to keep not only the pen—that most unruly of modern members—but the tongue and the life under restraint. The man in general conversation makes the most sweeping assertions on the narrowest premises; who has his theory about everything from a brisk cyclone to a hard cold in the head, and is ready at a moment's notice to proclaim his views on every possible contingency of human affairs, is not a college man. His education was interrupted somewhere below the university level, so that he has never felt the restraining influences of his own limitations. The graduating collegians are in some sense conscious of those limitations, and they enter upon the practical business of life with greater deliberation and increased intelligence as the result of that knowledge. Mediocrity in the colleges cannot be converted into genius any more than dandelions under glass can be developed into rose-geraniums. But it is a great point gained if mediocrity knows itself.—New York Tribune.

A Literary Fiasco.

The first attempt to meet, and, if possible, beat the American magazines on their own ground here, has proved a lamentable failure. Cornhill has gone in for illustrations, and at the same time reduced its price from one shilling to sixpence. The old, familiar, bright orange colored periodical, made so popular by Thackeray, has simply been spoiled. Its old peculiar features of excellence have been abandoned in the frantic but futile effort to copy the style of Harper's and the Century, and in striving to grasp the shadow the substance has been lost. The first number of the new series has fewer pages and is printed in larger type, the full-page illustrations are done away with, and in their stead are numerous more or less (generally less) artistic wood cuts mixed up with the letter press l'Americaine. You can imagine the disgust of old readers who can remember the monthly treat presented to them when Thackeray was the editor, to find that for the future Cornhill is to consist of nothing but fiction; the old literary, scientific, and imaginative articles are gone forever. All this is a great mistake. Entremets are excellent in their place, but the British palate won't stand a dinner consisting of nothing else but entremets. The proprietors of Cornhill have printed upwards of 100,000 copies of the first issue of this new series in the expectation that cutting down the price by one-half and throwing aside every sensible feature of their magazine would double its circulation.—London Letter in Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Loading of Hay.

There is a "how to do it," in loading hay and pitching it upon the wagon, which nearly all understand but few practice. I do not refer now to the various mechanical contrivances which are coming into use in some parts of the country, whereby the services of a "pitcher" are dispensed, but to the old-fashioned, back-aching method that ninety-nine out of every one hundred farmers are perfectly familiar with. In our experience there are but few hired men (and they almost always have this part of the work to do) who know how to pitch on a forkful of hay. They stick the fork into the hay-cock or wind-row wherever it happens, and then waste their strength in tugging at an unwieldy weight which is more often delivered on the side of the load than on the top. By a little care taken in inserting the fork well over on the opposite side of the hay-cock, but not too deeply, and by taking hold of the stale well down toward the fork with one hand and with the other grasping it about midway, one can lift the weight with less exertion than by any sort of leverage he can devise. In this way the forkful can be laid in an inverted position and the fork can then be easily withdrawn. This is what the "loader" wants, for he then can place it easily on any part of the load.

The forkful being on the load it is for the loader's interest to take some pains in laying it since he generally "pitches off." One-half the fretting and tugging could be averted by laying each forkful in order upon the load, beginning, for instance, at the forward ladder and loading around, and binding with small forkfuls in the middle to prevent sliding off. The farmer's work is hard enough at the best, and whenever, by using a little thought, he can lighten his burden no one can blame him for so doing.

The Voice in Society.

Truth's readers are admonished to cultivate a pleasant voice. Regular features cannot be cultivated. A kindly expression can be cultivated. So, too, can a pleasant voice; meaning a smooth voice—one that is agreeable to the listener—tender in its quality, though strong, clear, and musical.

The voices of really consummate orators are the result, in a very great measure, of cultivation. Not that they would have been dumb without cultivation, nor that they would have set the teeth of their friends upon edge. The voices of many of them, however, would have been weak, absolutely painful; others still, which were naturally strong and smooth and musical, would have become thin and harsh through carelessness and neglect.

One charm only, of all which a woman can possess, is to equal that of a musical voice in conversation. That one charm is a cultivated intellect to use the musical voice. With wit enough to use them well, sweet womanly accents are more attractive than a beautiful pair of eyes or a fair complexion, regular features, full lips, a dimpled chin, plump shoulders, a luxuriant head of hair, or a pretty hand. Even the presence of wit, indeed, is but an aggravation when it finds expression in tones which are harsh, or shrill, or thin. Every gentleman remembers the disappointment he has felt, on approaching a handsome woman in a drawing-room, to hear an unpleasant voice issue from a beautiful pair of lips. Every other charm is forgotten; one hardly realizes that the woman is intelligent and witty as well as beautiful if her voice is not agreeable.

It behooves the ladies, then, to care for their voices, if not to "cultivate" them. The English tell us that the voices of our ladies are, as a rule, too shrill—too much, they say, of the American eagle scream. Strangers are better critics of ourselves then we are. This may be true. Who has not slackened pace upon the street to hear the voice of a French woman, a note or two of which is caught in passing? Mothers should be as careful in the training of their daughters' voices as they are in giving them other accomplishments and graces which make them delightful in society.

A Frog's Appetite.

One of the big frogs in Terrell Brothers' tank swallowed a trout about six inches long yesterday afternoon. The frog was resting at the surface, and was bothered by the trout which kept nibbling at its long legs. The frog's good nature finally gave out, and, diving for the speckled tenser, he swallowed him at a gulp. The trout was too long for the frog's stomach, and the end of its tail produded from its mouth. Crowds last evening watched the efforts of the frog to get the trout down. The trout-eater was swollen like a maddened turkey gobbler, but he was as lively as ever, and jumped in and out of the water as nimbly as if he were not gorged with a quarter of a pound trout. He swallowed a perch a year ago, and has eaten several small turtles.

Torpedo-Proof.

As we have neither guns nor ships in this country to defend the cities upon our sea coast, we are depending upon the torpedo system to protect our harbors in case of possible war; and this in spite of the fact that torpedoes have proved ineffective in all modern wars to defend assailable harbors. Admiral Farragut showed his contempt of the torpedo in Mobile Bay in his attack on New Orleans. Sir Edward Reed, the eminent naval constructor, has invented an improvement on armor-plated men-of-war which he thinks will make them absolutely safe against the explosions of a torpedo. In his design for a warship the magazines and engines are placed in the upper part of the hull. To the vessel he gives great breadth above the water-line, and he covers her with a dome-shaped turtle-back deck, intended to be entirely shot proof—partly in consequence of its thickness and partly in consequence of its inclination. The hull of this vessel is intended merely to float the armed upper part, and is not to be used either for engines, stores, or quarters for the men. It is to be furnished with a vast number of small water-tight cells and even if the whole of it is blown to pieces by torpedoes, the upper part of the ship will float like a vast raft. The hull can be made with lines adapted for great speed, and no matter what breadth of beam may be given to the vessel above the water-line it cannot affect her speed, except by the resistance its surface may offer to the wind. With a few such vessels as these in the navies of other nations, what a ridiculous figure the United States would cut in a foreign war! According to General McClellan, our war vessels "enjoy the unique distinction of being unable to fight or run." In fact, if we sold off the old hulks we would save a great deal of money, and be quite as well protected. To fight other navies we are as helpless to cope with them as are our savages, who offer battle with spears and arrows against trained troops using rifle, cannon, and armes de precision.—Demorest for August.

The Latest Theory of Sea-Sickness.

Perhaps the most acceptable theory to-day is the one which places the origin of the trouble in the inner ear. The ear consists of three parts: the outer of these runs in as far as the drum; the middle part is inside of the drum, and contains the chain of ear bones; while the inner ear is a complicated affair, containing the essential organs of hearing.

As far as we are concerned, the inner ear is a membranous bag filled with fluid, and situated in the solid bone. From the back part of this bag run out three semicircular tubes communicating at both their ends with the bag or vestibule. These run in three different planes, and are lined with hair-like nerve-filaments, which are much more abundant and more sensitive at the anterior part of the tubes. The tubes are filled with liquid in which float little calcareous particles, the otoliths. These tubes are known as the semicircular canals. It was difficult to see what connection with the sense of hearing these canals could possibly have, and some time ago it was noticed that injuries to these impaired the sense of hearing in no way, but caused most curious effects in the loss of equilibrium.—R. W. Lovett in Popular Science Monthly.

A medical journal tells of a young man in Vermont whose brains have dried up until they rattle like shot in a gourd every time he shakes his head. Since his case has been made public he has received more than fifty offers of a position as clerk of a seaside hotel. But his friends hardly think him suited to [illegible]

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

DURING the years 1880, 1881 and 1883 about 30,000 miles of new railroad were built in the United States, costing in round numbers one thousand millions of dollars. In 1882 alone, nearly 12,000 miles were constructed. The total railroad mileage of the country at the end of last year was 113,329, and its aggregate cost may be prudently estimated at $8.500.000,000.

AN Associated Press dispatch states that the Georgia Legislature passed a Congressional apportionment bill, giving the Republicans six certain districts out of ten, unless the Republicans fail to vote. This seems hardly possible in a State that is Democratic by 80,000 majority, but if the estimate should prove correct Georgia must have a phenomenally generous and fair minded Legislature.

Fuss and Feathers.

We expected the article in THE TIMES last week entitled "Mrs. Grundy's Malice" would have the same effect upon "Mrs. Grundy" as it would to throw a hen into a ten acre lot after cutting off her head. It did. She indulged in a frenzy of low-bred personalities in her organ which receive nothing but a passing notice from all decent citizens and THE TIMES will treat them in the same way, merely remarking that the truth contained in our article last week has not been in the least degree controverted.

Neither did our New York contemporary issued in Oswego Falls take kindly to our article. It attempted to controvert our "comparison" and it made a miserable fizzle in so doing. It compares its columns with the columns of THE TIMES and forgets, we hope not wittingly that its columns are nearly five inches shorter than those of THE TIMES. If it does not desire to compare items in number, but prefers to do so by columns and inches, we will step forward and accommodate it. It must be remembered that this garbage barrel of "general news, stories, humorous articles, choice selections, poetry, etc.," can be ordered from New York by the dry goods' box full—a year's numbers at a time, if desirable. The week we compared notes our New York contemporary printed less than three columns out of a total of 48 columns, or barely 60 inches, of local news pertaining to Fulton and Oswego Falls. It should also be borne in mind that most of the news contained in the sheet had been printed before in other papers. THE TIMES printed 100 inches of local news pertaining to Fulton and Oswego Falls, the most of which had never been printed before. Last week the New York paper dropped to 47 inches, while THE TIMES printed another 100 inches, not counting the controversial articles in either paper. At this rate of diminution in a few weeks the local news in that enterprising (?) sheet across the river will have simmered down to the size of a homœopathic pill, ready to roll into the nearest knot hole and pull the knot hole in after it.

Charley Scouten Comes to Grief.

Last Wednesday morning as Mr. Stuart of the Upper Landing was hitching a canal mule to his wagon, the mule took fright and ran a considerable distance, breaking loose from the buggy. It was afterwards found close by eating grass by the roadside. Charley Scouten, a boy of fourteen, was sitting on the seat and was thrown over the wheel, cutting his throat and neck and bruising himself slightly. After recovering from his fright he went to Phœnix on the steamboat to report to his father, Capt. Ed. Scouten.

LATER—Charley Scouten, son of Captain Edward Scouten of Fulton, while playing with his brother in Ira Betts' boat yard at Phœnix, stepped on a red hot iron which the workmen had laid aside to cool, and burned both feet severely. The boy was taken on board his father's boat and his injuries attended to.

Last Friday a fatal runaway accident occurred at Baldwinsville, in which Mrs. Eliza Stephens lost her life and two other persons, Miss Minnie Sixbury and a young man were seriously injured. Liberty Worden, a farmer living near Phœnix, and seven other persons had started in a heavy wagon, containing furniture, for a camp meeting and as they were descending a hill entering Baldwinsville, the team took fright and ran away, overturning the wagon and its occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Liberty Worden, George, Charles and Effie Worden, Willis Bentley. Mrs. Eliza Stephens Miss Minnie Sixbury, were violently thrown to the ground.

During the past year 212 persons more than 70 years old died in Oswego county. Two were 95 years old, two 94, four 93, three 91 and one 99. AT UTICA.

The market was strong with an advance of fully one-half of a cent. So great an advance was hardly anticipated but was none the less welcome after the depression of the last two weeks. It was really at one time doubtful whether 9¼ or 9⅜c was to be the ruling price, but the former prevailed. There is a good deal of confidence felt in regard to the immediate future of the market; but it will be well to remember that the danger of overstocking is not entirely out of the way, even if July cheese is. Transactions of the day are as follows: 8 lots, 375 boxes, at 9c.; 245 and 185 at 9⅛c.; 10 lots, 760 boxes, at 9¼c.; 200 at 9⅜c.; 69 lots, 6,158 boxes at 9¼c.; 10 lots, 1,108 boxes, at 9⅜c.; 8 lots small cheese, 480 boxes, at 9⅞c.; and 4 lots, 658 boxes at private terms. Sales, 10,396 boxes; commissions, 1,807; total 15,203 boxes. Ruling price 9¼c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

There was a booming market at Little Falls. Buyers were a little slow at first in making purchases, but were finally forced to pay more than 9½c. or lose some of their regular purchases. The heaviest buyers showed great confidence in the situation and bought very freely. It is generally admitted that prices have reached their lowest point as the weather is cool and there is such a strong demand for fine goods. Cows continue to shrink very much in milk and by some it is now estimated that the cheese product here is off nearly one-half from the flush of the season. Sales to-day are:

AT FULTON.

In accordance with the general rise on other markets, prices on the Fulton market Monday evening had an upward tendency being from ½c. to 1c. higher than last week. Twenty factories were represented and 1750 boxes of cheese were offered, the bulk of it being sold at 9c. and 9½c. On this market at the corresponding date last year there were no sales; in 1881 the ruling price was 11¼c.; 1880, 11c.; 1879, 5c.; 1878, 8¾c.

We give below a letter from a new buyer on the Fulton market, Edwin B. Naish of Ogdensburg, and while we assume no responsibility for his statements, if they are true, he certainly deserves a hearing:

THE COMPLAINT OF A CHEESE BUYER.

To the Editor of the FULTON TIMES:

The salesmen attending this Board have a most peculiar way of selling their cheese, on all other boards, four of which I am a member, it is the rule for the salesmen to sell their cheese to whomsoever will pay the most money, and the buyer who makes first offer has the cheese unless some other buyer raises his offer. This rule does not include the "Fulton Board of Trade," for I am inclined to think that at any rate some of the salesmen are under some obligation to one local buyer, to use an old English saying they are under his thumb, and cannot go where they like. This is the only conclusion one can come to after the conduct of one salesman in particular—Sutton, "Gilbert's Mills Factory." My reasons for thinking so are various, one or two I will just mention. On July 16th, I first attended the "Fulton Board of Trade" for the purpose of buying cheese. I had visited the "Gilberts Mills Factory" the previous Friday and concluded to buy their cheese. On board day I spoke to Sutton respecting price and made him an offer of 9¾c. for his cheese, to which he replied if that offer is not raised you shall have the cheese. Some half hour later I again spoke to him and he then had the impudence to say he had sold them to O. for the same price. Now I contend he did an unwarrantable action. If O. would not have paid more I should have been asked to take the cheese, not only that I would have paid at least ½c. per pound more money for the cheese to have secured them.

Had it not been for my presence in the board the cheese would not have sold as high, my being a new buyer I had to force the price up. Now for my second reason for assuming Sutton is under some obligation to the old local buyer.

Monday, last 27th inst., as soon as I had the opportunity I spoke to Sutton about buying his cheese, and was somewhat surprised to hear that he had sold them. When I asked him what price he was to receive for them he told me he did not know if he was to get 9 or 9¼ cents. Now one would have thought he would have seen if some other buyer would pay more than his old local buyer. This, however, he never does on any occasion. O. tells him he wants the cheese and is told all right, you can have them—not a word about price. I would have paid 9⅜c. for these cheese, could I have had them, but no opportunity is given me. Now sir, would it not be to the interest of the patrons of the Gilberts Mills factory to appoint a salesman who at any rate has the qualities of a business man, and one who would study to do the utmost for the said patrons. The Gilberts Mills factory is one of the best in the county of Oswego. There is none better, and should certainly get full price for their cheese. Instead of that several factories which make inferior cheese often get a higher price than the Gilberts Mills [illegible]

Early Sunday morning the residence of [illegible] Howe [illegible] Highland street and Broadway was entered by a burglar and before he was discovered and frightened away he secured over [illegible] worth of plunder. He from the piazza on the south side of the parlor through a window which had been left unfastened. He carefully displaced a chair in front of the window to make his exit easy and sure and then proceeded to ransack Mr. Howe's safe which had been left unlocked, as well as all the closets in the lower part of the house. In the safe the burglar found $7 or $8.

GOING UP STAIRS

he rummaged the closets and finally entering the room where Mr. and Mrs. Howe were sleeping he appropriated Mr. Howe's pocket-book containing some $60 in money and a number of valuable papers, a handsome gold watch belonging to Mrs. Howe and a number of dollars in pennies of which was in a box on the dressing case Finally he hit the shade of a lamp resting on a small stand which clicked sharply and awoke Mrs. Howe, who saw in the dim light of the breaking day some one moving about in the room, and thinking it was one of her daughters asked: "Who's there?" The burglar made no answer, but stealthily and hurriedly left the room. Suspecting the character of her morning caller Mrs. Howe immediately awoke her husband and

SCREAMED "ROBBERS."

Mr. Howe pursued the rascal, but the latter had too much of a start, and by the time Mr. Howe reached the head of the stairs he saw the thief turning into the parlor, whither he followed as rapidly as possible and seeing the curtains drawn of the window where the burglar made his entry and exit, went into the back part of the house, supposing the fellow had gone in that direction, and thus gave him an opportunity to make good his escape.

OTHER DEPREDATIONS.

Sometime during the same night a burglar entered Fred Bennett's house, at the corner of Broadway and Third Sts., getting through a window and ransacked a bureau, but did not get anything. Doubtless the marauder discovered that he had entered the house of an editor, as he did not remain long enough to arouse the family.

An unsuccessful attempt was also made to enter the house of W. P. Hillick, at the corner of Highland and Third streets. Mrs. Hillick heard the thief operating on a window, and getting up, frightened him away.

While Edward Laycock was absent attending church Sunday evening, Mrs. Laycock remaining at home to care for the children, some fellow shuffled along the walk to the side door of their residence on Buffalo street and rapped loudly. On going to the door and asking: "Who's there," without opening the door, the fellow left, shuffling along the walk as he had come.

Mr. A. L. Hatch, who is connected with THE TIMES as compositor, etc., left yesterday for his summer vacation in Madison county. It is rumored that on his return he will join hands, hearts and fortunes with a fair young lady of this village. We wish him success in his latest venture.

The Republican caucus of the town of Volney will be held at Nichols Hall on Saturday at 2 o'clock for the purpose of electing delegates to the district, county and Assemby conventions. A prominent half-breed predicts that the delegates will be harmoniously selected and that Mr. Howe will be allowed to name the men whom he wishes to represent this town in the county convention. "In fact," added the half-breed, "it would he hard to find a set of dele. in this town who will not favor Mr. Howe for County Judge."

On Monday night Frank Wilson, one of the proprietors of the omnibus line, left the long omnibus with a powerful team attached, in front of his residence on Third street, while he went in to eat his supper. The team became frightened and ran away, taking their course down Third and Cayuga streets, rounding the Lewis House corner to First street, from which they turned into Oneida street and, rushing along near the north sidewalk, just beyond the post office the heavy vehicle collided with a carriage to which Willis Ney's horse was attached and from which two ladies jumped barely in time to escape being toppled over in the carriage, which was considerably damaged. The team was stopped after going a few yards farther. The ladies were badly bruised and frightened. No other damage was done.

THOUSAND ISLAND PARK, Aug. 20.

The new Thousand Island Park Hotel has at present three hundred regular boarders. One hundred and fifty more rooms are to be fitted up this fall, after the season closes. It is the largest hotel on the StLawrence river at present, fine in appearance on the exterior, and cosily fitted up inside.

Among the guests registered there last week were Mrs. G. M. Case, Mrs. Samuel Case, Mrs. C. G. Case, Miss J. M. Porter, Mr. Geo. Kellogg, wife and daughter of Fulton.

Mattie Parkhouse, who has been the guest of Mrs. James Sears at Hickory Cottage, Thousand Island Park, has returned home well pleased with her three weeks' sojourn.

A Notable Wedding.

A notable wedding will occur in Fulton next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Baptist church, when Miss Carrie A. Streeter wil be united in marriage to Edward C. Davies of Bement, Ill., by Rev. L. Golden of Clinton, N. Y. A reception will occur at the residence of the bride's parents immediately following the performance of the ceremony. Miss Streeter is a young lady of rare accomplishments and culture and is held in high esteem by her many friends. She is a gifted musician and possesses a well trained voice which has often received high commendation. For the past year or more she has been the leading soprano in the Baptist choir and her place will be filled with difficulty. During the past year she has also been an instructor in Union Graded School. Some three or four years ago she graduated at the Oswego Normal School and afterwards went to Illinois to teach and there became acquainted with Mr. Davies, who is an estimable Christian gentleman of means coupled with excellent business qualifications.

Bicycle Prizes.

Prizes are offered for bicycle contests at the Oswego Fair fair next month which should be sufficient to induce a large number of first-class bicycle riders to step forward and compete for them. They consist of an elegant gold watch and chain, the watch being handsomely chased, for a mile bicycle race, best two in three, open to all amateurs. The watch is from the factory of the Columbus watch company and is an adjusted nickel movement. With the chain, it cost the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society, who is the donor, $80. The second prize for this race, also presented by the society, is a $25 silver watch of the Springfield, Ill., make.

Mr. C. R. Nichols also gives a prize, in the form of a handsome cup, the cover of which is surmounted with the figure of bicycle rider and his machine. His prize is worth $30 and must be won by a rider for two successive years before it becomes his property. This contest is open to bicyclists of Oswego county. The prizes are now on exhibition at C. R. Nichols' store.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty-five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

TREES, LOGS AND LUMBER.

Timber Cutting in the Great Mills of the Saginaw Valley.

For sixteen miles down to Bay City, near Lake Huron, the stream flows between wooden strands. The eye strains itself in vain to see beyond the lumber horizon that stretches east and west. The yellow waters, perhaps two hundred feet wide, pass first between continuous booms, each inclosing its army of giant logs. These booms reach far above Saginaw, and if we include the tributaries of the river and count both sides, make up a reach of log posts seventy-five miles long. Next the logs and on the bank proper rise, most impressive of all, the tracts of sawn lumber. Pile on pile they rise on either side for sixteen miles up and down the stream, covering acre after acre, until the wooden monotony becomes oppressive. Now and then the wooden strand becomes thinner, only to rise again to more imposing hight and width around a new cluster of mills. These mills, often of grand proportions, spring from their lumber heaps as a giant of fairy story looms amid the disintegrated bones of his victims. Their tall chimneys belch black smoke, the rattling saws cut the air with their distant rasp, and the sense of industrial activeness is filled out by the hives of workmen swarming over the lumber hills and loading them, by slow but steady toil, into barges whose hulls rival the capacity of a Cunarder.

Along this stretch of sixteen miles of the Saginaw river there are cut annually 1,000,000,000 feet of lumber, and last year the figures went 50,000,000 higher than that amount. Since to most readers these figures are a vague immensity of numbers, let us try to simplify them by an illustration. A foot of lumber, the unit of board measure, means a board one foot square and one inch thick; so that, for example, a plank two inches thick, one foot wide, and ten feet long would contain twenty lumber feet. Now apply the measure to the figures of the annual Saginaw lumber product as cited above. We shall find that the Saginaw mills turn out each year so much lumber, large and small, that if it were all cut in inch-thick boards, each of them one foot wide, and then these boards were placed end to end, they would reach about 200,000 miles, or four times around our planet. The product, to put the illustration a little differently, would supply lumber enough for a fence four times around the world, made of solid wooden posts and with a double row of boards each six inches wide. More roughly I estimate that the yearly Saginaw lumber product in logs floating closely together would cover a water area of considerably more than four square miles.

THE SAW-LOG'S STORY.

Up the Saginaw in a wide region, reached either by the river or its tributaries, the great pine saw-log, often three feet in diameter, has its birth. Pine forests, now rapidly thinning out, once covered several thousand square miles around the headwaters. Entering the lumber region in the late autumn, the lumbermen establish camps, 'round which during the whole winter long the axes resound, the tall trunks fall, and in sections, are rolled to the adjacent streams for the spring floods to bear away. Floating down to the main river, the "boom men" pick out each owner's logs as identified by the brand, and gather them inside the booms, which may be curtly described as long tree-trunks chained together at the ends, often inclosing a smooth water surface of several acres. The coves of the Saginaw—called locally "bayous," a term borrowed from the Lower Mississippi—are especially adapted for the gathering and organization of these log armies. The military metaphor, indeed, has peculiar fitness here, for the logs are mustered side by side in companies, held together by a rope fastened to each log by a device not unlike the domestic clothespin. As fast as the down stream are worked up by the tireless mills, these upper booms are drawn upon for more, until [illegible] river finds them quite empty, and another winter comes on to yield its fresh supply.

But the saw-log's story becomes most dramatic as it nears the mill and, loosed from the restraining rope, is steered into the glade of open water that leads up to the wooden slide. Enter now the great lumber mill, and we shall be in at the saw-log's death. Down the slide on a wooden railroad runs a heavy truck, fitted with two cross lines of heavy iron teeth. With a plunge it dashes below the water, still holding its place on the rails. Then three giant logs are floated above it. At a signal, the steam is let on, the machinery reversed, the strong chain holding the truck tightens, and the truck itself begins to ascend. The sharp teeth catch the logs, which, in a trice, are lifted dripping from the water, whisked up like twigs 100 feet to the mill, and rolled off opposite the first set of saws. These saws are two in number; one set below is of the buzz variety, perhaps six feet in diameter, and cutting, therefore, through a three-foot log; but as this semi-diameter is often insufficient for a big log, a second and smaller "buzz" placed above, and in front of the first, cuts the slice, which otherwise might still hold fast the slab.

Just here comes in a beautiful piece of powerful mechanism. At the touch of a lever a stout beam, armed with iron teeth, rises by the forest Titan's side. It snatches the wood, and in less time than words can tell it the log is tumbled over, and the framework, rushing back and forth with amazing speed, has driven the edges of the tree athwart the saws, until the once rough stick stands forth a symmetrical square. Then, in another instant it is shifted before the "gang," a set of ordinary upright saws placed an inch apart, and often with thirty or even thirty-five blades. Below an ordinary circular planer revolves in front of the gang and smoothes the lower edges of the boards. The immense piece of timber is run through in a few moments, and what was five minutes before a rough tree trunk has passed into the inch boards of commerce. Nor does the work end here: for the slabs are passed to a new machine, which grasps them with almost human intelligence, and whatever part of them can be made so become laths. Other machines take the harder woods, ash, elm, or oak, and convert them with equal speed into staves, barrel heads or shingles; and finally the otherwise useless debris passes to the furnaces to feed the fires of the engine. There is seen little or no sawdust around the Saginaw lumber mills for the reason that it is all used for the furnace flames; and, in general, the cycle of utilities by which one branch of the great industry is made to feed or supplement another seems as rounded as human ingenuity can make it.

Sometimes, particularly in the more modern mills, the routine as described is varied by lifting the logs from the river on an endless chain; and a number of minor mechanisms fill the [illegible] by which the lumber is distributed. One ingenious [illegible] making double [illegible] [illegible] boards to the points in the yard or on the wharf whence they are to be shipped. Some additional conception of the size and importance of the industry may be derived from the fact that the Michigan Central Railroad Company takes away from one station here 100 car-loads of lumber for each day of the working season, to say nothing of the large quantities shipped from the river by the Flint & Pere Marquette Railroad line, and even large shipments by the lake barges.—New York Evening Post.

APACHE, ZUNI AND RANGER.

The Strange Contrasts the Oldest American City Shows.

At an early day of the Santa Fe tertio-millennial celebration the crowd pressed forward into the street while the Mescaleros Apaches, three abreast, passed by. Their frames and muscles would have delighted an athlete—heavy, massive heads with strong, virile features set firmly on giant frames. Their browny chests stood out almost straight from robust shoulders, and they came gliding along with a firm but noiseless step, making no dust in a street where a single gust of wind would have beclouded. Red and black pigment lay in broad stripes across their copper-colored faces. The faces of nearly all of them were heavily reddened. A few had painted black and red patches on their cheeks, hightening the effect with a border of the contrasting colors. Their hats were but bands covered with white beads and plentifully plumed. The moguls of the tribe wore ear pendants of polished bone as long as a finger with chains attached to them, on which ornaments were strung. Their dress was of tight-fitting buckskin, decorated with strips of fur and bright leather. They carried each a spear reaching above their heads.

Several children, who attend the Indian school at Albuquerque, chubby little fellows with gray suits and cadet caps, marched manfully behind the sinew of the tribe and in the immediate charge of a sunblacked patriarch with a bone tube from which he blew at frequent intervals a half dozen notes suggestive of the clarionet, but most unearthly.

The rear of the party was brought up by an ear-ringed white scout with a full cartridge belt exposed and the tribe's dwarf in the toggery of the giants and carrying besides a circular shield, with a painted center like a bull's eye and a whitish sheepskin body. The dwarf's face was seamed with age as though he was brought along to show that other things besides Santa Fe might be old and little.

The Zuni Indians followed the Apaches in the general procession. It was a bitter dose for the Zunis to take, for the two tribes are not friendly, the Zunis frowning on the nomadic mountain life that has made the Apaches of giant frame but of brains that in years past have turned only to the hunt and war path. The physical contrast between the two tribes was striking, the Zunis, many of them stooped-shouldered and shuffling along in duck leggings and dark, tight-fitting shirts, but with no facial or other decorations, and their long, straggling hair falling to their sunken breasts and hollow backs. With them marched their young white leader, Lieut. Frank Cushing, in a neat gray suit and broad-brimmed straw hat and carrying at his side a leather pouch, the only mark, except his long hair, that singled him out as one of the tribe.

Behind the Zunis the dust rose from the tramping of Maj. Fountain's brown-skinned rangers, wearing straw hats whose brims a pair of long arms could hardly span, and with yellow facings on their blue shirts. Carbines were hung across their saddles and ugly-looking small weapons dangled from their belts. There was about their fashion of striding a horse a suggestion of swagger and readiness for hot business at short range. This was the crowd that organized to clean out the cattle thieves near the Mexican border, a task which they were splendidly successful in.

The exercises ended with the opening of the several buildings containing exhibits, after which the various organizations sought their quarters, the Zunis to bend over their industries that they have brought with them, and the Apache to stretch their huge limbs in the wigwams or bare their parched breasts to the mountain breeze, until the advancing day brought within the gates a caravan of roulette and spinning Jenny worthies, around whom the painted giants clustered with much satisfaction.

The afternoon was signalized by the arrival of the Governor of the San Juan Pueblos, accompanied by his squaw and papoose. They rode into town on a pair of burros, the squaw carrying the papoose on one arm and a whip for the donkey, of which she was not sparing, in the other hand. From the Governor's saddle hung two canvas bags of provisions. They were dressed in costume befitting their rank, the Governoress wearing a scarlet dress and ample hat of straw and the Governor's leggins being nearly covered by a white shirt that would have held two of him. This and a plug hat brushed the wrong way, put his dignity to a severe test, but he passed through the streets without a mishap and drove in at the exposition gates like a conquerer.—Santa Fe (N. M.) Correspondence Denver News.

To Avoid Sunstroke.

Sun-stroke is caused by excessive heat, and especially if the weather is "muggy." It is more apt to occur on the second, third, or fourth day of a heated term than on the first. Loss of sleep, worry, excitement, close sleeping rooms, debility, abuse of stimulants, predispose to it. It is more apt to attack those working in the sun, and especially between the hours of 11 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Have as cool sleeping-rooms as possible.

Avoid loss of sleep and all unnecessary fatigue. If working indoors, and where there is artificial heat, laundries, etc., see that the room is well-ventilated. If working in the sun wear a light hat (not black, as it absorbs the heat), straw, etc., and put inside of it on the head a wet cloth on a large green leaf; frequently lift the hat from the head and see that the cloth is wet. Do not check perspiration, but drink what water you need to keep it up, as perspiration prevents the body from being overheated. Have, whenever possible, an additional shade, as a thin umbrella when walking, a canvas or board cover when working in the sun.

When much fatigued do not go to work, but be excused from work, especially after 11 in the morning on very hot days, if the work is in the sun. If a feeling of fatigue, dizziness, headache, or exhaustion occurs, cease work immediately, lie down in a shady and cool place, apply cold cloths to and pour cold water over head and neck.

If anyone is overcome by the heat, send immediately for the nearest good physician. While waiting for the physician give the patient cool drinks of water or cold black tea, or cold coffee, if able to swallow. If the skin is hot and dry, sponge with or pour cold water over the body and limbs, and apply to the head pounded ice wrapped in a towel or other cloth. If there is no ice [illegible]

SCROFULA

A remedy [illegible] scrofula, and [illegible] er to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of [illegible] illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove Hood's Sarsaparilla to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,

SARAH C. WHITTIER.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skilfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 40,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the chest and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

An Unending Grief.

On a terrace overlooking a beautiful lawn in front of a quiet-looking residence on Walnut lane, Germantown, yesterday, says the Philadelphia Record, sat three persons. An elderly looking gentleman, dressed in a plain business suit, a nice-looking lady of nearly fifty years, clad in black, whose finely moulded features bore traces of an inward sorrow, and a lithe, supple lad of some sixteen years comprised a trio who have occupied more or less attention for the past nine years. They were the parents and brother of Charlie Ross, who nine years ago was abducted.

The grief of Mrs. Ross has not been assuaged by the lapse of all these years, and like her husband, she suffers untold anguish from the feelings of suspense in which they are at all times kept by the fact that they do not know whether the boy is alive or dead.

"Were we only assured of Charlie's death," said Mr. Ross, "it would be a relief, for we are tortured with thoughts of him being reared among thieves and outcasts. If he is alive he is surely living among vagabonds, because those who stole him—Moser and Douglass—could not have entrusted him to others than footpads and robbers. This is what causes us so much worriment, for I would rather have him dead than grow to lead a dishonest life. It is indeed a deep mystery to think that nine years could pass without any trace of the boy being discovered. His abductors were traced, but never has anything turned up concerning Charley himself. If he is alive my wife and I feel, somehow or other, that we will hear of or come across him some time. Why we entertain such a belief, or how we expect to find him, I cannot tell; but, nevertheless, we feel that, if alive, he will be restored to us some day.

"I am constantly in receipt of communications containing what the writers believe to be clues. I never fail to answer every letter thus addressed me and anything that has the faintest semblance of a clue I always work up, either personally or by correspondence. Only yesterday I received a letter from the interior of Ohio, containing a description of a boy supposed to be my son. These letters I have carefully filed away. The number of children supposed to have been kidnapped that I hear of in a year is simply surprising, and I presume there are many disconsolate fathers and mothers throughout the country, who, like us, are to-day mourning the disappearance of a loved child.

Isinglass in the Top of Straw Hats.

After years of search, a Boston man has discovered that mica, known to science as muscovite, and commonly called isinglass, possesses properties which so nearly render it impervious to heat as to place it far in advance of every other known material which has been used for such a purpose. The method is adopted by placing in the crown of the hat a sheet of mica from three to six inches in diameter, and variously shaped according to the fancy of the manufacturer, or the form and style of the trade-mark over which it forms a transparent shield. It can readily be seen that the mica serves three very important and appreciable uses, as it protects the silk lining from contact with pomade (and perspiration, if no cosmetic is used), protects the ornamental trade-mark from disfiguration, and serves as a preventive against sunstroke. That the mica tips impart a beauty of finish to the fashionable hats is by no means a disadvantage, and the fact that arrangements are already concluded by which these tips will be placed in half a million straw hats during the coming season is evidence of the value and utility of the invention, which can be applied at a slightly increased cost.

Picturesque Canton.

Miss Isabella Bird writes: "Canton is intoxicating from its picturesqueness, color, novelty and movement. As we sat at midday at the five-storied pagoda, which from a corner wall overlooks the Tartar city, and ever since, through this crowded week, I have wished that the sun might stand still in the cloudless sky and let me dream of gorgeous sunlight, light without heat; of narrow lines rich in color; of the glints of sunlight on embroideries and cloth of gold, resplendent even in the darkness; of hurrying and colored crowds in the shadow, with the blue sky, in narrow strips, high above; of gorgeous marriage processions, and the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; of glittering trains of mandarins; of funeral processions, with the wail of hired mourners clad in sackcloth and ashes; of the Tartar city, with its pagodas; of the hills of graves, great cities of the dead outside the walls, fiery under the tropic blue; of the 'potter's field,' with its pools of blood and crosses of crucifixion—now, as on Calvary, symbolical of shame alone; of the wonderful river life, and all the busy, crowded, costumed hurry of the streets, where blue banners hanging here and there show that in those houses death has stilled some busy brains forevermore.

The Prodigal Son.

On Monday evening there returned to Dover a young man to visit his parents who had been away from home for six years. He has changed in his personal appearance somewhat since he left, being thinner. Upon the arrival of the train he met his father in the store of his cousin, and bought a large lot of goods from him. He then left the store, the father not even thinking that he had been talking to his own son. Upon reaching the dwelling house, his mother, sister, and aunt were sitting in the porch. He asked if Mr. —— lived there, and said he would take a seat and wait for his return home. This cool assumption somewhat astonished the ladies, but when it was followed up a few minutes later by asking if they had any cold meat or bread, it was a bomb in the camp, and he was politely informed that "business men are generally supposed to stop at the hotel." He said that was true, but he was "strapped," as any person was liable to be at some time. Thus it went on, until finally the young man laughed. His aunt exclaimed, "Why, Clarrie, I believe it's you!" And sure enough it was, after six years' absence in the West. It is but fair to say that the family had a letter from him but a short time ago, stating that he expected to start further West before his return home, and they were not expecting him, hence their failure even to think of the boy—*Dover (Del.) Give the Bicycle Room According to its Strength.

Bicycle riders may take encouragement from the decision of a Washington judge who has fined a man $10 for deliberately riding down and breaking the machine of a rider of a bicycle. The fine, it appears, was imposed as penalty for an assault. The value of the machine alleged to have been ruined must have been far greater than the sum exacted of the assailant. But the value of the decision lies in the fact that the learned judge lays down the law in regard to bicycles. He declares that the bicycle is a carriage, having, in common with other carriages, equal rights in the streets and highways, and protected by the same laws that govern the movements of other vehicles. A man driving a team who turns out of his way in order to obstruct the course of a bicycle does so at his peril. This is good news to the 30,000 bicycle riders who, up to this date, have suffered much from the contumely of proud owners of horses. The day of [illegible] and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a For [illegible] thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Timber Cutting in the Great Mills of the Saginaw Valley.

For sixteen miles down to Bay City, near Lake Huron, the stream flows between wooden strands. The eye strains itself in vain to see beyond the lumber horizon that stretches east and west. The yellow waters, perhaps two hundred feet wide, pass first between continuous booms, each inclosing its army of giant logs. These booms reach far above Saginaw, and if we include the tributaries of the river and count both sides, make up a reach of log posts seventy-five miles long. Next the logs and on the bank proper rise, most impressive of all, the tracts of sawn lumber. Pile on pile they rise on either side for sixteen miles up and down the stream, covering acre after acre, until the wooden monotony becomes oppressive. Now and then the wooden strand becomes thinner, only to rise again to more imposing hight and width around a new cluster of mills. These mills, often of grand proportions, spring from their lumber heaps as a giant of fairy story looms amid the disintegrated bones of his victims. Their tall chimneys belch black smoke, the rattling saws cut the air with their distant rasp, and the sense of industrial activness is filled out by the hives of workmen swarming over the lumber hills and loading them, by slow but steady toil, into barges whose hulls rival the capacity of a Cunarder.

Along this stretch of sixteen miles of the Saginaw river there are cut annually 1,000,000,000 feet of lumber, and last year the figures went 50,000,000 higher than that amount. Since to most readers these figures are a vague immensity of numbers, let us try to simplify them by an illustration. A foot of lumber, the unit of board measure, means a board one foot square and one inch thick; so that, for example, a plank two inches thick, one foot wide, and ten feet long would contain twenty lumber feet. Now apply the measure to the figures of the annual Saginaw lumber product as cited above. We shall find that the Saginaw mills turn out each year so much lumber, large and small, that if it were all cut in inch-thick boards, each of them one foot wide, and then these boards were placed end to end, they would reach about 200,000 miles, or four times around our planet. The product, to put the illustration a little differently, would supply lumber enough for a fence four times around the world, made of solid wooden posts and with a double row of boards each six inches wide. More roughly I estimate that the yearly Saginaw lumber product in logs floating closely together would cover a water area of considerably more than four square miles.

THE SAW-LOG'S STORY.

Up the Saginaw in a wide region, reached either by the river or its tributaries, the great pine saw-log, often three feet in diameter, has its birth. Pine forests, now rapidly thinning out, once covered several thousand square miles around the headwaters. Entering that lumber region in the late autumn, the lumbermen establish camps, 'round which during the whole winter long the axes resound, the tall trunks fall, and in sections, are rolled to the adjacent streams for the spring floods to bear away. Floating down to the main river, the "boom men" pick out each owner's logs as identified by the brand, and gather them inside the booms, which may be curtly described as long tree-trunks chained together at the ends, often inclosing a smooth water surface of several acres. The coves of the Saginaw called locally "bayous," a term borrowed from the Lower Mississippi—are especially adapted for the gathering and organization of these log armies. The military metaphor, indeed, has peculiar fitness here, for the logs are mustered side by side in companies, held together by a rope fastened to each log by a device not unlike the domestic clothespin. As [illegible] down stream are worked up by the tireless mills, these upper booms are drawn upon for more, until [illegible] river finds them quite [illegible] and another winter comes on to yield its fresh supply.

But the saw-log's story becomes most dramatic as it nears the mill and, loosed from the restraining rope, is steered into the glade of open water that leads up to the wooden slide. Enter now the great lumber mill, and we shall be in at the saw-log's death. Down the slide on a wooden railroad runs a heavy truck, fitted with two cross lines of heavy iron teeth. With a plunge it dashes below the water, still holding its place on the rails. Then three giant logs are floated above it. At a signal, the steam is let on, the machinery reversed, the strong chain holding the truck tightens, and the truck itself begins to ascend. The sharp teeth catch the logs, which, in a trice, are lifted dripping from the water, whisked up like twigs 100 feet to the mill, and rolled off opposite the first set of saws. These saws are two in number; one set below is of the buzz variety, perhaps six feet in diameter, and cutting, therefore, through a three-foot log; but as this semi-diameter is often insufficient for a big log, a second and smaller "buzz" placed above, and in front of the first, cuts the slice, which otherwise might still hold fast the slab.

Just here comes in a beautiful piece of powerful mechanism. At the touch of a lever a stout beam, armed with iron teeth, rises by the forest Titan's side. It snatches the wood, and in less time than words can tell it the log is tumbled over, and the framework, rushing back and forth with amazing speed, has driven the edges of the tree athwart the saws, until the once rough stick stands forth a symmetrical square. Then, in another instant it is shifted before the "gang," a set of ordinary upright saws placed an inch apart, and often with thirty or even thirty-five blades. Below an ordinary circular planer revolves in front of the gang and smoothes the lower edges of the boards. The immense piece of timber is run through in a few moments, and what was five minutes before a rough tree trunk has passed into the inch boards of commerce. Nor does the work end here; for the slabs are passed to a new machine, which grasps them with almost human intelligence, and whatever part of them can be made so become laths. Other machines take the harder woods, ash, elm, or oak, and convert them with equal speed into staves, barrel heads or shingles; and finally the otherwise useless debris passes to the furnaces to feed the fires of the engine. There is seen little or no sawdust around the Saginaw lumber mills for the reason that it is all used for the furnace flames; and, in general, the cycle of utilities by which one branch of the great industry is made to feed or supplement another seems as rounded as human ingenuity can make it.

Sometimes, particularly in the more modern mills, the routine as described is varied by lifting the logs from the [illegible] on an endless chain, [illegible] of minor mechanism [illegible] by which the [illegible]

APACHE, ZUNI AND RANGER.

The Strange Contrasts the Oldest American City Shows.

At an early day of the Santa Fe tertio-millennial celebration the crowd pressed forward into the street while the Mescaleros Apaches, three abreast, passed by. Their frames and muscles would have delighted an athlete—heavy, massive heads with strong, virile features set firmly on giant frames. Their browny chests stood out almost straight from robust shoulders, and they came gliding along with a firm but noiseless step, making no dust in a street where a single gust of wind would have beclouded. Red and black pigment lay in broad stripes across their copper-colored faces. The faces of nearly all of them were heavily reddened. A few had painted black and red patches on their cheeks, hightening the effect with a border of the contrasting colors. Their hats were but bands covered with white beads and plentifully plumed. The moguls of the tribe wore ear pendants of polished bone as long as a finger with chains attached to them, on which ornaments were strung. Their dress was of tight-fitting buckskin, decorated with strips of fur and bright leather. They carried each a spear reaching above their heads.

Several children, who attend the Indian school at Albuquerque, chubby little fellows with gray suits and cadet caps, marched manfully behind the sinew of the tribe and in the immediate charge of a sunblacked patriarch with a bone tube from which he blew at frequent intervals a half dozen notes suggestive of the clarionet, but most unearthly.

The rear of the party was brought up by an ear-ringed white scout with a full cartridge belt exposed and the tribe's dwarf in the toggery of the giants and carrying besides a circular shield, with a painted center like a bull's eye and a whitish sheepskin body. The dwarf's face was seamed with age as though he was brought along to show that other things besides Santa Fe might be old and little.

The Zuni Indians followed the Apaches in the general procession. It was a bitter dose for the Zunis to take, for the two tribes are not friendly, the Zunis frowning on the nomadic mountain life that has made the Apaches of giant frame but of brains that in years past have turned only to the hunt and war path. The physical contrast between the two tribes was striking, the Zunis, many of them stooped-shouldered and shuffling along in duck leggings and dark, tight-fitting shirts, but with no facial or other decorations, and their long, straggling hair falling to their sunken breasts and hollow backs. With them marched their young white leader, Lieut. Frank Cushing, in a neat gray suit and broad-brimmed straw hat and carrying at his side a leather pouch, the only mark, except his long hair, that singled him out as one of the tribe.

Behind the Zunis the dust rose from the tramping of Maj. Fountain's brown-skinned rangers, wearing straw hats whose brims a pair of long arms could hardly span, and with yellow facings on their blue shirts. Carbines were hung across their saddles and ugly-looking small weapons dangled from their belts. There was about their fashion of striding a horse a suggestion of swagger and readiness for hot business at short range. This was the crowd that organized to clean out the cattle thieves near the Mexican border, a task which they were splendidly successful in.

The exercises ended with the opening of the several buildings containing exhibits, after which the various organizations sought their quarters, the Zunis to bend over their industries that they have brought with them, and the Apache to stretch their huge limbs in the wigwams or bare their parched breasts to the mountain breeze, until the advancing day brought within the gates a caravan of roulette and spinning Jenny worthies, around whom the painted giants clustered with much satisfaction.

The afternoon was signalized by the arrival of the Governor of the San Juan Pueblos, accompanied by his squaw and papoose. They rode into town on a pair of burros, the squaw carrying the papoose on one arm and a whip for the donkey, of which she was not sparing, in the other hand. From the Governor's saddle hung two canvas bags of provisions. They were dressed in costume befitting their rank, the Governoress wearing a scarlet dress and ample hat of straw and the Governor's leggins being nearly covered by a white shirt that would have held two of him. This and a plug hat brushed the wrong way, put his dignity to a severe test, but he passed through the streets without a mishap and drove in at the exposition gates like a conquerer.—Santa Fe (N. M.) Correspondence Denver News.

To Avoid Sunstroke.

Sun-stroke is caused by excessive heat, and especially if the weather is "muggy." It is more apt to occur on the second, third, or fourth day of a heated term than on the first. Loss of sleep, worry, excitement, close sleeping rooms, debility, abuse of stimulants, predispose to it. It is more apt to attack those working in the sun, and especially between the hours of 11 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Have as cool sleeping-rooms as possible.

Avoid loss of sleep and all unnecessary fatigue. If working indoors, and where there is artificial heat, laundries, etc., see that the room is well-ventilated. If working in the sun wear a light hat (not black, as it absorbs the heat), straw, etc., and put inside of it on the head a wet cloth on a large green leaf; frequently lift the hat from the head and see that the cloth is wet. Do not check perspiration, but drink what water you need to keep it up, as perspiration prevents the body from being overheated. Have, whenever possible, an additional shade, as a thin umbrella when walking, a canvas or board cover when working in the sun.

When much fatigued do not go to work, but be excused from work, especially after 11 in the morning on very hot days, if the work is in the sun. If a feeling of fatigue, dizziness, headache, or exhaustion occurs, cease work immediately, lie down in a shady and cool place, apply cold cloths to and pour cold water over head and neck.

If anyone is overcome by the heat, send immediately for the nearest good physician. While waiting for the physician give the patient cool drinks of [illegible]

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 18[illegible]

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours.

SARAH C. WHITTIER.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skilfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that [illegible]6,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

HALL'S

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

FOSTER, MILBURN & CO., [illegible]

[illegible] all three persons. An elderly looking gentleman, dressed in a plain business [illegible] lady of nearly fifty years, clad in black, whose finely moulded features bore traces of an inward sorrow, and a lithe, supple lad of some sixteen years comprised a trio who have occupied more or less attention for the past nine years. They were the parents and brother of Charlie Ross, who nine years ago was abducted.

The grief of Mrs. Ross has not been assuaged by the lapse of all these years, and like her husband, she suffers untold anguish from the feelings of suspense in which they are at all times kept by the fact that they do not know whether the boy is alive or dead.

"Were we only assured of Charlie's death," said Mr. Ross, "it would be a relief, for we are tortured with thoughts of him being reared among thieves and outcasts. If he is alive he is surely living among vagabonds, because those who stole him—Moser and Douglass—could not have entrusted him to others than footpads and robbers. This is what causes us so much worriment, for I would rather have him dead than grow to lead a dishonest life. It is indeed a deep mystery to think that nine years could pass without any trace of the boy being discovered. His abductors were traced, but never has anything turned up concerning Charley himself. If he is alive my wife and I feel, somehow or other, that we will hear of or come across him some time. Why we entertain such a belief, or how we expect to find him, I cannot tell; but, nevertheless, we feel that, if alive, he will be restored to us some day.

"I am constantly in receipt of communications containing what the writers believe to be clues. I never fail to answer every letter thus addressed me and anything that has the faintest semblance of a clue I always work up, either personally or by correspondence. Only yesterday I received a letter from the interior of Ohio, containing a description of a boy supposed to be my son. These letters I have carefully filed away. The number of children supposed to have been kidnapped that I hear of in a year is simply surprising, and I presume there are many disconsolate fathers and mothers throughout the country, who, like us, are to-day mourning the disappearance of a loved child.

Isinglass in the Top of Straw Hats.

After years of search, a Boston man has discovered that mica, known to science as muscovite, and commonly called isinglass, possesses properties which so nearly render it impervious to heat as to place it far in advance of every other known material which has been used for such a purpose. The method is adopted by placing in the crown of the hat a sheet of mica from three to six inches in diameter, and variously shaped according to the fancy of the manufacturer, or the form and style of the trade-mark over which it forms a transparent shield. It can readily be seen that the mica serves three very important and appreciable uses, as it protects the silk lining from contact with pomade (and perspiration, if no cosmetic is used), protects the ornamental trade-mark from disfiguration, and serves as a preventive against sunstroke. That the mica tips impart a beauty of finish to the fashionable hats is by no means a disadvantage, and the fact that arrangements are already concluded by which these tips will be placed in half a million straw hats during the coming season is evidence of the value and utility of the invention, which can be applied at a slightly increased cost.

Picturesque Canton.

Miss Isabella Bird writes: "Canton is intoxicating from its picturesqueness, color, novelty and movement. As we sat at midday at the five-storied pagoda, which from a corner wall overlooks the Tartar city, and ever since, through this crowded week, I have wished that the sun might stand still in the cloudless sky and let me dream of gorgeous sunlight, light without heat; of narrow lines rich in color; of the glints of sunlight on embroideries and cloth of gold, resplendent even in the darkness; of hurrying and colored crowds in the shadow, with the blue sky, in narrow strips, high above; of gorgeous marriage processions, and the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; of glittering trains of mandarins; of funeral processions, with the wail of hired mourners clad in sackcloth and ashes; of the Tartar city, with its pagodas; of the hills of graves, great cities of the dead outside the walls, fiery under the tropic blue; of the 'potter's field,' with its pools of blood and crosses of crucifixion—now, as on Calvary, symbolical of shame alone; of the wonderful river life, and all the busy, crowded, costumed hurry of the streets, where blue banners hanging here and there show that in those houses death has stilled some busy brains forevermore.

The Prodigal Son.

On Monday evening there returned to Dover a young man to visit his parents who had been away from home for six years. He has changed in his personal appearance somewhat since he left, being thinner. Upon the arrival of the train he met his father in the store of his cousin, and bought a large lot of goods from him. He then left the store, the father not even thinking that he had been talking to his own son. Upon reaching the dwelling house, his mother, sister, and aunt were sitting in the porch. He asked if Mr. —— lived there, and said he would take a seat and wait for his return home. This cool assumption somewhat astonished the ladies, but when it was followed up a few minutes later by asking if they had any cold meat or bread, it was a bomb in the camp, and he was politely informed that "business men are generally supposed to stop at the hotel." He said that was true, but he was "strapped," as any person was liable to be at some time. Thus it went on, until finally the young man laughed. His aunt exclaimed, "Why, Clarrie, I believe it's you!" And sure enough it was, after six years' absence in the West. It is but fair to say that the family had a letter from him but a short time ago, stating that he expected to start further West before his return home, and they were not expecting him, hence their failure even to think of the boy.—Dover (Del.) Sentinel.

Give the Bicycle Room According to its Strength.

Bicycle riders may take encouragement from the decision of a Washington judge who has fined a man $10 for deliberately riding down and breaking the machine of a rider of a bicycle. SCROFULA and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

[illegible] CHILD OF THE STREETS.

CHAPTER I.

"[illegible] A CHILD OF THE STREETS."

In the upper room of one of the houses in a densely-populated neighborhood of Covent Garden sat a girl cross-legged on the uncarpeted floor, singing softly to herself over her task of mending a very tattered, faded petticoat. It was a long, low apartment, with a slanting, smoke-blackened ceiling, close under which three narrow apertures, doing the work of windows, admitted a very small portion of heaven's light.

Face and voice and attitude indicated a placid content with present condition and prospects, notwithstanding the scanty clothing the girl wore, and the broken furniture of the room she inhabited.

In spite of all its defects, this garret had been her home ever since she could remember anything, and would remain so, just as long as she could earn enough to pay the very modest rent.

Her age was sixteen, her face exquisitely pretty, and what is more remarkable in a girl of her "caste," both intellectual and refined; for Mysie O'Farrell was only a waif, a stray, a child of the street, a little London lass, who lived from hand to mouth on the chance wages which her singing earned from passers-by on the pavement.

One stormy winter evening, some sixteen years back, a woman, with a baby, a whisky-bottle, and a brogue, had come to this same house seeking a night's shelter from the wind and rain. Judging by her appearance, the landlady reckoned her up as a tramp, but admitted her.

Here it was the weary woman ceased from her wanderings, and made her home in the garret, under the slanting roof. A malignant fever, prevalent in the neighborhood all through one dreary season, numbered the poor Irishwoman among its victims, and little golden-haired Mysie O'Farrell was left to fight the battle of life as best she might in the heart of crowded, cruel London.

So the girl grew up to womanhood. Fortunately from her mother she had inherited the rare gift of a singing-voice, thanks to which she had so far been always able to keep a roof over her head, and a loaf in the cupboard. And the future was left to take care of itself.

At last her task was finished, needle and thimble laid aside, and the once bright-hued garment donned. The wearer glanced down at its faded folds with a smile.

Between two of the windows, nailed up against the wall, was a small looking-glass in a cracked frame. Before this mirror stood Mysie O'Farrell, critically scanning her own image, as she twisted her long, fair hair into one heavy coil, fastening it up with a broad bit of ribbon that once was blue. Her beauty was the effect of the combination of Spanish languor and Irish vivacity, to which might be added a dash of native drollery.

A loud knocking at the door of the room startled the girl in the midst of her toilette.

"Come in," she said without turning her head, and a boy entered who seemed to have been well acquainted with "poverty, hunger, and dirt."

"I say, Mysie, how late you are—and after sayin' you'd be outside the Colonnade at five. I waited ever so long, keeping a sharp look-out right and left. But it's as well I was there, as it turned out, and I'll tell you why. I'm just in luck's way, and so are you, I reckon."

"Have you really had good luck, Gabriel? I am so glad, dear. Tell me all about it. It's a good thing you just came in. I was going out."

"I should have been savage if I'd missed you. Just listen. As I was standin' under the arch—our arch, you know—piping away at some tune, more for the sake of passing time than to turn a copper, suddenly I felt a hand laid slap on my shoulder. I was just openin' my mouth, thinkin' it was one o' them meddlesome bobbies, when I cocked my eye round the corner, and saw a tall chap with a [illegible] face staring at me.—'What d'ye want,' says I to him. 'What is your occupation, employment, trade—that is, how do you earn your living, my lad?' he asks, still keeping his hand on my shoulder, as if he feared I'd cut and run afore he had his say out. 'What's that to you?' I replies, for I thought it precious cool of his popping such a question and just like his cheek. 'Don't be rude, my lad,' he went on, no ways offended; 'I only want to help you. I heard you singing just now. You have a fine voice, although it is quite untrained, I see [illegible], but capable of much.' [illegible] a lot more as I couldn't [illegible] to go on, 'I ask your [illegible] in order to tell you that [illegible] in the way of earning an [illegible] by means of your voice, [illegible] be steady, persevering [illegible] and a deal more [illegible] which, by the [illegible] as it [illegible] the archway, [illegible] of passers-by, [illegible] to save bother. 'Dear me, bless my soul, a family gift evidently,' replied the old chap, raising his eyebrows. 'Now, look here, my lad; I should like to be of use to you, and I should not wish to see so much fine material wasted in the streets.' Well, he told me to go to him to-morrow and take you. I gave him my name, and he gave me this card. See: 'Signor Brunetti, Finchley-road, St. John's Wood.' Then he cut off like a rocket. So now, Miss Mysie, that's what's called luck, ain't it?"

This was Gabriel Cole.

Who his parents were, whence they had come, and whither they had gone, no one seemed to know or care.

His own early recollections came to a standstill in the retrospective road at a time when he himself must have been about six years of age, at which period of his life he asserted that he had sat all day long by the side of a woman, whom he supposed must have been his mother, and helped her to cook chestnuts under an old railway arch somewhere near a river.

He was a handsome lad when he liked to wash off the stain of the city's smoke and the dust of the streets—a black-eyed, sallow-skinned, fierce kind of beauty.

Such as he was anyhow, he satisfied Mysie O'Farrell, who had loved this dark-eyed boy, first by habit, later on by inclination, but in one way or another ever since they had met as children on the London pavement, and sworn eternal friendship over the first handful of coppers they had earned by their joint singing.

Gabriel was well acquainted with sin in all her many hideous shapes.

He loved the little girl who had grown up by his side, as a man must inevitably love what is beautiful and pure.

His affection for her was perhaps the only true vein in his selfish, pleasure-loving character; it held her sacred in his eyes, but did not prevent him from pursuing other women, of a very opposite type to Mysie, when he was away from her; yet she, too, in her way, perhaps by habit, perhaps by strange affinity of souls, had grown a necessity to his existence. He did not see that the real secret lay in the genuine love of the one for him which all the others lacked.

"Well, ain't you glad, Mysie? I think we're in for a reg'lar good thing."

"Oh, Gabriel, I am glad you met that kind man, and I hope he may help us to get along, only——" and Mysie paused and puckered her white brow doubtfully.

"Only what, now? Come, out with it."

"Only I wish you hadn't said I was your sister. I shall have to go on telling the same lie every time I see this man, and I'm certain some day to let it out."

"All right, so you can later on, don't ye see."

Mysie only sighed.

"Some day," said Gabriel, "when I've got a real good thing at the theatre, we'll go and get spliced, but there's no hurry about that business. We needn't wait for the parson's leave to love each other, eh?" and he drew down her pale, soft face, and looked closely and curiously into her large blue eyes, that met his so steadfastly.

"I don't quite understand you, Gabriel dear. Of course I sha'n't wait for anyone to give me leave to love you. I have always done that, and always shall—but, of course, to be your wife you will have to marry me."

"Could you live without me, Mysie? I mean would you be content all your life to be no more to me than you are to-day? Would you be satisfied to be my sister always, as now, and see another woman my wife?"

He watched her changing expression narrowly, perhaps anxiously.

"Well," she said at last, and a tender, far-away look stole into her blue eyes, and made them dim and soft, "that's difficult to say, Gabriel. I know what I mean, but the words won't come. I shouldn't like to see another girl your wife, and I'd rather come and live with you altogether, because I could do everything for you—mend your clothes, and cook your meals, and all that, and it would be nice to see you pleased. But still, if you didn't wish it, and didn't care to marry me right off, I should be happy enough going on as we are doing now; shouldn't you?"

Gabriel laughed and kissed her pretty bright hair.

"Oh, then you can be jealous, eh? But come along; we must be off. We'll take a new track to-night, and come home with no end of coppers, to a jolly spread. Come on!"

And Mysie crossed her plaid shawl over her worn dress and drew her veil over her face.

So they stole down the rickety, broken stairs and let themselves out into the crowded, gas-lit streets, to earn the price of a supper, or each go hungry back to bed.

* * * * * *

A few days later, Gabriel and Mysie found themselves at the door of the house of Signor Brunetti, director of the Royal Olympian Opera Company.

The trial of their voices did not last very long. It took place in the presence of the director and that great master of the vocal art, Andrew Brevet, who, at its close, rising from the piano, thus addressed them:

"You can go now, but remember, you must be with me punctually every day at the hour I shall indicate. Signor Brunetti will provide you with money and clothes, which will render it unnecessary for you to sing in the streets. You quite understand, that must not happen again. Some day you can repay him if you succeed. Be sure, be punctual, and steady."

"Good-bye, Miss Cole," added Brunetti, as he held open the door for the pair to pass through, fixing his bold blue eyes on Mysie's face as she shyly bade him farewell.

"Well, was I mistaken this time? Will they do?" asked Brunetti, turning to his companion when they were alone.

"I cannot yet say, so much depends on the personal energy of each. I believe the girl has genius. We shall see. The boy has a glorious organ, but I think he will not consent to drudgery. With his handsome face, and natural knack of [illegible] and his [illegible] public [illegible]. He will be popular [illegible]. I don't suppose he would care for [illegible] is more in the line of his [illegible] [illegible] having [illegible] Gabriel Cole and [illegible]

[illegible] tilted over his eyes, and his hands in his pockets, the picture of discontent. He looked hot and bored and cross. In real life, it is said, only lunatics talk to themselves, and none save poets, reformers, and lovers have been known to soliloquize. Nevertheless, had Cuthbert Newen given expression to his sentiments as he sat on the beach, unshaded from the July sun, his words would run thus, I fancy:

"Beastly place this; no music hall, no theatre; not a decent looking girl to be met from the pier to the cliff. It's all very well to breathe the ozone, but that can be done quite as well, and indeed, a deuce of a deal better, at Brighton. I like Brighton; it's healthy and wealthy. You get fashion and fine air combined, a sort of London-super-Mare. I've half a mind to return to town. Well, I'll wait and see what Curzon says when I go in."

"I say, Newen, old man, why won't you wear a straw hat and white flannels. You look warm. Nobody sees you here, we are out of our world—at least——"

Newen glanced up startled.

"That's just what I complain of, Curzon; but for all that I am not going to dress like a hop-grower out for a holiday, even here. No. Vive la mode, I say. But what's doing at the Dolphin? Any fresh arrivals?"

"Yes, indeed; and that's what I came to communicate. Something worth looking at."

"Who's the attraction? Age, gender, name, and address, if you please."

"I observe that you place 'age' in the first order."

"Of course, my dear fellow. If it is a 'she,' and an old one, I have no further interest in her. I hate women past thirty. They ought to retire into homes for decayed gentlewomen."

"Well, this one, in particular, is young—very young."

"Good, then she won't be old before I am tired of her. Proceed: name and address?"

"Fleur de Marie!"

"Who may she be when she's at home? A French flower-girl, or a vestal virgin?"

"Do you mean to tell me you have never heard of Fleur de Marie? But then, to be sure, you were in Algiers when she came out last season. She's the very best thing in the singing line since Grisi, believe me."

"What officious godfather christened her 'Fleur de Marie?' Probably her name is really Betsy Brown."

"What sacrilege to the Queen of Song. No; her true name is Mysie O'Farrell, I heard. On the night of her debut as Marguerite, a certain royal personage in Her Majesty's box was heard to remark, 'Such a face as hers must Eugene Sue have seen when he wrote of the Fleur de Marie.' The saying was caught up, as princes' speeches usually are, and the name stuck to her."

"When did this 'star' appear in the Herne Bay heaven?"

"By the 11:26 down. No end of luggage and a companion. Are you coming indoors? I believe the fair one is on view in the coffee-room."

"So she may be for all I care. I never run after celebrities. I like to get a woman into a corner all to myself, and not one who is looking over her shoulder at some other man instead of listening to me. I prefer ring-doves to lions."

"Ah, well; I must be off, for I've got let into a trip to Canterbury. 'Ta-ta,'" and with a laugh he turned and strode up the beach, humming as he went—a broad-built, blue-eyed, bronzed Englishman, of medium height, and captain of the good ship Nimrod.

The dressing gong had sounded through the Dolphin Hotel some ten minutes when two men entered the hall and looked at the clock.

"As I thought, we are late," said the captain, and he hurried up the wide stair-case, leaving his more careless companion to follow at his leisure and pleasure.

At as slow a pace as if he were taking part in the minuet de la cour, and as if there were no such words as appetite and dinner in his dictionary, Cuthbert Newen sauntered down the long, dimly-lighted passage, and entered his room to dress.

Cuthbert Newen was a dandy from the crown of his close-cut, curly, dark head, to the soles of his well-shod, well-shaped feet.

Whether his character was as effeminate as his tastes remained to be proved. Hitherto his career had been one of Fortune's favorites. He had seen the best part of the world, but had never for one moment roughed it.

"I say, Newen, are you ready? Soup's a thing of the past, and if we don't mind we shall miss the fish. I came in to tell you a bit of news. No end of a 'go.' As good as a play!"

"What's up, now? Another prima donna arrived?" asked Newen carelessly, as he closed his door and followed his friend down the passage.

"Now that's a good shot, as it happens. I told you the Fleur de Marie was here. Well, by the next train down comes her great rival in all her war-paint, the queen of contraltos."

"What, the Leopardi?"

"Yes, the 'Leopardess' herself. Quite by chance, I believe. Of course, the manager of the hotel was aware of the coming collision; but he knew better than to let the cat out of the bag. Why, it's the making of the man. Half London will be down here presently. I believe the tenor, Gabriel, is expected to-morrow. He is always to be found in the shadow of one of the fair ladies. Poor chap! I always pitied him so much. Naturally he must admire them both, being, as they are, beauties of such contrast. He must feel like an ass between two bundles of hay. Doubtless he has a rare old time of it with them, for I believe even the immaculate Fleur de Marie is, like London, at his feet. It's a good thing that the enmity of rivalry is all on the one side between these women, or the hotel wouldn't hold them. Come on, the Leopardi isn't down yet. Probably she's powdering! Fleur de Marie is up at the other end. Lucky dog, your seat makes her your vis-a-vis. Mine is on the opposite side. I must console myself with her rival—here she comes."

And Captain Curzon stepped aside to let her pass.

A murmur among the waiters, a slight [illegible] the table, and she had swept into the [illegible] chair near the window which had been reserved for her.

Newen took his seat, and after glancing [illegible]

Newen drew a deep breath as he leaned back in his chair, and let his plate pass untasted.

He noted, with the keen observation of a lover of women, each excellent item of her beauty—her soft, full, flaxen hair, gathered into a gold-silk net like a mesh of sunbeams; her large, dreamy eyes, blue and bright as sapphire gems, her red, small mouth, her slim, snow-white throat, circled with a triple-twisted thread of shining pearls.

"I suppose that's what's called sweet simplicity," sneered the Leopardi in a loud whisper to her neighbor, Captain Curzon, staring contemptuously through her jewelled pince-nez at her rival's delicate costume of Indian muslin high up to the throat with its cascade of cretonne lace and shell-pink ribbons.

Cuthbert Newen started and glanced at the speaker.

Lorita Leopardi was a fine dark woman—a red and white beauty, with full face, and figure inclining to embonpoint, just such as Reubens put into his pictures, lips like pouting poppy-leaves, hair black as night, eyes as dark as it is possible for eyes to be that are only brown. A bad, sensual face, at once revolting and attractive.

"Are you one of Lorita's admirers?" asked Curzon, as they sat over wine and cigars, when the ladies had quitted the room.

"No, there's too much of her."

"Can't you have too much of a good thing?"

"Query. You say she is a fine creature—so is a tigress."

"But doesn't she dress well?"

"That's decidedly an open question in her case. She leaves nothing to the imagination."

"Come now, you are too hard on her."

"Better than being too soft, which wouldn't pay."

"What do you say to Fleur de Marie?"

"Nice-looking little thing, as blondes go," replied Newen, leisurely sipping his claret.

"Nice-looking, indeed! What a critical chap you are. Why, she's a pearl!"

"Hush, they are singing. Let's join them. It is worth hearing."

They lingered at the open door to listen. Newen loved music as part of that passion for the beautiful which possessed him.

A few simple chords struck by fingers "as fair as the lilies," and then it broke forth, as if impatient of control, that voice which flooded the room with melody and arrested even the steps of the passers-by on the pavement outside, who stopped spell-bound by the window.

The one most keenly alive to the power and purity of that voice experienced a sense of relief when it was silent. It was indeed a novel sensation for him, the blasé, world-weary man, to feel his heart throbbing in such a tumult of mingled pleasure and pain.

She had chosen that pretty simple old ballad, which all English girls know so well, "On the banks of Allan water."

The clear, bell-like tones fell on the air like drops of some divine essence of sound. At the close of the song no one applauded, no one thought of praising the singer, and so far from calling for an encore, nearly all those present felt that one ballad sung by that one voice was just about as much as they could bear, and already several heads had turned aside.

Fleur de Marie rose from the piano, and quietly bowing to the assembled company, floated down the room, her delicate draperies floating after her as she went.

Her companion followed, bidding "good-night" right and left.

The Leopardi, who had been lying back in the depths of a divan, listening with half-closed eyes, now looked up over the top of her black satin fan, and showed all her brilliant white teeth as she said:

"Was there ever so sad a song? I must own that, for my part, I like to leave a smile with my audience, and not a tear."

So saying she moved towards the piano. She was determined to dispel the effect produced by her rival's song; so, with a couple of crashing chords and a laugh, she threw back her head and dashed into a wild Jacobite ballad, entering fully into the spirit which breathes through every word.

Her voice was too perfect to fall short of its aim. A burst of applause rang through the room as the singer paused, flushed, triumphant, and breathless. Then, almost before the excitement which she caused subsided, she broke forth again into that inimitable piece of musical mutiny, "La Marseillaise."

The listeners rose to their feet and rushed towards the piano, with one accord clapping their hands. Outside, on the pavement, the crowd that had gathered in the moonlight shouted loud hurrahs and called for encores. But Lorita, though she laughed, well pleased, pleaded fatigue.

Fleur de Marie and her sad-sweet beautiful ballad, were, for the moment, forgotten. After all, the world has an April heart, and it liketh better to laugh than to weep.

"Come, now, I must own that's more to my taste," said Curzon, his debonair face once more bright and smiling. "There's trouble enough in this world without singing dirges."

CHAPTER III.

Certainly Herne Bay was hardly to be recognized. A great inland wave from the outside world had transformed its quiet sea-washed shore into a fashionable promenade.

"Who is that creature in the crimson jersey and Tam o' Shanter, with the Japanese umbrella?" drawled Mrs. Somerset East, looking up languidly from the depths of her sky-blue sun-bonnet at the dark-eyed personage stationed behind her basket-chair, who happened to be a foreign prince incog. for the season. He levelled his eye-glass in the direction of her ladyship's outstretched parasol.

"That's the Leopardi. How did you fail to recognize her? She is a fine creature," he incautiously admitted.

"Ye-e-es, but how vilely she dresses, like a [illegible], and, do you know, [illegible] I really have been told on the best authority that the creature smokes [illegible]. Is it not [illegible] and horribly disgusting—so unwomanly [illegible] [illegible] do you know him, Rene? He haunts her like a shadow. He doesn't look like one of her own set. Do you know him?" asked the fair critic, turning round and whispering.

"Yes; I met him at Lord Nockabout's in the spring. He's well known on the turf; did a big thing at Ascott last June, made quite a pot, I believe, on 'Tetrarch.' He goes by the name of Nick Newen."

"Is that Cuthbert Newen?" exclaimed Mrs. Somerset East, turning round to stare as only a pretty and well-born woman can do with impunity. "Ah, I know his father, proud as Lucifer. It's to be hoped his son is not thinking of marrying that pretty little prima donna; but of course he won't."

"They say she refused Sir Harry Lothair last season."

"Don't believe it," was the lady's prompt response. "I can't imagine how men can run after that sort of women, however pretty they may be. Just look at Newen—why, positively, he peers into her face in a way I would never allow, I know, and looks as if he would like to swallow each word that falls from her lips. Just see, they are moving away now. No, they are turning back this side—hush!" and Mrs. East raised her Chinese pagoda-like parasol, and lowered it over her eyes that she might stare through its broad fringe of lace at the Fleur de Marie, whom in her heart of hearts she envied, and whose costume and coiffure she invariably copied, although, as the young singer passed, she drew in her silken skirts and gathered them round her feet.

Yes, it was true, as the fashionable magpie had said, Newen had haunted her like her shadow ever since her arrival at the Dolphin a fortnight before.

He knew it, but he also felt that he had nevertheless advanced not one step nearer to her real self, in spite of his best efforts, in spite of walks and talks and excursions into the country, and moonlit converse on the pier, where the world gathered to enjoy the coolness of the night hours, to the sound of dream-like music, and stirring of plashing waves.

He was looking—nay, peering into her face, trying to read in her calm blue eyes the expression he had so earnestly tried to call forth, but in vain.

He only so far could flatter himself she was his friend, and that in a most aggravatingly frank fashion. Platonics are very unpalatable to a lover, and such, undoubtedly, was Newen.

Yes; from that first evening, that first look from eye to eye, he had felt she was his fate for weal or woe.

Now, however, he was not so sanguine. Either this Fleur de Marie had already given her love to another, or else she was a most finished coquette, only feigning indifference to fan the flame of his passion. He would not own to himself that she might be every way free and yet refuse him. Such a thought hurt his pride. Anyhow, he was determined to put an end to the uncertainty on the first opportunity. He longed to throw himself at her feet.

"All the world seems here, and I know no one," said Fleur de Marie, turning her face towards the gay-colored moving mass, ebbing and flowing like a human tide on the sands below—for they were now standing on the promenade.

"Why, here is one of your friends coming down from the cliff," he replied, catching sight of Lorita, surrounded as usual by a body-guard, with whom she was laughing and talking noisily while she descended the slope, using her parasol as a walking stick.

"She is no friend of mine, Mr. Newen." There was no scorn or malice in the tone, only, perhaps, a shade of sadness, for which her cavalier could not account.

"Can you say as much for her companion, mademoiselle?"

The words had scarcely left his lips when he regretted his speech. "She will think me impertinent," he thought, and so she evidently did. He saw her sweet face flush from brow to chin at his words, then she turned to him and replied quietly:

"I shall cancel that remark of yours from my memory. It's unworthy of you, Mr. Newen. Come, Miss Hurst, it is past one o'clock; the band has ceased playing, and it is hot. Let us go back to lunch."

There was nothing for Newen to do but to raise his hat and drop behind. As he did so, the Leopardi and her party passed the little group, looking back over her shoulder with a smile of unmistakable meaning, and a glance at Newen out of her bold black eyes which heightened her rival's color.

There were half-a-dozen men with this woman, but one walked by her side, carried her gloves and handkerchief, and seemed to engross all her attention.

Only this one did Fleur de Marie notice. His face was turned away, but she felt that he had seen her as he went by, and the bright flush faded from her cheeks, leaving her very pale.

Lorita Leopardi had been forced to own, although only to herself, that, on the stage, Fleur de Marie was as far above her as the still shining stars are above the passionate, restless sea; but off the stage she had her revenge, the sweetest to her because the bitterest to another—a royal revenge! Had she not stolen her rival's lover, so that now he was ready to do any mad thing for her sake or at her bidding?

And Lorita enjoyed this triumph as only coarse natures such as hers can.

But Lorita had little power of discrimination. It never occurred to her to suppose that Love, once pure and true, may scorch its wings in the fire of an unworthy worship, and fall to earth; and yet that love may rise to new life from the ashes of folly. She judged others, and the feelings of others, by her own standard.

Gabriel walked by her side silent and sullen.

Lax as were his morals, and blunted as his sense of delicacy had been by his earlier career, he was conscious now of some shame for his cowardly avoidance of Fleur de Marie.

He had half a mind to go back and speak to her, for in his inmost heart, though perhaps he hardly knew it then, he still felt there was no woman in the world like his old love and girl-comrade, Mysie O'Farrell.

How beautiful she was, fair as a lily [illegible] pure, and she cared for him—for [illegible] [illegible] which he must dance perforce, kept him about her like any spaniel, to fetch and carry; now petted him, now neglected. Yes, held in bondage by the power of her beauty, such as it was.

He was no more to her than fifty others who carried her fan, "stood" her suppers, threw her bouquets, gave her gold, and yet when she would, she could cajole him into the belief that while she accepted gifts and gold from others, from him she took only love.

And Fleur de Marie, sweet Mysie O'Farrell, was all his own, as true as death, and as pure as angels. And yet—yet what?

One by one Lorita's followers had dropped away in despair of getting a word or a look, while Gabriel monopolized her attention. At the door of the Dolphin they came to a standstill. His rooms were at the Brunswick.

She looked at him, tapping her foot petulantly on the stone steps.

"If you want to lunch with me, can't you say so? But I don't think I want you. You are stupid and dull to-day, and why is it? You can be so brilliant when you choose. I like to be amused, so, as you have lost your tongue, go and buy me a new book, and be quick back, like a good boy—I like to read while I am eating. It's a case of double digestion. Go!"

"Then may I stay when I return?"

"Well, we'll see; depends on the book you bring. Mind, it must be chock full of fun. I like to be kept on the broad grin. Go on," and she playfully dealt him no gentle blow on the knuckles of his outstretched hand with her parasol.

"If you send me about my business when I do come back, I shall take the book with me, mind."

"All right, wait and see. We'll square matters when you bring the book. Don't be long," and she turned into the hotel.

Benedict Bachelors.

Of all the insidious
Temptations invidious,
Contrived by the devil for pulling men down,
There's none more delusive,
Seductive, abusive,
Than the snare to a man with a wife out of town.

He feels such a delightfulness,
Stay-out-all-night-fulness,
I own it with pain!
A bachelor rakishness,
What-will-you-take? ishness,
Next-day's-headache-ishness,
None can explain!

His wife may be beautiful,
Tender and dutiful,
'Tis not that her absence should cause him delight;
But the cursed opportunity,
Baleful immunity,
Scatters his scruples as day scatters night.

He feels whisky-and-water-full,
Rapine-and-slaughter-ful,
Nothing-he-ought-to-ful,
To his toes' ends,
So bachelor-rally-some,
Quite corps-de-ballet-some,
Make stories-tally-some,
With wicked friends.

If the West Shore road gets hold of the Syracuse and Phœnix road and it goes through, Fulton will receive decided benefits. As it is now the D. L. & W. road has a monopoly of all the business between that village and Syracuse, which is considerable. [Syracuse Herald.

This is a fact. The D. L. & W. road has a decided monopoly of Fulton and Syracuse business at present. To and from that city the passenger fare is ninety-five cents—including omnibus fare—or nearly four cents per mile. If the Phœnix road is completed the fare will doubtless be put down to at least seventy-five cents between Fulton and Syracuse. The Ontario & Western and West Shore roads are running some of the finest rolling stock in the country over their roads, their passenger coaches being nearly equal to palace cars.

A Reply to Mr. Naish.

To the Editor of the FULTON TIMES:

In the first place Mr. Naish called upon me I think the latter part of June, '83, and wanted to buy our cheese, and offered a smaller price than we were getting for the cheese or than we did get the following sale day, he representing that he had bought several other factories. We did not see fit to sell to him then. I soon learned that the factories which he claimed to have bought did not sell to him.

I heard no more from him till the 13th of July when he called on me again. I told him that if he would attend the sale and pay us more than Osborn he could have the cheese, as we wanted to get the most money for it we could. I also stated that unless some one would pay us more than O, he would have the cheese.

I next saw Naish at the sale on the 16th as he states. He offered me 9¼c., representing that that would be the highest price paid that night. I told him no, that he could not have it for that price. I then saw Osborn and he agreed to take our cheese and give us the highest price paid on the market. I saw Naish in about half an hour later. He then offered me 9⅜ cents. I told him I would let him know in a few minutes, which I did. Osborn took the cheese for 9⅜ cents. I did not say he could have the cheese unless some one raised the bid. I had previously told Naish that Osborn would be entitled to the cheese as he had the May cheese, unless some one else would pay more than O. would. Soon after the 16th, at another sale, Naish told me he would not buy the Gilberts Mills cheese, and that he would never make me another offer. Since that time I have said nothing to him about cheese until the 27th of August, when he asked me if I had sold our cheese, I replied that I had, and stated the price as 9 or 9⅛ cents; it was uncertain at that time what the price would be. It is always understood that when O. has the cheese I am to have the top of the market for the same. I would say that I am not under Osborn's thumb nor any one else's.

I work for the interest of the patrons of the Gilberts Mills factory and not for Naish. I think it is best to sell where we can get our cash and no comeback, as [illegible] that has sold to N. has had [illegible] quite an amount for shortage, etc. I have been told by some of the salesmen that they did better [illegible] sold to O. than to Naish, as O. always deals fair with them. As [illegible] business qualifications, I have [illegible] have lived here for [illegible] well known, and [illegible] of the factory seem to think [illegible] of selling cheese, as I sold [illegible] last year, and was reappointed [illegible] which confidence [illegible] the best I [illegible] to say more [illegible]

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Business in the cheese market Monday was quite lively, although the offering was light, the market showed a better feeling and the price paid for cheese was in advance of what it was last week. The product was quoted firm; Fancy colored at 10¾ cents; fancy white at 10¾ cents; and night skims at 8¾ cents.

AT UTICA.

The cheese market was quite lively Monday owing to the advance of a cent a pound. It is said that a few lots among the "private terms" sold at a higher figure than anything named, although no such quotation was given in. Two small lots, bargained for last week and numbering 100 boxes were bought at 9c. The other transactions were as follows: 8,241 boxes, 69 lots, at 10½c.; 188, in 3 lots, at 10⅝c.; 2,833, in 19 lots, at 10⅜c., 38 in one lot at 10⅞c., and 1,346, in 10 lots, at private terms. Sales, 10,129; commissions, 857; total, 10,970 boxes. Ruling price, 10½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The market Monday was firm, and an advance of [illegible] a pound on cheese [illegible]

[illegible] Ocean Grove [illegible] had not to go to India for [illegible] their own doors, nearly one-half of the people neglecting public worship.

A new church has just been dedicated at Atlanta Highlands, N. J., another proof of the rapid growth of this popular religious resort on the Jersey coast. Three years ago there were not more than half a dozen dwellings between this place and the twin lights of Navesink. To-day a flourishing village, with churches, schools, mammoth hotels, a fire department, newspaper, icecream saloons, and one of the finest camp-meeting grounds in the country may be seen on the bluffs.

The Boston Post says there are over 151,000 Catholic Indians in the United States, distributed throughout the following States and Territories. In the State of Maine, 1,400; in New York, 900; in Michigan, 4,000; in Wisconsin, 1,480; in Minnesota, 10,800; in Dakota, 2,000; in Kansas, 2,800; in Montana, 7,829; in the Indian Territory, nearly 100,000; in Arizona, 1,500; in Idaho, 700; in Washington Territory, more than 10,000; in Oregon, 1,600; in California, more than 6,000. The same authority states that more than 100,000 of the negroes of the United States are Catholics.

According to the Central Presbyterian, we are in a fair way to find ourselves all Jews before we know it. "Instead of dying out," says our Calvanistic cotemporary, "the Jewish body shows increasing vitality. They cannot be stamped out or swallowed up. They pass from country to country to become practically masters wherever they go. They get the land in Germany and Hungary, and grow rich in Russia; they are the great bankers of London and Paris, and the centres of European commerce. In ten (recent) years the Rothschilds furnished $100,000,000 in loans to England, Austria, Prussia, France, Russia, and Brazil. They increase faster than Christians, and of every 100,000 persons only 80 Jews die to 143 Christians.

Fashion Notes.

Scarf drapery is in the ascendant.

Jetted Jerseys are in preparation for the fall.

Narrow velvet ribbon is a fashionable garniture.

Diaphanous materials are greatly reduced in prices.

Pongee underwear is growing in favor with the ladies.

Inch-wide velvet ties for bonnets are getting in favor.

Fine braid bonnets are selling as low as ten cents each.

The Russian redingote is well adapted for traveling.

The pongee parasol is much in favor, because of its lightness.

Very little jet trimming is seen, but its revival is rumored.

The Mother Hubbard is decorated with knittings of fancy laces and other ornaments.

White suits are selling in the leading establishments in the East at half price.

The fishwife poke bonnet is still retained for faces that find it becoming.

Ribbon velvet continues in vogue for woolen and silk fabrics.

Black silk and black cashmere will be more in favor than ever the coming fall.

Heavy white embroidery or lace is used to outline the vest of dresses, and also deep collar and cuffs.

The latest novelty for those who can afford it, and for several who cannot, is a chatelaine watch encrusted with diamonds.

On Thirty Days' Trial.

"How do you generally measure ten minutes?" persisted the lawyer.

The old sailor turned slowly in his bed and eyed his questioner. Then he turned back again and said indifferently: "Wall, sometimes wid a watch and sometimes wid a clock."

This made the lawyer a little mad. He jerked his watch from his pocket and said in a querulous, high-pitched voice: "Oh, you do, do you! Well, I'll tell you when to begin, and you tell me when ten minutes are up."

The sailor slyly winked at the lawyer on the other side, and he took in the situation in an instant and made no objection. The ex-judge stood with his back to a mantel on which a little clock was quietly indicating the time to the sailor, who lay facing it.

"Aye, aye," the sailor said, and remained silent.

After three minutes had passed the ex-judge became impatient and exclaimed: "See here, are you going to keep us here all day?" But the sailor made no answer. As five and six and seven minutes went by the lawyer became almost wild in his assumed anger at the man for keeping them so long beyond the time. But not until the hand of the clock was on the exact notch of ten minutes did the sailor speak. Then he said carelessly: "Guess the time mus' be 'bout up."

The judge put up his watch and sank back in his chair. "Well," he said, "of all men, dying or alive, that I ever saw, you can measure time the best."

It is said that the ex-judge does not even yet know what made the other lawyers double themselves over with laughter as they did at that last remark of his.—New York Tribune.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

Last Friday Mrs. Phœbe Miller who resides with her daughter, Mrs. William Parker, near the toll gate just outside of the limits of Oswego Falls was 82 years old. The event was celebrated by a call from a large number of Mrs. Miller's Fulton friends and a few hours were pleasantly passed.

Ed. Marvin was riding down Third street on his bicycle the other day and to prevent running over a man who did not hear his bell, he put on the brake and was thrown violently. He sustained no injury, but both wheels of the bicycle were badly bent. By the aid of S. B. Mead, the machine was repaired.

The fall term of school at District No. 1 opened Monday, with T. T. Hart as principal, Miss Ida Miller in the intermediate department in place of Miss Gertie Stephens, and Miss Lottie Poole in the primary department. Forty pupils were registered in the senior department, thirty in the intermediate and thirty-eight in the primary, making a total of 108.

Last Saturday the correspondent of the Oswego Daily Times stepped into the telephone exchange office in this village in a great hurry and wanted the use of the telephone to Oswego so as to send the result of the Republican caucus which was held on that day, but the correspondent was surprised when he called the Oswego Times and they answered we have a full account of the caucus and you are behind time. Such has been the case with most all the correspondence the Oswego Times has published—rather stale and about a week old. The Times has been informed that the [illegible] of the Oswego Times in [illegible] every day, and the [illegible] because they allow [illegible] false statements written [illegible] correspondents to be published [illegible] Times would con[illegible] to securing [illegible] news instead of [illegible] might [illegible]

The Baptist church, where the ceremony was celebrated, was very handsomely decorated with evergreen, wild clematis and cut flowers. At the end of each aisle was a floral arch and gate. Upon the entrance gate, which was attended by Master Johnnie Laycock, was a letter "S" of white Immortelles and upon the exit gate, which was attended by Miss Daisy McCrea, was a "D" of white Immortelles. In the background was a pyramidal bank of flowers in the centre of which was a floral harp, and on either side were handsome ornaments upon stands.

The bride was dressed in white organdie, trimmed very handsomely with valenciennes trimmed with orange blossams. The bridesmaids were Miss Nettie Hays of Syracuse and Miss Carrie Wright of Fulton who were dressed in white organdie, made up with handsome lace. The groomsmen were Mr. Homer Clapper of Syracuse and Mr. John Morton of Fulton, while Messrs Vinton Wright, F. D. VanWagenen, jr., C. W. Streeter and F. C. Bullock acted as ushers.

At about 2:30 p. m. the bridal party arrived at the church and were conducted to the altar by the ushers. Rev. L. Golden of Clinton then performed the ceremony in a very felicitous and impressive manner, and Miss Alma Richardson presided at the organ. A pleasant reception was given at the residence immediately after the ceremony. The bride was the recipient of many elegant as well as useful presents, among which were a beautiful silver water set from the Baptist church; a handsome illustrated copy of Shakespeare, from the teachers of the Union School with whom the bride has been associated as a co-worker; cut glass and silver berry dish, with solid silver berry spoon; a dozen silver fruit knives and one dozen silver knives and forks, cut glass water pitcher and glasses, a large oil painting, Pikes Peak clock of precious stones and minerals, fish scale necklace from Florida, an elegant ring set with pearls and turquois, beside table linen, etc, too numerous to mention.

Stereoscopic views of the interior of the church have been taken this morning by Mr. Dunbar.

More new Jewelry at the Bazaar this week.

Stoddard and Greene.

Nichols Hall was about one-half filled last evening with Fulton "sports" to witness a number of contests between local boxers and sluggers from the "city of salt," Hial Stoddard and "Bennie" Greene being the stars. There were lively bouts between young Sweet and Frank Pruner of Fulton, Myers and Taylor of Syracuse, Pete Conley and John Burke of Fulton, George Meyers and Jerry Ryan of Syracuse, and Foss Peters and Ed. Mack of Fulton. The boxing by these contestants was very clever and was hugely enjoyed by the audience. William Neff also entertained the audience with an exhibition of high kicking.

Then, after a laughable minstrel performance by Caffrey and Degan, Hial Stoddard and "Bennie" Greene stepped upon the platform amid uproarous applause. They appeared to be in excellent condition and had a lively set-to from first to last. Greene is a lightweight, but he is scientific and he pounded Stoddard about the head and neck to his heart's content, Stoddard generally responding in a more or less effective manner.

A new bridge has just been completed under the supervision of Highway Commissioner Gilhooly over Ox Creek in the south-eastern part of the town of Granby in place of the one that was burned three weeks ago. The new bridge has been built in a substantial manner, of 32 feet span with pine truss, similar to the one constructed by Commissioner Gilhooly near Washington Lampson's about two years ago.

Mr. Earl E. Safford of New York, and Miss Grace Morton will be united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents on Wednesday, September 12. Mr. Safford is a native of Fulton, but has been absent from town for a number of years. He has a fine grocery business established in New York. Miss Morton is a young lady of culture and fine social attainments, having won a merited local fame as an elocutionist. She will be a loss to Fulton society and especially to the society of the church of which she is a member. Miss Morton, as well as Miss Streeter who was married yesterday is a member of the Baptist church choir.

Rev. A. Smith, who has been pastor of the Fulton Free Methodist church for the past two years, preached his farewell sermon Sunday evening, having supplied this charge to the full limit allowed preachers of the Free Methodist persuasion. He stated that he had been well pleased with this charge and with the work that had been accomplished, although he regretted that still more had not been done. He said that he had never been more courteously treated, not only by his church society, but by the public at large, than he had been there. In the morning Rev. Wm. Hawks occupied the pulpit. The conference of the Free Methodist for this district meets at Alton, N. Y., to-day.

Don't fail to see those New [illegible]

[illegible] Special Dispatch to the Fulton Times.]

Pulaski, Sept. 4.—The District Convention of the Second Assembly District met here to-day, nominated a Member of Assembly and elected delegates to the Senatorial, Judicial, and State Conventions.

The Senatorial delegates, who are for Steele, are E. C. Seeley, A. D. Harrington, jr., T. M. Costello, G. R. Mosher, G. G. Thompson, E. Dixon, N. S. Stowell.

The Judicial delegates are S. C. Huntington, W. H. Steele, D. E. Wilds.

The State delegates are W. H. Baker, A. L. Sampson, J. S. Bulkley, Thos. W. Green.

Sweet was nominated for Member of Assembly on the fifth ballot. M

Five weeks ago The Times published a number of interviews with some of the leading Republican politicians which elicited considerable interest and comment both at home and abroad. To-day we present another talk with men of different political shades living in Fulton and Oswego county.

The eve of conventions is at hand and there are a few things political which are certainly to pass if the prophets can be relied upon. A northern Oswego county politician of the Republican stripe was met a few days since, and, by the way, the gentleman in question has occasion to travel around the county considerably and knows pretty well what is going on.

A MAN WHO KNOWS.

When questioned by The Times he professed not to be actively interesting himself in politics this fall but said he knew pretty well how matters stood.

"H. C. Howe will be nominated for County Judge," said he, "but the contest between Surrogate Skinner and Frank David is likely to be pretty close. David is working like a beaver, but Skinner has the prestige of sixteen years of excellent service and during that time the courts have never reversed one of his decisions."

"Do you think Cullinan will be a candidate this fall?"

"You may say that there is a probability that Mr. Cullinan will be a candidate. I am well satisfied that if Mr. Cullinan thought he could be elected he would be a candidate; that is if the nomination were to be made unanimous. I am satsfied that whether the nomination were to be made unanimous or not, if there were no other Republican candidate in the field, Mr. Cullinan would be elected by a good majority, much larger in fact than half-breeds anticipate. No candidate could be named who would draw as many Democratic votes as Patrick W. Cullinan!"

BIRDS OF A FEATHER WHO DO NOT FLOCK TOGETHER.

Strange as it may seem this is the opinion of a rampant half-breed, but all half-breeds are not of the same mind. Two of them who figure prominently in local Republican political circles were questioned upon the subject.

"How many votes would Cullinan get in Granby and Volney, if he were to run for Member of Assembly?" asked The Times man.

"How many? Well I can't say just how many," replied the half-breed, "but there would be a decided falling off in his vote. Republicans of this vicinity," he continued, have not forgotten a petition with 2,400 names on it which they once sent down to Albany to him and which he never allowed to see daylight."

The other half-breed referred to was questioned.

"What do you think of the Cullinan boom, which certain Oswego politicians are trying to push forward?"

"What do I think of the Cullinan boom? I don't think there should be any Cullinan boom."

"What proportion of the Republican votes would Cullinan get in the town of Volney and Granby?"

"About two-thirds."

"Not more than that?"

"Not one vote more!"

A BIRD OF ANOTHER FEATHER.

And stranger still, The Times man found a man who has always been a stalwart of the stalwarts and who has in times past taken off his coat and done hard work for Cullinan, but who now thinks that if he were to become a candidate he would not get as many votes as he did when he ran against Benson in 1881. "Because," said the stalwart, "he has been true to neither half-breed nor stalwart. I have a suspicion that he would like to be a candidate if he thought his election was sure, but I do not think he will be foolish enough to allow his name to be used."

"But he stands well with the Young Men's Republican Club of Oswego, does he not?"

"I don't understand how he can stand well with young Republicans in Oswego or anywhere else after his meddling policy in regard to the Oswego Board of Pension Examiners. I mean his action in getting Dr. Tully, a reputable young Republican ousted from the Board and getting Dr. Greene, a Democrat from Parish, appointed in his place."

THE VOLNEY CAUCUS.

The Republican caucus of the town of Volney met Saturday afternoon at Nichols hall. C. R. Nichols was made chairman. A committee composed of A. Bennett, E. M. Baldwin, Arvin Rice, J. D. Lasher and Gordon Ball was appointed to confer and report sets of delegates to the different conventions. After a short deliberation the committee reported as follows:

County—George M. Case, H. E. Nichols, Herman Hulett, J. S. Palmer, Zadoc B. Austin, John W. Weed, Alexander Bradford, William H. Blakeman, F. A. Gage, E. M. Baldwin, H. H. Kendrick.

District—W. G. Gage, J. W. Pratt, G. D. Ball, Fred Bennett, J. D. Lasher, Jeff. Bailey, Henry A. Harris, Fred Vant, Louis H. Drake, Amos H. Baldwin.

Assembly—C. M. Lee, John H. Morton, James F. Herrick, Arvin Rice, Dr. W. A. Hall, C. H. David, [illegible], Curtis Harding, Almon Beardsley, Fred A. [illegible].

The report of the committee was [illegible] adopted. The delegates [illegible]

County—W. S. Sweetland, D. P. Jennings, W. J. Ure, W. C. Gasack, George Bradford, H. F. Parsons, J. B. Wyant. The town committee of last year was re-elected as follows:—E. H. Trimble, J. Y. Wilbox, Walter Scudder.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES ELSEWHERE.

Caucuses were also held on Saturday in the towns of Sandy Creek, Richland, Mexico, Schroeppel, West Monroe, and Parish, Hastings, Palermo, and Constantia. The first causus in the Second District was held last Thursday evening at Williamstown, where a solid Steele delegation was elected.

The Sandy Creek delegates were for Steele; the Richland delegates for Shea for Judge, Fenton for Surrogate and Steele for Senator. At Phœnix David and Sweet were allowed to name the delegations; the Parish delegates are for David, Wright and Wilder; the Palermo county delegation is divided; the Constantia county delegates are for David and stand five for Wright and three for Howe; the Hastings delegation is probably divided.

THE PRICE OF VOTES.

For the county delegates in this town [Palermo], the Republican candidates will have to bid up. Last fall they were worth $15 each, and this fall times are better and the corn crop short, $35 must be paid. So boys bid up if you want Palermo. [Oswego Palladium.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

TRADE MARK

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparallel success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE FULTON TIMES

Wednesday, Sept. 5, 1883

Yet Another.

Only a pair of breeches,
Only a ragged coat,
Only some little trinkets,
Only a home made boat.

Only a mangled base ball,
Placed in a drawer with care,
Only beside it some marbles;
A pocket knife, too, was there.

Only an empty trundle bed,
Only a young voice gone,
Only a mother's bitter tears,
Only a heart forlorn.

Only a slender figure,
Laid away in the family lot,
Only a little toy pistol
That busted when it was shot.

A WRONG RIGHTED.

"Of what is my little sister thinking? Methinks it is of something pleasant, judging by the smiles that have been coming and going over her tell-tale face for the last few minutes."

Madge looked up with an expression of surprise in her soft brown eyes. "Why, Claire, how long have you been here? I thought you were still in the parlor entertaining Mr. Anstruther. Hasn't some-one else been hearing something nice instead of thinking it?" with a mischievous smile at Claire.

With a slight flush Claire answered: "It is always sweet to hear the praises of one you love; and Ralph Anstruther would fain win for his own a certain maiden I know of. Can you guess who?" and the elder sister bent and kissed the fair young cheek whose wild-rose pink had deepened into a richer tint as Claire spoke.

"I thought it was you he came to see, Claire; and I'm sorry if it is anyone else—really and truly sorry—for I don't care for him at all, excepting as a friend.—Claire," with a sudden wonder in her tones, "tell me why it is that some girls have to hurt people's feelings by saying 'No,' when some other real nice girl would be awful glad to say 'Yes!'"

Then as Claire looked puzzled at her somewhat involved sentence, she said, with a laugh that sounded like a chime of sweet bells in her sister's ear: "I mean Claire, that it isn't fair that I should have had three offers, and—and——"

A thought that perhaps if she said any more she might wound Claire, stopped her, and she blushed and remained silent. For good and even pretty as was the elder sister, it was Madge alone who had proved the attractive one since she had grown to woman's estate, and—as Claire's past was a closed leaf to her—she had wondered at it.

"Tell me, dear, why are you so difficult to suit?" said Claire. "Is there some one else whom you like?"

Madge's head drooped, and her cheeks rivalled the red carnation she held in her hand. She hesitated; then with a sudden impulse she went to her sister and hid her face upon her shoulder, as she murmured:

"Oh, Claire, I do love some one else, and he does not even think of me. He is too noble and great to stoop to such a silly little thing. But I would willingly die for him."

"Who is it, little sister? Don't be afraid to tell me. Your secret will be safe."

But the calm face grew troubled as Madge whispered a name in her ear. It was one which had once sounded like sweetest music to her. But a cloud had come between her and her handsome young lover for Robert Fane was the one whom Madge had confessed to loving, and his had been the only voice which had ever whispered to Claire of love.—And, ah, what a pang it gave her now to think that Madge had taken a fancy to the same one, whose faithlessness had nearly broken her own heart. She schooled herself to answer calmly, but with an intense earnestness that startled Madge:

"Do not think of that man, little sister! He is not one who would make you happy. He is false and fickle."

"Prove it," said Madge impulsively. "If you cannot, I will not believe it."

Claire grew very pale. She hesitated. Then, with a determination to uproot all fancy for Robert Fane from her sister's heart, she commenced the story of her own past:

"Ten years ago I was just the age that you are now, Madge. I was as light-hearted and as merry a girl as ever sang about the house while performing her daily duties. The world was all sunshine to me, and it did not seem as though a shadow could come across my path. But one did come in the guise of what seemed at first a great happiness, almost too great for a mortal to experience and ever be willing to exchange earth for heaven. You think, little sister, I have been always the quiet, staid creature I am now. But I am as changed since the time of which I am about to speak as yon sky is from the glowing tints which colored it at sunset. Robert and I were engaged to be married, when one day I received a short cold note from him saying that all was at an end between us. The next day I heard that he had sailed for Europe.—Do you wonder that the light went out from my life, and that all seemed like a blank for a time? Then our mother died, and in my grief at her loss, and in my endeavor to make up her place to you, I gradually found forgetfulness of my pain."

"Did he give no reason for acting so?" asked Madge, with a ring of indignation in her clear young voice.

"Nothing definite. He hinted at some discovery he had made; but as I had not the slightest clue as to what he meant, I was none the wiser."

"There must have been some treachery at work, or he would never have done such a thing. I am sure of it," exclaimed Madge, "and I am surprised at your remaining so quiescent about it. If I had been you I would have demanded an explanation."

"With the ocean rolling between us!" asked Claire. "That would not have been possible; for how could I have known where to direct?"

"Where there's a will there's a way," was the decided answer. "But you were too proud to do such a thing. I know you, sister mine; and one would little think how much pride is hidden beneath that quiet exterior of yours."

Claire smiled faintly, but she made no denial. She knew well that she would have died rather than show her suffering.

"But," and Madge looked puzzled, as a thought struck her. "Mr. Fane must have been very young when this occurred.—Oh, Claire, I see it all! You think I mean that quiet, dark, elderly man—Robert's uncle. Why, sister, can it be that be ever had a romance connected with him?"

To Claire, the elder Robert Fane was still the one of all others in the whole world most fitted to win a maiden's heart, and as his young nephew had hardly attracted a passing thought from her, it was not to be wondered at that she had made the mistake. But, to one of her reticent nature, it was a sore trial to think that she had revealed her heart's bitter secret needlessly. To save Madge one pang she would have made any sacrifice; but—here her meditations were put to flight by the clasp of clinging arms ... [illegible] of tender kisses.

"... I know what you are ... [illegible]

Madge kept her word. Neither by word nor look did she ever refer to what had passed between them until—but we must not anticipate.

One dark, stormy, night, when the elements seemed warring with one another as to whether wind or water should do the most damage to the earth, a ring came at the door of the Cedars at an hour well on to midnight.

Claire had been trying to finish a delicate piece of embroidery as a present for Madge on the anniversary of her birth, which came on the following day; so she was still in the sitting-room. The servants were probably fast asleep, and for an instant Claire hesitated as to whether to call one of them, or to answer the ring herself at such an unusual hour.

But she conquered the momentary timidity and lifted the heavy bolts from their place in the massive doorway, and in another instant stood framed in like a picture with a background of light which left her face in comparative shadow, which was well for her presence of mind, for she stood face to face with Robert Fane!

A cold hand seemed grasping her heart with its icy fingers, and she felt herself grow faint, but with a superhuman effort she regained command of her senses, and said, putting out her hand:

"How do you do, Robert? Is anything wrong at the Hall?"

"Something that has been wrong is to be righted," he said. There was a tremble in his deep voice as he spoke.

"A woman is dying," he said, "and she calls for you in such piteous tones that I could not refuse to come for you. It is Millicent Waters—or rather the wreck of that once beautiful creature. She came to my door in this dreadful storm, and insisted on seeing me, saying she had important news to communicate; and, Claire, it concerned you. There is much to forgive. Will you come with me? My carriage is waiting at the gate."

Millicent Waters had been a schoolmate of Claire's. A wild, headstrong, but very beautiful girl, she had disappeared suddenly from Woodville a short time after Claire's great trouble had come into her life, and since then nothing had been known of her whereabouts.

Claire's heart was ever responsive to a call from any one in trouble; and in a brief space of time she had made her preparations to accompany Mr. Fane.—She had not the slightest idea of what Millicent had to say to her, as in a kind of dream she seated herself beside her former lover.

There was utter silence between them during the ride. Too great a gulf lay between their past and their present to be bridged over by the commonplace nothings of society conversation.

The housekeeper met them at the door with a white, shocked face, saying that shortly after Mr. Fane's departure the poor woman he had left in her care to be refreshed by rest and nourishment, had fallen into a swoon which seemed so like death that she thought it would surely end that way.

"Tell Joseph to go for Dr. Gaston," was Mr. Fane's brief answer. Then he led Claire into the library where he had left Millicent.

She was lying upon a sofa, upon which a pillow had been placed to support her head. In the wan, white, sharply-outlined features little remained of the beauty which had made her remarkable.

Whatever harm she had been done to her by this poor, dying creature, she forgave her fully. Her only feeling was one of intense pity. As though her touch had aroused the waning embers of life within the wasted frame, Millicent opened her eyes, and fixed them upon the tender, sympathetic face bending over her.

"So you have come," she said faintly.—"It is good, for now I can die in peace."

Then she turned her eyes upon Robert. "It was I who wrote that letter, and I was I who met James Grant. He was my lover, and he hated you and wished to wreck your happiness. I borrowed some of Claire's clothes under a pretence of taking a pattern of them, and in the moonlight you could not tell the difference, as I was of an equal height with her. I do not expect to be forgiven, but I must do even this tardy justice before I go to meet my offended Maker."

Her words were a complete enigma to Claire, as Robert had made no explanation of his conduct, thinking, in his hot anger, that Claire had been making a fool of him, and, of course, being guilty, would know that he had discovered the truth.

"What does she mean?" she asked wonderingly, turning to Robert, who stood pale and stern beside her. "What letter does she speak of, and what has James Grant to do with my life? I do not understand."

"It means that you and I have been the victims of a designing villain, and that yonder poor creature was made the instrument of carrying out his plans and of wrecking our happiness. I believed the letter she wrote me saying that you cared only for my money, and that your love was given to another, and went to the spot designated by the writer, where she said you were to meet the one whom you really loved. Blind fool that I proved myself, to fall into a trap like that!"

Claire's lips quivered, and her eyes filled with tears. She said gently:

"I should have thought you would have understood my character better than to have thought that of me."

"When jealousy has taken possession of man, reason vacates her throne. I was mad with anger and disappointment.—For, Claire, I loved you with a consuming passion, and—though I am hopeless of winning even a kind thought from you—I love you still, and have worshipped you all these long years, notwithstanding that I had (as I thought) ocular proof that you had been false to me."

Millicent's large black eyes, brilliant with feverish excitement, had wandered alternately from once face to the other, and with a woman's unerring intuition, she saw that Claire still loved Robert Fane. With a convulsive effort she rose and went to the side of the woman she had wronged.

"Love forgets all—forgives all," she said. "Is it not so?"

Claire's sweet face was crimson with blushes, but her great eyes were luminous with happy light.

She turned to Robert, who was watching her with an eager, hopeful expression which had long been absent from his face. She put out her hands with a timid gesture. The next instant she was gathered to her lover's heart.

"Nothing but death can come between us now," he murmured.

Again the ghastly pallor crept over Millicent's face. She sank down again upon the sofa.

Claire disengaged herself from her lover's embrace and went to her.

"May God forgive you as freely as I do!" she whispered. And in proof of her forgiveness, she touched her lips to the pale forehead. An upward look, grateful and earnest, rewarded her. It was the last flicker of life's expiring taper.

Millicent had gone to meet her Judge. But a new life had opened out before the two she had so deeply wronged.

When June's sweet roses unfolded their fragrant petals, a gay wedding-party assembled at the Cedars to witness the interchange of marriage vows between Claire and Madge and their chosen bridegrooms—Robert Fane and his nephew and namesake.

SCROFULA.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and when once settled has the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove Hood's Sarsaparilla to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,
SARAH C. WHITTIER.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skilfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 70,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Farm Gossip.

It is suggested that potato vines be reduced to two, or at most to three stalks in a hill, by pulling out the weaker ones.

Sawdust is a most excellent bedding for horses and cattle, and the manure is said to be a better fertilizer for garden crops than any other, and particularly for celery if mixed with the soil.

The dead leaves on squash vines should be carefully removed and burned. They are usually infested with eggs of the squash bug, and the first leaves that appear are of no use as soon as others form, and are then sure to wither and die.

Tobacco smoke prevents the attacks of all insects that infest plants, and does no injury to the plants unless they are confined in it for too long a time. While it often keeps off insects it does not always destroy them, though fatal to many.

Do not let any of your farm implements remain exposed to the weather. When not in use keep them housed by all means. By letting farm machinery stay in the field exposed to rains, dews, winds and the hot sun, they receive more injury than from careful usage.

The overgrowth of winter wheat requires attention, and needs to be rolled or pastured down before winter sets in. It is rare that this overgrowth is not killed down by winter freezes, and when heavy snows fall and remain for some time, this mass of herbage heats, sweats and the roots are destroyed to a greater or less extent.

Potato vines, when boiled in water until the juice is extracted, makes a good insect destroyer, by sprinkling the liquid over such vegetables as are subject to the ravages of the green and black fly, caterpillars, gnats, etc. It will not in the least impair the growth of plants, and the peculiar disagreeable odor, which remains for a considerable time prevents the insects from an early return.

Liming meadows of old pasture lands with, say thirty bushels to the acre, says the Orange County Farmer, has an effect upon the condition of the crop of grass that few farmers would believe without giving it a trial. In fact we do not know how the same amount of money can be expended upon land with the same profit. It is not only certain, but lasting. We have known farmers to pasture meadows fifty years without being turned up by the simple application of lime once in six or ten years. These pastures which are regarded as permanent, and mostly abound in clay molds, after being grazed down thoroughly, are restored almost knee-deep in from five to six weeks. We do not hesitate to say that nowhere has lime a more marked effect and can be used with better results than in the renovation of old pastures.

The Smith Family.

The blast of horns and the roll of drums floated yesterday over the ancient New Jersey homestead of Peter Zachariah Smith, which is six miles from any railroad station, and on the outskirts of the primitive village of Peapack, which boasts a Post Office and a stage coach resembling a Chinese junk. The old-fashioned gabled house and barns were bright with flags. On a platform in the centre of the grove a town band furnished music that scared horses. By afternoon there were 2,000 people on the ground. The descendants of John Smith of Holland, who settled in New Jersey in 1743, had met to celebrate him and the prosperity of his numerous posterity. There were Smiths in straw hats and Smiths in plugs. Smiths in homespun and Smiths in clawhammers. Smiths in army elevens. Smiths in French calf. Smiths in woolen shirts, and Smiths in immaculate fronts. They came in all sorts of vehicles and from all directions. From the natty rig of the heir of the family to the rheumatic turnout of the good old grandpa, all were there, and the grove buzzed with confusion. The old officers of the Smith Association were re-elected early in the morning in Peter Zachariah Smith's kitchen. They are Josiah Smith, President; Abram Smith, Vice-President; James C. Smith, Secretary; and Oscar Smith, Treasurer. One saddening circumstance alone marred the general serenity. President Smith was not present. He stayed away because refreshments were sold on the grounds against his wishes.

There was a grand dinner, moistened by mineral water, under the orchard trees. Every one furnished his own food, so that there was no grumbling. Farmer Peter Zachariah Smith, one of the fifty-seven grandchildren of John Smith went about among the feasters the picture of happiness. The number of pretty Miss Smiths who waited on tables was surprising. Secretary Smith stood behind the register book in a leafy bower, and took down the names of Smiths of many generations. There are now 2,360 Smiths recorded in his book. After being photographed the crowd gathered around a pavillion and listened to speeches. Abram Smith presided. His beaming face lighted a glow of brotherly affection in the eyes of all the Smiths.

"We grieve to-day," said the Rev. George Scarlet of Peapack in a melancholy voice, "for one of our family name, a man whose thoughts make valuable the pages of a great newspaper; a man whose piety is world renowned. I mean Deacon Richard Smith of Cincinnati, a truly good man. He has long since triumphed over the machinations of his wicked partners, and is flourishing like a green bay tree."

Addresses were also made by the Rev. Messrs. F. A. Mason of Bernardsville, Fred Bloom of Peapack, and Dr. I. N. Quimby, the temperance candidate for Governor of New Jersey. As the evening advanced the crashing of the band grew more violent, but there were no whirling couples. These Smiths do not dance. [N. Y. Sun.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

OSWEGO, CO., N. Y.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day-boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

A Positive Cure

For all those Painful Complaints and Weaknesses so common to our best female population.

A Medicine for Woman. Invented by a Woman. Prepared by a Woman.

The Greatest Medical Discovery Since the Dawn of History.

It revives the drooping spirits, invigorates and harmonizes the organic functions, gives elasticity and firmness to the step, restores the natural lustre to the eye, and plants on the pale cheek of woman the fresh roses of life's spring and early summer time.

Physicians Use it and Prescribe it Freely.

It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. For the cure of Kidney Complaints of either sex this Compound is unsurpassed.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S BLOOD PURIFIER will eradicate every vestige of Humors from the Blood, and give tone and strength to the system, of man woman or child. Insist on having it.

Both the Compound and Blood Purifier are prepared at 233 and 235 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass. Price of either, $1. Six bottles for $5. Sent by mail in the form of pills, or of lozenges, on receipt of price, $1 per box for either. Mrs. Pinkham freely answers all letters of inquiry. Enclose 3ct. stamp. Send for pamphlet.

No family should be without LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S LIVER PILLS. They cure constipation, biliousness, and torpidity of the liver. 25 cents per box.

Sold by all Druggists. (1)

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND GREATEST MEDICINE

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier,

SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so?—Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap, vile, or poor whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. It is composed of the choicest Roots, Barks and Berries, combined with the EXTRACT OF SULPHUR in such proportions as to make it NATURE'S GREAT RESTORER.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE.

If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use SULPHUR BITTERS. They never fail to cure. A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston.

THE FULTON TIMES
Wednesday, Sept. 5, 1883

Yet Another.

Only a pair of breeches,
 Only a ragged coat;
Only some little trinkets,
 Only a home made boat.

Only a mangled base ball,
 Placed in a drawer with care,
Only beside it some marbles;
 A pocket knife, too, was there.

Only an empty trundle bed,
 Only a young voice gone,
Only a mother's bitter tears,
 Only a heart forlorn.

Only a slender figure,
 Laid away in the family lot,
Only a little toy pistol
 That busted when it was shot.

A WRONG RIGHTED.

"Of what is my little sister thinking? Methinks it is of something pleasant, judging by the smiles that have been coming and going over her tell-tale face for the last few minutes."

Madge looked up with an expression of surprise in her soft brown eyes. "Why, Claire, how long have you been here? I thought you were still in the parlor entertaining Mr. Anstruther. Hasn't some-one else been hearing something nice instead of thinking it?" with a mischievous smile at Claire.

With a slight flush Claire answered: "It is always sweet to hear the praises of one you love; and Ralph Anstruther would fain win for his own a certain maiden I know of. Can you guess who?" and the elder sister bent and kissed the fair young cheek whose wild-rose pink had deepened into a richer tint as Claire spoke.

"I thought it was you he came to see, Claire; and I'm sorry if it is anyone else—really and truly sorry—for I don't care for him at all, excepting as a friend.—Claire," with a sudden wonder in her tones, "tell me why it is that some girls have to hurt people's feelings by saying 'No,' when some other real nice girl would be awful glad to say 'Yes?'"

Then as Claire looked puzzled at her somewhat involved sentence, she said, with a laugh that sounded like a chime of sweet bells in her sister's ear: "I mean Claire, that it isn't fair that I should have had three offers, and—and——"

A thought that perhaps if she said any more she might wound Claire, stopped her, and she blushed and remained silent. For good and even pretty as was the elder sister, it was Madge alone who had proved the attractive one since she had grown to woman's estate, and—as Claire's past was a closed leaf to her—she had wondered at it.

"Tell me, dear, why are you so difficult to suit?" said Claire. "Is there some one else whom you like?"

Madge's head drooped, and her cheeks rivalled the red carnation she held in her hand. She hesitated; then with a sudden impulse she went to her sister and hid her face upon her shoulder, as she murmured:

"Oh, Claire, I do love some one else, and he does not even think of me. He is too noble and great to stoop to such a silly little thing. But I would willingly die for him."

"Who is it, little sister? Don't be afraid to tell me. Your secret will be safe."

But the calm face grew troubled as Madge whispered a name in her ear. It was one which had once sounded like sweetest music to her. But a cloud had come between her and her handsome young lover—for Robert Fane was the one whom Madge had confessed to loving, and his had been the only voice which had ever whispered to Claire of love.—And, ah, what a pang it gave her now to think that Madge had taken a fancy to the same one, whose faithlessness had nearly broken her own heart. She schooled herself to answer calmly, but with an intense earnestness that startled Madge:

"Do not think of that man, little sister! He is not one who would make you happy. He is false and fickle."

"Prove it," said Madge impulsively. "If you cannot, I will not believe it."

Claire grew very pale. She hesitated. Then, with a determination to uproot all fancy for Robert Fane from her sister's heart, she commenced the story of her own past:

"Ten years ago I was just the age that you are now, Madge. I was as light-hearted and as merry a girl as ever sang about the house while performing her daily duties. The world was all sunshine to me, and it did not seem as though a shadow could come across my path. But one did come in the guise of what seemed at first a great happiness, almost too great for a mortal to experience and ever be willing to exchange earth for heaven. You think, little sister, I have been always the quiet, staid creature I am now. But I am as changed since the time of which I am about to speak as yon sky is from the glowing tints which colored it at sunset. Robert and I were engaged to be married, when one day I received a short cold note from him saying that all was at an end between us. The next day I heard that he had sailed for Europe.—Do you wonder that the light went out from my life, and that all seemed like a blank for a time? Then our mother died, and in my grief at her loss, and in my endeavor to make up her place to you, I gradually found forgetfulness of my pain."

"Did he give no reason for acting so?" asked Madge, with a ring of indignation in her clear young voice.

"Nothing definite. He hinted at some discovery he had made; but as I had not the slightest clue as to what he meant, I was none the wiser."

"There must have been some treachery at work, or he would never have done such a thing. I am sure of it," exclaimed Madge, "and I am surprised at your remaining so quiescent about it. If I had been you I would have demanded an explanation."

"With the ocean rolling between us!" asked Claire. "That would not have been possible; for how could I have known where to direct?"

"Where there's a will there's a way," was the decided answer. "But you were too proud to do such a thing. I know you, sister mine; and one would little think how much pride is hidden beneath that quiet exterior of yours."

Claire smiled faintly, but she made no denial. She knew well that she would have died rather than show her suffering.

"But," and Madge looked puzzled, as a thought struck her. "Mr. Fane must have been very young when this occurred.—Oh, Claire, I see it all! You think I mean that quiet, dark, elderly man—Robert's uncle. Why, sister, can it be that he ever had a romance connected with him?"

To Claire, the elder Robert Fane was still the one of all others in the whole world most fitted to win a maiden's heart, and as his young nephew had hardly attracted a passing thought from her, it was not to be wondered at that she had made the mistake. But, to one of her reticent nature, it was a sore trial to think that she had revealed her heart's bitter secret needlessly. To save Madge one pang she would have made any sacrifice [illegible]

Madge kept her word. Neither by word nor look did she ever give any sign that had passed between them until—but we must not anticipate.

One dark, stormy night, when the elements seemed warring with one another as to whether wind or water should do the most damage to the earth, a ring came at the door of the Cedars at an hour well on to midnight.

Claire had been trying to finish a delicate piece of embroidery as a present for Madge on the anniversary of her birth, which came on the following day; so she was still in the sitting-room. The servants were probably fast asleep, and for an instant Claire hesitated as to whether to call one of them, or to answer the ring herself at such an unusual hour.

But she conquered the momentary timidity and lifted the heavy bolts from their place in the massive doorway, and in another instant stood framed in like a picture with a background of light which left her face in comparative shadow, which was well for her presence of mind, for she stood face to face with Robert Fane!

A cold hand seemed grasping her heart with its icy fingers, and she felt herself grow faint, but with a superhuman effort she regained command of her senses, and said, putting out her hand:

"How do you do, Robert? Is anything wrong at the Hall?"

"Something that has been wrong is to be righted," he said. There was a tremble in his deep voice as he spoke.

"A woman is dying," he said, "and she calls for you in such piteous tones that I could not refuse to come for you. It is Millicent Waters—or rather the wreck of that once beautiful creature. She came to my door in this dreadful storm, and insisted on seeing me, saying she had important news to communicate; and, Claire, it concerned you. There is much to forgive. Will you come with me? My carriage is waiting at the gate."

Millicent Waters had been a schoolmate of Claire's. A wild, headstrong, but very beautiful girl, she had disappeared suddenly from Woodville a short time after Claire's great trouble had come into her life, and since then nothing had been known of her whereabouts.

Claire's heart was ever responsive to a call from any one in trouble; and in a brief space of time she had made her preparations to accompany Mr. Fane.—She had not the slightest idea of what Millicent had to say to her, as in a kind of dream she seated herself beside her former lover.

There was utter silence between them during the ride. Too great a gulf lay between their past and their present to be bridged over by the commonplace nothings of society conversation.

The housekeeper met them at the door with a white, shocked face, saying that shortly after Mr. Fane's departure the poor woman he had left in her care to be refreshed by rest and nourishment, had fallen into a swoon which seemed so like death that she thought it would surely end that way.

"Tell Joseph to go for Dr. Gaston," was Mr. Fane's brief answer. Then he led Claire into the library where he had left Millicent.

She was lying upon a sofa, upon which a pillow had been placed to support her head. In the wasted, sharply-outlined features little remained of the beauty which had made her remarkable.

Whatever harm had been done to her by this poor, dying creature, she forgave her folly. Her only feeling was one of intense pity. As though her touch had aroused the waning embers of life within the wasted frame, Millicent opened her eyes, and fixed them upon the tender, sympathetic face bending over her.

"So you have come," she said faintly.—"It is good, for now I can die in peace."

Then she turned her eyes upon Robert. "It was I who wrote that letter, and it was I who met James Grant. He was my lover, and he hated you and wished to wreck your happiness. I borrowed some of Claire's clothes under a pretence of taking a pattern of them, and in the moonlight you could not tell the difference, as I was of an equal height with her. I do not expect to be forgiven, but I must do even this tardy justice before I go to meet my offended Maker."

Her words were a complete enigma to Claire, as Robert had made no explanation of his conduct, thinking, in his hot anger, that Claire had been making a fool of him, and, of course, being guilty, would know that he had discovered the truth.

"What does she mean?" she asked wonderingly, turning to Robert, who stood pale and stern beside her. "What letter does she speak of, and what has James Grant to do with my life? I do not understand."

"It means that you and I have been the victims of a designing villain, and that yonder poor creature was made the instrument of carrying out his plans and of wrecking our happiness. I believed the letter she wrote me saying that you cared only for my money, and that your love was given to another, and went to the spot designated by the writer, where she said you were to meet the one whom you really loved. Blind fool that I proved myself, to fall into a trap like that!"

Claire's lips quivered, and her eyes filled with tears. She said gently:

"I should have thought you would have understood my character better than to have thought that of me."

"When jealousy has taken possession of man, reason vacates her throne. I was mad with anger and disappointment.—For, Claire, I loved you with a consuming passion, and—though I am hopeless of winning even a kind thought from you—I love you still, and have worshipped you all these long years, notwithstanding that I had (as I thought) ocular proof that you had been false to me."

Millicent's large black eyes, brilliant with feverish excitement, had wandered alternately from once face to the other, and with a woman's unerring intuition, she saw that Claire still loved Robert Fane. With a convulsive effort she rose and went to the side of the woman she had wronged.

"Love forgets all—forgives all," she said. "Is it not so?"

Claire's sweet face was crimson with blushes, but her great eyes were luminous with happy light.

She turned to Robert, who was watching her with an eager, hopeful expression which had long been absent from his face. She put out her hands with a timid gesture. The next instant she was gathered to her lover's heart.

"Nothing but death can come between us now," he murmured.

Again the ghastly pallor crept over Millicent's face. She sank down again upon the sofa.

Claire disengaged herself from her lover's embrace and went to her.

"May God forgive you as freely as I do!" she whispered. And in proof of her forgiveness, she touched her lips to the pale forehead. An upward look, grateful and earnest, rewarded her. It was the last flicker of life's expiring taper.

Millicent had gone to meet her Judge. But a new life had opened out before the two she had so deeply wronged.

When June's sweet roses unfolded their fragrant petals, a gay wedding-party assembled at the Cedars to witness the [illegible]

SCROFULA.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and when once settled has the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove Hood's Sarsaparilla to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,
SARAH C. WHITTIER.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skilfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics. Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Farm Gossip.

It is suggested that potato vines be reduced to two, or at most to three stalks in a hill, by pulling out the weaker ones.

Sawdust is a most excellent bedding for horses and cattle, and the manure is said to be a better fertilizer for garden crops than any other, and particularly for celery if mixed with the soil.

The dead leaves on squash vines should be carefully removed and burned. They are usually infested with eggs of the squash bug, and the first leaves that appear are of no use as soon as others form, and are then sure to wither and die.

Tobacco smoke prevents the attacks of all insects that infest plants, and does no injury to the plants unless they are confined in it for too long a time. While it often keeps off insects it does not always destroy them, though fatal to many.

Do not let any of your farm implements remain exposed to the weather. When not in use keep them housed by all means. By letting farm machinery stay in the field exposed to rains, dews, winds and the hot sun, they receive more injury than from careful usage.

The overgrowth of winter wheat requires attention, and needs to be rolled or pastured down before winter sets in. It is rare that this overgrowth is not killed down by winter freezes, and when heavy snows fall and remain for some time, this mass of herbage heats, sweats and the roots are destroyed to a greater or less extent.

Potato vines, when boiled in water until the juice is extracted, makes a good insect destroyer, by sprinkling the liquid over such vegetables as are subject to the ravages of the green and black fly, caterpillars, gnats, etc. It will not in the least impair the growth of plants, and the peculiar disagreeable odor, which remains for a considerable time prevents the insects from an early return.

Liming meadows of old pasture lands with, say thirty bushels to the acre, says the Orange County Farmer, has an effect upon the condition of the crop of grass that few farmers would believe without giving it a trial. In fact we do not know how the same amount of money can be expended upon land with the same profit. It is not only certain, but lasting. We have known farmers to pasture meadows fifty years without being turned up by the simple application of lime once in six or ten years. These pastures which are regarded as permanent, and mostly abound in clay molds, after being grazed down thoroughly, are restored almost knee-deep in from five to six weeks. We do not hesitate to say that nowhere has lime a more marked effect and can be used with better results than in the renovation of old pastures.

The Smith Family.

The blast of horns and the roll of drums floated yesterday over the ancient New Jersey homestead of Peter Zachariah Smith, which is six miles from any railroad station, and on the outskirts of the primitive village of Peapack, which boasts a Post Office and a stage coach resembling a Chinese junk. The old-fashioned gabled house and barns were bright with flags. On a platform in the centre of the grove a town band furnished music that scared horses. By afternoon there were 2,000 people on the ground. The descendants of John Smith of Holland, who settled in New Jersey in 1743, had met to celebrate him and the prosperity of his numerous posterity. There were Smiths in straw hats and Smiths in plugs. Smiths in homespun and Smiths in clawhammers. Smiths in army elevens. Smiths in French calf. Smiths in woolen shirts, and Smiths in immaculate fronts. They came in all sorts of vehicles and from all directions. From the natty rig of the heir of the family to the rheumatic turnout of the good old grandpa, all were there, and the grove buzzed with confusion. The old officers of the Smith Association were re-elected early in the morning in Peter Zachariah Smith's kitchen. They are Josiah Smith, President: Abram Smith, Vice-President; James C. Smith, Secretary: and Oscar Smith, Treasurer. One saddening circumstance alone marred the general serenity. President Smith was not present. He stayed away because refreshments were sold on the grounds against his wishes.

There was a grand dinner, moistened by mineral water, under the orchard trees. Every one furnished his own food, so that there was no grumbling. Farmer Peter Zachariah Smith, one of the fifty-seven grandchildren of John Smith went about among the feasters the picture of happiness. The number of pretty Miss Smiths who waited on tables was surprising. Secretary Smith stood behind the register book in a leafy bower, and took down the names of Smiths of many generations. There are now 2,360 Smiths recorded in his book. After being photographed the crowd gathered around a pavillion and listened to speeches. Abram Smith presided. His beaming face lighted a glow of brotherly affection in the eyes of all the Smiths.

"We grieve to-day," said the Rev. George Scarlet of Peapack in a melancholy voice, "for one of our family name, a man whose thoughts make valuable the pages of a great newspaper; a man whose piety is world renowned. I mean Deacon Richard Smith of Cincinnati, a truly good man. He has long since triumphed over the machinations of his wicked partners, and is flourishing like a green bay tree."

Addresses were also made by the Rev. Messrs. F. A. Mason of Bernardsville, Fred Bloom of Peapack, and Dr. I. N. Quimby, the temperance candidate for Governor of New Jersey. As the evening advanced the crashing of the band grew more violent, but there were no whirling couples. These Smiths do not dance. [N. Y. Sun.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

CHAPTER IV.

Life in the busy little bay was like a fashionable scrap-book all through those memorable months of July and August—sketches, portraits, finished pictures, woodland scenes, "bits" of shore and boats, with a changing sky overhead, each page a contrast to the last.

Herne Bay was keeping carnival, only at the wrong time of the year.

In the shadow of the cliffs sits a woman, and at her feet lies a man with a sunburnt, handsome face that rests on folded hands and is upturned to hers with a look she could not help understanding, were not her eyes on the water instead of on him.

His elbows are sinking deeper into the shingle, and his six-feet long body is stretched at its length, as near to her chair as he dare approach.

He is thinking how pretty she is, and wondering what she sees in those endless waves to bring that wistful expression to her pretty eyes and that sudden quiver to the parted lips. And she—oh, sad to tell!—has for the moment forgotten his existence, which accounts for the start that recalls her to present company as he speaks.

"Have you quite made up your mind to go back to town to-morrow?" he asks, as a prelude to what he means to lead up to a proposal.

"Yes, indeed," was the reply. "I have taken a very long holiday—nearly six weeks. Here we are in September. I must begin work again at once, or I shall be getting into Mr. Brevet's black books, not to speak of Signor Brunetti. I have much to do before the winter season commences."

There is a pause. He finds conversation an uphill affair to-day.

"Do you care for the life you lead? That sounds rather an impertinent question, but I hope we are friends enough to allow of something beyond conventionalities between us. I know most women would declare themselves more than content with your brilliant present and prospects, and, certainly, the career of a prima donna is enviable in a way; it must be paradise to a small material mind set on vanity in all its forms. But you are not like any other woman I have ever met. You are not vain, you are not a lover of luxuries, the worship which waits to make you its object does not turn your head. You can see London at your feet and yet remain calm."

"Oh, you do not know me, Captain Newen. I do heartily enjoy my success, and I do not think I could, of my own free will, abandon the career of a singer for anything under the sun," replies Fleur de Marie candidly, smiling down calmly into his upturned face in which there is so much for her eyes to read if she could.

"No," she repeats softly, as if some question within her had risen to confront her—"no, I do not think I could leave the stage now with my foot scarcely firm on the first step of fame's ladder, not for anything."

He draws himself up close to her chair and resting on his elbows, whispers almost inaudibly:

"Or for any one?"

But her quiet blue eyes are looking out dreamily over the sunlit sea, and her thoughts are as far away. So she answers in the same half mechanical tone:

"Or anyone!"

She is thinking, perhaps, that the one for whom she would willingly make any sacrifice would never demand it even if he loved her, which he does not—at least not now.

A hand is laid gently on her own that lies in her lap.

She starts and draws back, flushing indignantly as she rises to her feet.

Something in the face of the man who has dared such a liberty arrests her steps.

"I [illegible] fool enough to flatter myself you would [illegible] as much for me. I would sacrifice [illegible]ealth, position, everything in your serv[illegible]. Have I been willfully blind or have [illegible] wittingly deceived me? Am I a fool, or are you a coquette, as cruel as cold?"

He [illegible] to her side and seizes one of her [illegible] almost rudely.

She [illegible] utterly surprised to withdraw it.

"T[illegible], swear to me by all that is holy [illegible] you knew not that I loved you!"

"You forget your manners, Captain Newen," [illegible] the cold reply, "but I shall answer your question, after which I hope you [illegible] detain me no longer. I was quite ignorant of the nature of your—your feelings [illegible] me, or, believe me, I should sooner have put a stop to our constant companionship. Indeed, I am very, very grieved [illegible] sorry about it. You always were [illegible] and pleasant with me that I never [illegible] you were more, or wished [illegible] friend, and I am so [illegible] It always is so. free," her companion resumes, after a long never-to-be-forgotten pause, "because I might have nourished possibly a secret hope of some different reception in a time to come. Now I can understand——"

"But, indeed," interrupted Fleur de Marie, with crimson cheeks and trouble averted eyes, "I am—that is—I never said I was not free. I am quite unfettered by any engagement. Why should you suppose that I am bound to another—that you have a rival?"

"You did not contradict me just now, mademoiselle, when I pointed to those letters on the sand and said, 'That is my rival.' Gabriel! I guessed it long ago, and then I ceased to think so, never seeing you together."

"I am not bound to Gabriel. I am nothing to him," she answered with a strange quiver in her voice.

"But is he nothing to you?"

She turns and faces him with angry eyes.

"What right have you—how dare you question me thus closely as to my feelings towards this or any other man? You are a gentleman, but sometimes I think you forget your part. I have given you your answer. Let us at least part friends, since part we must."

"Must we part? Oh, forgive me, Fleur de Marie, for my rudeness and impertinence. I was so sanguine of success. I have been living all these weeks past in a fool's paradise, and because you were kind, and always seemed so glad to see me, I flattered myself I had made myself something nearer and more necessary than a friend. Forgive me. My punishment is hard enough as it is. Be still my good angel, and let me stay within reach of your hand, within sound of your voice, for I love you, Marie, for I would rather have your friendship than the worship of another woman less perfect. I would——"

"Hush! You must not talk so wildly. I am sorry, more sorry than you can tell, for all this that has happened. Your love kills a most pleasant friendship. Yes, do not interrupt me. I do not believe in platonics. You must go away—right away now."

"I will. I will throw myself off that cliff into the sea if you send me out of your sweet presence a banished man."

"Hush! you will go because you love me. You are a man of the world, and for my sake, you understand, you must not haunt me or follow my steps wherever I go. Besides, it would only make you more miserable if you did."

"You might learn to love me in the end."

"Love is not a lesson to be learned, I think. It is an inspiration, a fate; it comes unbidden, and abides forever."

"Unless it dies a violent death," puts in her companion, for some instinct tells him that is how it has been with her.

"Then the ghost haunts the heart it once gladdened, if the heart is not broken at its fall."

"Then you never will love me at any time, or under any circumstances whatever?" he asks anxiously.

"Sincerely speaking, I believe not. I have found your friendship most pleasant, and regret to say good-bye."

"Then we will call it au revoir. Listen to me for one moment, Fleur de Marie. I shall not detain you long—I will leave you and go right away as you desire. I shall exchange into the Prince's Own, which is ordered out in November. I have friends and relations in India. I will join them, and make a home there. I shall not persecute you with letters, not one word till another year has passed over our heads. Then, if you will allow me, this time, this day, next September, I shall write once, my first and last letter to you, asking you again to be my wife, and you will kindly give me a final answer."

"Do not, I pray you. Why deceive yourself? I tell you my answer will be the same," she answers rather impatiently.

"Somehow I do not believe it. Maybe I am too sanguine. Anyhow, I shall write. Hope never hurt a man yet, and if you again refuse I shall have only myself to blame and you to respect. Farewell till we meet again, sweet Fleur de Marie. I have a strange presentiment we shall yet be man and wife. Stranger things have happened."

"None less likely."

"Ah well, I will not argue further. I feel we shall meet again. Farewell.—Think of me sometimes when your singing brings flowers to your feet. Remember, I am no fair-weather friend. I am waiting for you when the world has ceased to smile, and your so-called friends turn aside to worship at some fresh shrine. If you are in trouble, write to me; if you want a home, come to me. You do not believe in platonics, you say? but what I offer is not friendship, but love. Farewell."

There are tears in the blue eyes, and trouble in the beautiful face, as she turns and stretches out both of her hands, unable to speak for sorrow that she has nothing to give, only a God-speed.

At last she says brokenly:

"Good-bye, friend. See, I believe in your friendship, because you have the courage to go. I will remember your words and if I am in trouble I will call you to my side. But my love—no, no, that I can never give you. See I will trust you, I will tell you," and she comes nearer to him, and whispers: "That name you saw just now half traced on the sand I have obliterated; but nothing, not even the wild vain tears I have shed, can wash those letters from my heart. It is true as you guessed: Gabriel is my best, my only beloved; the love I have for him is a part of my being. It was born when we sang together and starved together in the London streets, it has grown with my growth, and though its blossoms have been blighted by neglect, nothing can root it out from my heart. I am free, it is true. Gabriel is lost to me, I fear forever; but still I am bound, not by a promise, but by the force of my own feelings. The faculty for loving is dead in me, since another has robbed me of his object. I now live only to give voice to my sorrow in song. My life is like an unfinished story, the author of which died and left his work incomplete, or cared not to complete it. It is some consolation to sing, and thus give vent to—but I will not weary you. I have said enough. You see how it is. I am not able to love you. I have trusted you with my heart's secret; it will, I know, be sacred to you [illegible] Now I shall [illegible] what the [illegible] when one loves. Why [illegible] towards the town, slowly, with steps that drag wearily, and head bent down.

Once only, when he comes to the summit of the cliff, he turns and sees her, the woman who has just pronounced his ban of exile, standing as he left her, with her fair face seaward, leaning over the back of her twisted willow chair with its gay-colored cushions, while the fading sunlight falls on her dead-gold hair, and touches the rare-cut crystals at her neck.

"I fancy, somehow, she will yet be my wife. Stranger things have happened. It will not be for love, at least, not first love, and no second quality is worth much. But, ah, there are a thousand and one other motives which move a man or a woman to marriage. I will win her in spite of herself; but not now, not yet—in a year's time, maybe."

CHAPTER V.

A year had passed. The London season was at its zenith. That turn in the tide of fashion which brings the pleasure-boats back to town laden with loveliness, talent, and wealth, had set in with sunshine of the brightest. London lay basking lazily in the sweet air of June, with pleasure at her head, and poverty at her feet.

All the outlets of gaiety are thrown open. On one of the June evenings, perhaps the balmiest out of the thirty, the Opera House at Covent Garden was crowded from gallery to pit with an enthusiastic and expectant audience. The playbills, fluttering from hand to hand, announced a powerful caste for the performance of "Aida," with Signora Leopardi, Signor Gabriel, and Fleur de Marie in the title role.

The hum of voices grew still as by the spell of a raised finger; the sea of moving figures cease to sway to and fro; the orchestra was silent.

Presently the music broke forth once more, as if impatient of control, and the voice of a woman was borne on its swelling bosom, on waves of infinite sound, now rising, now falling, now pathetic, now passionate, till at last, dying away by degrees, it left upon the hearts of the hearers that burden of pleasurable pain which is so strange a sensation, and can only find expression in a quivering sigh.

The short interval of silence was followed by such a burst of applause as is not often heard. The public literally brought the house down with their vehement cries of "Fleur de Marie! Fleur de Marie!"

Never had her voice sounded so spiritual, and yet so sad. It was as if each note were a spoken tear.

She was, however, not listening to the roar of many voices, or the hurricane of clapping hands. She did not heed the flowers that fell at her sandaled feet. She felt as one walking in a dream. She only thought:

"What does it all avail, since he loves me no longer? What is fame to me, since I fail to look fair in his eyes? Oh, Gabriel, Gabriel, one hedgerow wild blossom thrown by your hand at this moment would mean more to me than the costliest and rarest of these exotics, which are cast, after all, to my voice, and not to me."

She knew where he was, and how he was looking at her as one looks at the Venus de Medici or any other famous bit of beauty, critically and casually. She saw all this from under her drooping eyelids, as she stood enduring the world's applause. He was leaning against a side scene, whispering and laughing with the Leopardi, with passion in his dusky eyes, and a rose between his teeth. He was toying idly with it as he had trifled with her. Presently he would cast it aside, withered and bruised.

This woman, her rival, had won him in the lottery of life as one wins a gold heap at a game of cards. Therein lay her triumph.

Fleur de Marie passed out, followed by men in the opera's livery, laden with the flowers the world had given her. Cries arose of "Leopardi, Gabriel!" "Gabriel, Leopardi!" He led her on the stage, bowing right and left.

"He shares his success with her and not with me," cried Fleur de Marie, as she closed the door of her dressing-room and threw herself into a chair, while fan and flowers dropped to the ground.

"I see how it is! He loves me no longer. It is useless—nay, it is breaking my heart to go on like this. There is no hope for me now, because she has won him. How cruel she is! Could she not be content with half London at her feet? She does not care for anyone save herself—and I have only this one to love. I will go right away! I cannot endure to see him daily, to sing with him nightly, and be no more to him than the dancing-girl in the ballet. I will go right away. All this fretting will injure my voice, and then I shall starve. I cannot see another, and one so unworthy, spoil Gabriel's life, blight his fame, as she will, assuredly she will. How cruel she is! but oh, I wish Gabriel might come back to me as in those dear old days. What has fame given me after all? Only a heartache and a few flowers;" and with these thoughts Mysie O'Farrell gathered her wraps about her, and swept down the steps to her brougham, which was waiting in the midst of a crowd to bear her to her home.

The afternoon was drawing to a close. It was barely four o'clock, but the streets were dark, and the lamps were lighted. At one of the lower front windows of a house in Warrington-crescent sat a woman in a black silk dress, with a face most disconsolate.

Certainly the outlook was dreary, and the room in which she found herself was weird with the flickering, fitful firelight. She rose from her seat behind the curtain, when the sounds of singing in the street arrested her attention—she drew up the blind and peered out into the street. She only saw a dirty, gaily-dressed pair of beggars standing by the pavement, both little Savoyards, brown and handsome. Their vocalisation was so atrocious that the listener mechanically put her finger to her ear and winced—but still she remained where she stood, for something in the sight of those two ragged, screaming children recalled old days to her. She opened the window and cast out a handful of coppers to them.

The boy crossed the street, hat in hand, and the girl helped him to gather them up, bowing and [illegible] their thanks to the giver. Then the watcher saw them put their dusky heads together, and count their earnings with smiling faces.

"Ah, how happy they are! dirty, des[illegible] but how happy! Just as I was once."

She drew down the blind once more. As [illegible] rope and America, begging her to give them if only a couple of nights, with promises of fabulous remuneration.

She now took up the heap of letters wearily. Suddenly she started, as her eyes fell on a bold, untidy handwriting, scrawled across a foreign envelope, which bore the post-mark "Bombay."

"Ah!" she exclaimed, "he has not forgotten. I fancied he would. But no; this is the very day, September 20th, he said he would write."

She opened the letter, and hurriedly read its contents; it was not long, but characteristic.

"HOTEL BOMBAY, August 18—

"I have waited patiently and in silence, through the year. Now, I ask you once more and for the last time, for I would not weary a woman: Will you be my wife? I love you better than myself; I prize your happiness more than my own. I never have seen any one at all like you before. If you decide to put your hand in mine, and trust your heart to my keeping, I shall try and deserve the confidence. I know I have come too late to win your first love, but I believe you care for me. If you are unhappy, if fame fails to satisfy you, if you have any affection for me, come. I am ready to receive you, under any consideration. I have a home out here fit for a princess; but if the climate does not suit your health, you shall return to, and reside in England. I only ask you to be my wife. All the rest will follow. I love you enough for two, and I know I can make you happy. Of course you would quit the stage.

"CUTHBERT NEWEN."

"What a strange letter," thought Mysie with a laugh, "more like a business transaction than a proposal. What shall be my reply? Shall I answer it in person? Shall I quit the stage while yet I am popular, and go out to India and marry this man? Have I strength sufficient to stifle ambition? Should I be happy, or, at least, content as his wife? If I could only be sure! I long to get away out of Gabriel's presence. I cannot bear to see him always by the side of that woman. Perhaps, if I were absent from him, if I never saw his face or heard his voice, I might forget him. He never will love me again, that I know. I will have a long think over it all"—and an hour passed. At last she drew her writing-table towards her, and wrote as follows:

"303 WARRINGTON-CRESCENT, Maida Vale.

"MY DEAR CAPTAIN NEWEN,—I received your letter. As you know well, I have little to offer you in the way of romantic love, but I feel a most sincere regard for you, and I take pleasure in your society. If you think I can make you happy with this affection, I am ready to marry you any time after the coming Christmas, and to leave the stage. Believe me, yours very sincerely,

"MYSIE O'FARRELL."

When this note was addressed and sealed, the writer paused for a moment, and then, once more dipping her pen into the ink, began:

"MY DEAR MR. BREVET,—You have always been such a true friend to me, that I feel you ought to be the first to hear of my final decision. You advised me some time ago to leave the stage for awhile, and to go away for a change. You knew I was fretting, and felt sure it would injure my voice. Well, I am going away to India, and I am leaving the stage—only not for a while, but altogether. I have promised to marry Captain Cuthbert Newen. Thanking you once more for all your great goodness to me, I remain, I hope always, your grateful friend,

"MYSIE O'FARRELL."

As she finished this letter she glanced thoughtfully at the open sheet before her.

"How strange that the whole course of a life can be changed by a dozen strokes of the pen," she thought. "If I tear up these papers I still shall remain the Fleur de Marie—if I put them into the post, a few months more will make me Mrs. Newen."

And she did put them into the post, with her own hands, on the following day.

When the next season came round the world wondered what had become of their favorite, Fleur de Marie, till the fame of her beauty, as the wife of Cuthbert Newen, came over the sea with a batch of rare Anglo-Indian gossip. Then society heard she had settled down in Calcutta, where she reigned like a queen, with her court around her.

So Fleur de Marie faded out of men's memory as some dream is forgotten in the hurry and glare of noon, and as the years went by her fame alone survived oblivion.

CHAPTER VI.

In the billiard-room of the Vagabond Club, Covent Garden, sat a dozen or so of idlers, smoking and gossiping, one bright May afternoon. They had wondered over the latest marriage in high life, laughed at the newest bon mot, discussed the day's news from Zulu-land, whispered the choicest social scandal, and prophesied respecting the weather.

Suddenly the door opened, and a man entered, dressed in a brown velvet coat. All present looked up as he sauntered in.

"Well, old man, you are quite the stranger here. What's the little game now? Some fair one in the question, I bet, since you keep it so dark. What a chap you are! Now, confess where you have been hiding yourself."

"Hiding myself? Well, I don't know what you mean by that? Haven't I been visible on the boards every night since May set in?" replied the new comer.

"That's true enough; I spent half-a-guinea on you last night, I thought I'd like to hear 'the great Gabriel' for myself. You don't do it badly. You were in very good singing form in 'Faust,' old fellow," said Wenthworth Arkwright.

"Ye-e-s, my voice is pretty fit just now," was Gabriel's quiet answer, as he complacently smoothed his throat with one of his hands that was ablaze with large rings set with rare stones.

"Well, what's the news, Signor Singer, eh?" asked Ribald Drake, the sculptor.

"News! Well, first of all the Leopardi has caught the German measles."

"No!" was the general exclamation.—"Never! What, a prima donna succumb to such a prosaic complaint! I say, that's a bad look out for the company. Tell you what, there'll have to be a 'round robin' got up and sent to Fleur de Marie, or, begging her pardon, Lady Newen, as she is now, imploring her to take pity on the public and give us her Marguerite, Violetta, and Elsa, and all her inimitable repertoire just to give the fair Lorita time to get rid of the spots and infection, and get out of quarantine. Oh, you my soul, it's a good joke to think of Norma sick with measles!"

"Don't see the joke," remarked Arkwright, "but what's that you said of the Fleur de Marie? She's out of England, I thought."

"My child, you shock me with your lamentable ignorance. Evidently you don't read the newspapers, or you would have seen the announcement that Sir Cuthbert and Lady Newen had arrived at their house in Bedford-square for the season. I bet it's no news to someone, eh, Gabriel?"

"Well, I certainly had heard of their return to [illegible]," replied Gabriel, deprecatingly [illegible]

"Which, perhaps, you might find it difficult to produce," sneered a voice behind him.

Gabriel turned hastily, and saw Andrew Brevet at his elbow, his face white with passion and his hands twitching nervously. Gabriel looked at him insolently with cool effrontery.

"Oh, you may stare, Signor Gabriel, but remember, I know you, what you are and what you were; and I also know, equally well the lady of whom you speak so lightly. Gentlemen, I feel confident that there is not one word of truth in the statements he has made. I am certain that he could not show you one line of a letter of the familiar nature he would wish you to imagine, written by Lady Newen to him since her marriage. I know that at the time she left England she cast him aside completely, as unworthy of her friendship, having entirely forfeited her esteem. Is it likely, men, that happily married as she is to such a man as Sir Cuthbert Newen, she would carry on a regular and confidential correspondence with one who had deceived and insulted her in every way possible to a cad and a coward."

Andrew Brevet paused at last, breathless with anger and indignation.

Gabriel's lips quivered with ill-concealed passion as he turned to the professor.

"Mr. Brevet, if you were not an old man——"

"You would knock me down, sir! Do, if that will afford you any satisfaction. I have had my say, and unmasked a lying boaster, and——"

"Mr. Brevet," broke in Gabriel, hoarse and pale with fury, and coming closer to him.

"Yes, I mean a lying boaster, and I repeat it. You may strike me, if you choose. To knock down a defenceless, white-headed man would be consistent with the rest of your cowardly conduct. If you have been in correspondence with Lady Newen, as you boast, all I say is—prove it. I do not believe you have received one letter from Lady Newen since her marriage, and I think that unless you can prove your words, no one in this room will place any faith in them; eh, gentlemen?"

"That's fair enough," said one.

"Come, come; prove it, Gabriel; that's easily done," chimed in another.

"Produce the letter from dear little Mysie," sneered a third, and so on; and a chorus of banter and chaff followed which so exasperated Gabriel that he felt like Nero, who wished that all the Romans had one neck that he might wring it.

"I refuse to produce the proof in the form of the said letters, which are not of a nature to be passed from hand to hand, and criticised by strangers. I feel it would be a most glaring breach of confidence on my part towards the writer. I have received these letters, that is enough."

"Oh, oh, oh!" was heard in all the tones and inflections throughout the room.

Andrew Brevet took up his hat and walked out in disgust, slamming the door after him.

"And if you desire it, I will prove to you how great is my influence, and of what nature the friendship is which I share with Lady Newen, in a way far more undeniable than even by the letters," continued Gabriel haughtily.

"How!" "Show your cards." "It's easy to talk." "Where are the proofs?" Such remarks ran through the room.

"On the evening of the 15th inst., that is, next Saturday week, I believe that you, Ribald Drake, purpose giving a petits souper for the entertainment of the ladies belonging to Brunetti's company. Well, according to the cards of invitation, one of which I received, I am at liberty to bring a friend with me. What will you say if I escort Lady Newen herself?"

"You can't do it. You'll never compass it. I'll lay you a hundred even you don't bring her," exclaimed Archie Freeland, excitedly thumping the table with his fist.

"Done," said Gabriel, making a note of the bet in his pocket-book. "You are witnesses, gentlemen. Till we meet again at Drake's supper table, au revoir, messieurs," and with these words the singer strode to the door, and left his friends to discuss his affairs, and calculate his chances of success.

* * * * * *

Lady Newen sat in her boudoir in Bedford-square alone. It was a charming little room, essentially feminine, a delicious nest of old lace, blue china, and velvet, with Venetian looking-glasses, and Dresden figures, and pretty porcelain brackets fixed up against the canary-tinted walls. Lady Newen sank down on the softest of yielding divans, and took up a letter which lay open on the table near at hand. It was from her husband in Paris, where he had been delayed, as he wrote, on diplomatic business much beyond the time he had first expected. It was a loving note, bidding his wife take care of her dear self for his sake, and to keep the warmest of welcomes for her truant on his return. "I shall probably not be home for another week, but shall be able to say for certain to-morrow. I think, however, perhaps I had better advise you to expect me when you see me, so you will not be disappointed."

Lady Newen missed her husband's pleasant society. She had grown to feel a very decided love for him during the two years in Calcutta following her marriage, and she did not like his being away. Perhaps she had fallen into a semi-slumber over her visions of the past, and her castle-building, at any rate, she started to her feet as a loud double-knock sounded through the quiet house.

She mechanically smoothed her ruffled yellow hair (which is a sort of instinct with woman, from the dairymaid to the duchess), and a bright light shone in her soft blue eyes.

"Perhaps it is Cuthbert—it must be! No one else could come at this hour. Oh, I am glad he has returned. Yes, here he is," said Mysie [illegible] to the door and opened it.

On the threshold stood the butler, and behind him, in the shadow, Gabriel Cole.

Lady Newen drew back for a moment, [illegible] the pale color deep[illegible] ing black eyes, and looked very ominous and tragic.

"Come in, then," she replied, a little impatiently. "I am listening. Be seated."

And she preceded him into the boudoir, and stood on the rug by the fire, awaiting his news, while she carelessly warmed her hands and turned her rings round on her white fingers.

"I come, as I say, bound on an errand most urgent. I come from a dying woman, to beg you to follow me to her bedside, and since her hours are numbered, she wishes to make her peace with God and man. She feels she needs your forgiveness before her soul can find rest.—She has sent me to you, begging you to go to her while yet there is time."

"What do you mean? Who is this dying woman who wishes to see me?" asked Mysie, turning a startled face from contemplating the fire.

"Lorita Leopardi. Can you refuse the last petition of one who even now may be passing beyond the reach of your forgiveness? Even now she may——"

"Stay; I will not refuse. I will follow you instantly. Wait for me."

And lifting the portiere, she glided into an adjoining room.

When she returned, her face and form were hidden by a long, black, fur-lined cloak, with hood drawn down over the head.

Mysie's cheeks were very pale, and her eyes shone with excitement.

"I am ready to follow you. Do not let us delay longer, or we may be too late."

For a moment Gabriel hesitated—the part he was about to play seemed so utterly contemptible. But the horrible alternative of losing the wager, and becoming the laughing-stock of London, soon settled the point. He held open the door, and Mysie swept down the staircase.

Gabriel opened the front door, and the two walked quickly across the square, and down a side-street, till they came to the cab-stand.

It was a silent drive. Mysie's heart beat fast with great anxiety lest she might even now arrive too late. Gabriel, for once, was feeling really nervous as to the issue of this adventure.

Suddenly the hansom came to a stand-still. Gabriel threw back the doors with much noise, and, perhaps, a little bravado, held out his hand to Mysie, dismissed the cab, and then offered his arm to his companion.

There were bright lights in an upper window and the gayest sounds of revelry.

She followed Gabriel up a short winding staircase, dimly lighted. As they ascended the steps the noise grew louder. Loud laughter, clinking of glasses, bass voices chiming in with a scrap of a song's refrain, and a babel of women's chatter and men's applause.

They crossed a short passage, dark as night, and with a heart that, figuratively, sank into his boots, Gabriel threw open a door and almost dragged Mysie into the room. But she retreated at once on to the threshold, where she stood, with her hood fallen back on to her shoulders and her cheeks aflame. She turned and fixed her eyes searchingly on Gabriel, who could not meet her gaze. Suddenly she seemed to grasp the situation.

A silence had fallen on the supper party. The glasses no longer passed from hand to hand; the laugh and the song were hushed. All eyes were turned on the figure in the doorway, in the fur-lined cashmere cloak and the shining, pale gold hair.

"There is either a strange mistake or a wilful deception here. I ask you, Signor Gabriel, to explain it to me, for I am unwilling to believe you could act such a cowardly, contemptible part as to bring me here under false pretenses."

Gabriel shifted his position uneasily from one leg to another, and did not reply. He felt what a very foolish figure he made—like a clown by the side of a seraph. Finally, plucking up his innate impudence, he threw back his head, and offering his arm to Lady Newen, said gaily:

"Come, Mysie; why take matters so seriously? Own that I acted the little fraud vey cleverly—completely took you in, eh? Well, come, don't bear malice. I'll be candid and tell you. I was rather short of coin, and in order to raise the wind, as the saying is, I accepted a wager to bring you here."

"Do you mean to say you have dared to make me the subject of a wager? You have won it in a worthy way, truly. I tell you all here, that this—I cannot call him a man—came to my house, pleading his excuse for the lateness of the hour on account of the urgency of his errand. He told me he came from the death-bed of a dying woman, who wanted my forgiveness before her soul could find rest, and I, believing his words, followed him, and here I am. I have no more to say, but good-night. Signor Gabriel, you are a liar and a coward! Good-night."

"Stay, Lady Newen, allow me to be your escort home. The hour is late, you must not go alone."

Mysie turned and saw George Curzon.

"Pardon my presence here, and, believe me, I knew nothing of this wager that Cole had made. Had I done so, I should have warned you long ago of his intentions, and thus set you on your guard against him."

She looked at his earnest face and could not doubt his truth. She held out her hand.

"I do believe you, Captain Curzon, and I will accept your escort home;" and without another word she took his arm, and the door closed behind them.

There was silence during the drive home.

"If you please, my lady," said the butler, as the three stood in the hall in Bedford-square, "Sir Cuthbert arrived suddenly after you left, and enquired for you. I told him you had gone out with Signor Gabriel, and I did not know when you would be back, and he gave me this note for you, my lady."

"Is he not at home, then? When will he return?"

"I do not know, my lady. I do not think he will return to-night."

"Give me the note. Thank you. You can close the house now, Morris. Good-night, Captain Curzon, and I shall not forget the service you have rendered me to-night."

"Don't say a word about it. I could not do less, Lady Newen. Good-night."

rate, and always comes between me and happiness."

* * * * * *

George Curzon returned to the supper-table in Jermyn-street. The "moths" had forgotten the tiresome little contretemps, complimented Gabriel on his assurance, and laughed and sang as shrilly as before Lady Newen had appeared. When the tumult was at its loudest, and the kissing-cup was being passed with much merriment from lip to lip, the door suddenly opened and George Curzon entered. He was greeted with many sallies and much gay banter.

"Ah," sneered Gabriel, rising to his feet, "here comes the preux chevalier des dames, the champion of deceived matrons. It must be a very long way to Bedford-square, judging by the hour. However, we must not grudge him a midnight tete-a-tete with the loveliest lady in London."

There was a chorus of laughter, in which Gabriel joined, but his laugh soon changed into a groan as he staggered backwards, blinded by a blow from Curzon's fist, administered between the eyes.

Gabriel rushed at his opponent, and received a second blow in his mouth, which brought the blood and cut his lip open.

Then Curzon left the room, and walked downstairs.

Gabriel, maddened by drink and passion, followed him.

"Don't think you'll have it all on your side, you cursed coward," he hissed as they stood in the doorway.

"What, haven't you had enough? There, then, take that," and Curzon dealt him a smashing blow just under the jaw close by the right ear.

Gabriel fell backwards heavily.

Freeland and Drake now came upon the scene.

"I say, old man, that was a nasty one," said Freeland. "I believe you've done for him. A crowd will be gathering directly if we don't look sharp. Here, give us a hand. We'll carry him in. You run for a doctor, Drake. He don't seem to be coming to, somehow."

They carried him up into the supper-room he had just left, and laid him on the sofa.

The white, death-like face, with its ghastly pallor and the cruel gash across the lip, seemed such a mockery of life lying in the midst of the feast under the glaring gaslights.

* * * * * *

Sir Cuthbert Newen was sitting over his breakfast in a very sullen mood at the Hotel de Louvre, Paris, when his letters were brought to him.

He glanced at the address on each. One was from his wife.

He read it with brightening face, from which a dark cloud had been cleared away, just as sunlight disperses the mist.

"Pack up my things to-day, Cross," he said to his valet. "We leave Paris by the night train."

So he came back to his home and Mysie, and their first and last little misunderstanding was all made straight, and the husband and wife talked it over, and came to the conclusion that "falling out with those we love is not so painful when it comes to kissing again with tears."

* * * * * *

"Oh, dear, I am very, very sorry! Poor, reckless Gabriel! And do you really mean that he never will sing again? I am grieved, all the more so because I feel, and always have felt that in his love for his art lay the poor fellow's only chance for redemption. Now he will just sink back into the streets which were once his home. Poor Gabriel! He always was a vagabond at heart. Oh, his beautiful voice! What a pity! There is no tenor like it in Europe."

So Mysie Newen mourned for her old comrade's fall from fame's high pedestal, and in the sorrow for his great punishment, forgot and forgave completely the insult he had offered her.

And Lorita? She recovered from her short illness, and returned to the stage, to fall in love with the next new tenor, Egberto.

Gabriel Cole was soon forgotten. When his money was gone, and his voice was lost, he found that his boon companions gave him the cold shoulder.

Gabriel, with all his faults, had been lavish enough with his gold while it lasted. There were those, both men and women, to whom he had lent large sums of money at different times, when they had come to him pleading themselves "so awfully short, don't you know."

Then came the day when he, too, in his turn was very "hard up," and he went without hesitation to these friends and asked them to help him, and they shrugged their aristocratic shoulders, and showed him the linings of their pockets.

"What a fool I have been," he cried. "I might have been rich and famous, and the husband of the loveliest woman in London, and now I must be, what I was before,

JOHN A. PLACE in his own estimation is a man of great influence in Republican political circles, but it would seem that there are other people of a different mind. When Place was a Stalwart of the stalwarts the Second Assembly District of this county, especially, was solidly half-breed and always sent a half-breed delegation to the State convention. A year ago Place, for a consideration, jumped over into the half-breed camp, and lo! the Second District this year sends a solid, iron-clad stalwart delegation to the State convention. And at the present writing it looks very much as though the same thing would happen in the First District.

THE Oswego Times asserts that the local news in THE FULTON TIMES "is almost entirely a rehash" of the Fulton correspondence in that paper. The assertion is a lie, pure and simple. Last Thursday, the day after the publication of THE FULTON TIMES, the Oswego Times contained 21 Fulton news items. Nine of this number had previously appeared in THE FULTON TIMES. A pretty large-sized "rehash" for a daily to make from a weekly, and especially so when the fact is considered that the news contained in this "rehash" was from two to five days old. Everybody knows that a weekly must rehash some of its news from daily papers, but it is rare that THE FULTON TIMES depends upon its dull Oswego neighbor for local or other news. Whenever we have use for an Oswego paper we usually pick up the Palladium.

THE candidacy of W. H. Steele for the office of State Senator is no longer doubtful, and he steps into the field backed by a solid delegation to the Senatorial convention from the Second district. This fact points to the probable renomination of Senator Lansing. The Pulaski Democrat thinks that Lansing will come from Jefferson county with a solid delegation and that Worts will be backed by the delegation from the First district of Oswego county. The Democrat suggests that "with Lansing 16, Steele 8 and Worts 8 votes, and all the delegates firm for their favorites, there could easily be a protracted and uncertain struggle for ascendancy." Decidedly Mr. Steele is more deserving of the nomination than any of the candidates, especially when the manner in which he was sold out two years ago is considered.

Presidential [illegible].

When people remember how Grant [illegible] new President Arthur [illegible] that there is something incongruous in calling our high officials public servants. As a general thing, servants are not in the habit of indulging in alcoholic stimulants and putting on very much style. Servants do not go on exploring expeditions and draw their salaries for time they are off on the spree. Servants do not invite their needy relatives to come and stay at the house of the boss, to devour his substance, and disgrace him by their bad conduct, but that is the kind of a servant General Grant was. He had not only all his relatives but all his friends feeding at the public crib. Grant, moreover, had the habit of using the public property as if it really belonged to him. The people stood it very patiently, but when he wanted to be hired for a third term he was given his walking papers, without certificate of a good character. He has been out of a position ever since, and now when he comes around, and hints that he would like to be taken back, Uncle Sam points to the gate.

We should think that President Arthur might have profited by the sad experience of Grant. He, Arthur, should strive not to forget that he is merely on probation, as it were. He does not own the country just yet, and difficult as it may be for him to realize the situation, it is a fact nevertheless, that he is merely the hired man on the premises.

Nobody objects very much to the President's going on a holiday, calling it an exploring expedition, and allowing the government to run itself, but the use of a U. S. vessel to take little Miss Arthur and some schoolgirl friends, on a pleasure trip along the New England coast, is just a trifle more cheeky than anything Grant ever attempted. It is true he used naval vessels for junketing pourposes, but he had the decency to lie about it. He used to assert that the revelers were engaged in inspecting light-houses, or were taking soundings, but Arthur has got so impudent that he does not think it worth while to prevaricate. It is stated officially that the vessel will be used by Miss Arthur for a cruise to the Isle of Shoals, Mt. Desert and Block Island. The vessel is duly provisioned and otherwise prepared for the cruise.

This is very much like the hired man ordering out the family carriage of his employer, dumping his, the hired man's family into it, loading it down with his employer's champagne and fancy groceries, and going off on a protracted excursion, without even consulting with his boss on the subject. If a private servant were to commit such an impropriety he would be requested to send in his resignation, but a public servant like Arthur does just as he pleases. The proper thing for Mr. Arthur to do is to hire a yacht for his family, or give them a nickle or so and tell them to take ride on a bob-tail street car.

The Boston Post very properly remarks on this subject: "If Miss Arthur may take her friends out sailing in a government vessel, so may Mrs. Chandler, Mrs. Lincoln, or the wives and daughters of any high government official. In fact as far as any legal right to do so is concerned, so may the wife and daughter of the humblest day laborer in the country." [Texas Siftings.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Several Oswego county villages have been visited by burglars recently.

A new church is to be built at Little Utica, on the site of the one burned a few weeks since. Mr. H. S. Van Wormer, of Phœnix, has been awarded the contract for $2,000, exclusive of seating, it being the intention to use the seats which were saved from the former building.

At a meeting of the Central New York Hop Growers' Association, held at Oneida it was resolved to use twenty-four ounce sacking. The bales are to average 190 pounds, their weight not to be less than 170 nor more than 210 pounds, and no tare added.

Sixty years ago John Hess, who died in the town of Hastings on the 8th ult. at the age of 78 years, came with his parents from Columbia, Herkimer county, to seek a new home in the then western wild of Oswego county. At that time there was only one house where the village of Parish now stands, and the site of his old home, built more than forty years ago, was an unbroken forest, where the bear and deer roamed at will.

When Stephen Ostrander was asked if he did not think his brother, who was executed at Utica, was buried, he replied :—"No, I don't. I believe them dum doctors has got his body to git posted up. I hear the sheriff sold the corpse for $500, and I'll make it hot for him when I get back home, and don't you forget it." A bystander played upon his credulity by telling him that a certain physician in Rome had possession of the body and exhibited it to any person on the payment of $1. "Wall, I'll be darned," said Stephen, "if I can borry a dollar I'm goin' to see it sure, just for the fun of it," and he walked away.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

An overburdened New York market made the cheese market in Syracuse very dull Monday. [illegible] sea port were [illegible] week [illegible] boxes were carried over. Prices ranged from 9½c. to 10¾c. [illegible]

[illegible] Total [illegible]

AT FULTON.

The average price of cheese on the Fulton market Monday evening was equal to the lowest quoted figure of last week. Twenty-five factories were represented and 2,616 boxes of cheese were offered. The sales were at 10c., while last week's prices were 10c. and 10½c. The price last year at the same date was 10½c.; in 1881, 11½c.; 1880, 12½c.; 1879, 8½c.; 1878, 7c.

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE,"

"284 ADELPHI ST., BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 20, 1881.

No family should be without ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficacy far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and known them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint bronchitus, neuralgia, lumbago, inflamation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weaknesses, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with BRANDRETH'S universal life-giving and life-healing PILLS, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good sound health. MRS. E. TOMPKINS.

ONE TRIAL.

If you have been using other Plasters one trial of Allcock's Porous will convince you of their wonderful superiority. Take no other so-called porous plasters that claim to be better, they are all frauds gotten up to sell on the world-wide reputation of the genuine article.

Did She Die?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,

"The doctors doing her no good;

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about.

"Indeed! Indeed!

"How thankful we should be for that medicine.

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch there qualities are of the utmost importance

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

The [illegible] Democrats held a caucus at Howe's hall, at 2 o'clock this afternoon and elected the following sets of delegates;

District—Patrick Powers, Wm. Kilfoyle, jr., W. T. Betts, Peter Althouse and John E. Parker.

Assembly—Melvin F. Stephens, Willard Roberts, S. Stewart, Fred Parker, and Felix Rice.

County—M. F. Stephens, Timothy Jones, Wm. Kilfoyle, jr., Lewis Hutchins, James Gilhooley, Peter Althouse and Patrick Powers.

The Town Committee for the ensuing year are John E. Parker, Willard Roberts and James Gilhooley.

A LIVELY CAUCUS.

The Republican caucus of the Town of Granby met at Howe's hall Saturday afternoon and organized with S. B. Mead as chairman and H. C. Gardner as secretary. There was a sharp contest over the district delegates between the Oswego custum house faction, led by T. G. Somers, and O. J. Jennings, John C. Wells and H. H. Merriam who championed the cause of John A. Place and sundry Fulton politicians. The Somers party were in the majority and their opponents made a vigorous effort to adjourn the caucus to a future date, but they were each time voted down and the following delegates were elected by a vote of 41 to 12: T. R. Wright, S. B. Mead, Frank Marsh, James L. Wilcox, Miles Ellis and Liberty Arnold. The defeated ticket contained the names of S. B. Mead, H. H. Merriam, L. Arnold, Frank Marsh, O. J. Jennings and Smith Stranahan. The Place men openly charged that the caucus had been packed with custom house money, but Somers said that if any money had been used he did not know of it.

The other delegations were elected without contest and are as follows:

Assembly—Isaac F. Price, O. J. Jennings, Timothy Salmon, H. H. Merriam, Daniel Shattuck and Marcus J. Geer.

County—John C. Wells, J. J. Fort, F. Lamson, Charles Dexter, Russell Carter, Nathan Drury, N. N. Stranahan and C. Fred Marsh.

H. H. Merriam, John C. Wells and S. B. Mead were elected a Town Committee.

A DIVIDED DELEGATION.

It has been given out in political circles that the delegation from the town of Volney was "solid" for Worts for Senator. A few days before the caucus a man whose name appears in the list of district delegates told a TIMES representative that he was for Lansing and since the caucus another delegate asserts that Steele is his first choice. It has also been said that the delegation was solidly halfbreed. There are two men on the delegation whose predilections heretofore have been Stalwart and there are at least two other men on the delegation who are not in hearty sympathy with halfbreedism as promulgated by the Oswego Times.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTIONS.

The Democratic county convention will be held at Mexico Friday, Oct. 5.

The Democratic convention of the First Assembly District of Oswego county will be held at Oswego to-morrow, while the convention of the Second District will also be held to-morrow, at Central Square.

A New Pastor.

The conference of the Free Methodist church was held at Alton, N. Y., last week and on Saturday evening the list of appointments were read. Rev. J. Odell, who has been stationed at Oswego for the past year, was appointed to the Fulton charge. Rev. Mr. Odell assisted in meetings at the Fulton church last winter and made a favorable impression. He comes to Fulton under favorable auspices, as the Fulton church has prospered during the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Smith and is in good working condition. Rev. Mr. Smith goes to Saratoga springs and carries the good wishes of his many Fulton friends with him. Rev. Mr. Curry will again be the chairman of the Syracuse district, which includes Fulton.

Rev. Mr. Odell will preach at the Fulton Free Methodist church Sunday.

A Young Man Gone.

Frederick H. Livingston, a son of the late Dr. A. C. Livingston, died of consumption at the Globe Hotel, Syracuse, last Friday morning. The deceased was born May 14, 1857, and was a native of Fulton where his boyhood and school days were passed. He received the finishing touches of a business education at Falley Seminary and then entered the employ of Bennett & Stewart of Fulton where he was a favorite salesman for a number of years. Subsequently he entered into a business engagement with his uncle, John A. Livingston of New York. Falling in health he traveled extensively in the far west, where he hoped to gain strength and new life from a change of climate, but all proved of no avail. His remains were brought to Fulton Friday evening and the funeral occurred Sunday at 1 o'clock, Rev. J. Petrie of Pompey Hill being the officiating clergyman, while Messrs. N. H. Gilbert, F. A. Gage and Mrs. James Pratt and Miss Gertie Stephens furnished the music, Mrs. Fred Emerick presiding at the piano. The attendance was large, including Mr. John A. Livingston and Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Platt of New York. The remains were interred in Mt. Adnah. Mr. Livingston was a young man of generous impulses and was a general favorite among his companions. His early demise will be deeply regretted and mourned by a large circle of friends and relatives.

Wedded by a Sick Sister's Bedside.

As was announced in THE TIMES the wedding of Earl E. Safford and Miss Grace Morton had been arranged for today, but Miss Mary Morton, sister of Miss Grace Morton, was in the meantime stricken with sickness and Saturday it was thought that her dissolution was near. Being informed of her condition she expressed a desire to see her sister wedded to her future husband. Accordingly Mr. B. R. Dow was speedily sent for and the marriage ceremony was quietly performed in the presence of a few friends at the sick sister's bedside. Happily under the fostering care of Drs. D. E. Lake and W. L. Woodbury Miss Morton's condition is much improved and she is on the fair road to recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Safford to-day started for New York where they will reside.

A Barn and Two Horses Burned.

About 11 o'clock Monday night a barn belonging to Mrs. Frank Baker, residing about three miles from Fulton and near the Battle Island cheese factory, was burned with its contents, including two horses. A man named Terrel, who is employed by Mrs. Baker, attempted to get one of the horses out, but was knocked down by the struggling animal. He was partially stunned and was so nearly suffocated by smoke that he was barely able to crawl out of the barn.

Thursday was Miss Lake's birthday and she was the recipient of a number of handsome presents.

The organization of the teachers' class for the present term at the Union Graded School is nearly completed and the class is becoming thoroughly interested. The membership, as far as is at present definitely known, is as follows:

Anna E. Bogue, Allie M. VanCamp, Laura N. Rice, Lillian R. Kellogg, Grace G. Fuller, Mary L. King, Nellie E. Wise, Gertrude F. Stephens, Clara A. Wright, Ada M. Wright, Clara E. Cable, Jessie Hart Coe, Libbie Ostrander, Letta Hill, Anna L. Conners, Jamie L. Chapman, Cora B. Ferguson, Melva Hamilton, Willard W. Rowlee.

There will also be a teachers' class for the winter term of school, Prof. Boothby having received during the past week authority and the necessary documents from Albany for the formation of such a class.

THE TIMES of August 15 published the news of the drowning of a boy named Flood from one of the Rafferty's boats which was lying in the East river, New York. There are two brothers named Rafferty who run canal boats and there were two brothers, John and Michael Flood, who were drivers, one on each of the Rafferty's boats. It was reported that Michael Flood was drowned from John Rafferty's boat. It now transpires that it was John Flood who was drowned and from Edward Rafferty's boat, the Ira Betts. A letter has been received from John J. Cantlon, the other driver on the Ira Betts, who says that he, Cantlon, and John Flood went to several saloons and drank heavily, after which they started for the boat. Cantlon states that when they arrived at the boat it was between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning and that a night watchman assisted him aboard, while Flood sat down on the dock to get some wheat out of his shoe, and that was the last that was seen of him alive.

H. & A. Rosenbloom have returned from New York having purchased the best stock of Clothing ever brought to Fulton.

THE [illegible] RACE.

There were six events on the programme, the first being a mile race, best two in three, open to all amateurs. Fred Hart of Oswego, and J. J. Wright and Bert Hoff of Fulton entered. At the start in the first heat Hart took a slight lead, but was passed by Wright at the quarter mile. At the half mile line Hart passed Wright and held a lead to the finish, although his doughty competitor gave him a hot race, especially on the home stretch. In the second heat Hart had it all his own way and finished with a good lead. Hoff came in third in both heats. The time was as follows:

	First Heat.	Second Heat.
Hart	4:01	4:08
Wright	4:07	4:12
Hoff	4:30	4:35

THE FULTON WHEELMEN'S CONTEST.

There were four entries in the next event, which was a half mile race, best two in three, and the result was a lively contest between Hary DeForest, C. R. Willard and James Elder, jr., the fourth contestant, Judson Prosser, withdrawing at the end of the first heat. DeForest went to the front almost from the start and held the first place to the finish in two straight heats. The summary of time indicates a close race:

	First Heat.	Second Heat.
DeForest	1:52	1:52
Willard, C. R.	1:56	1:55
Elder	1:59	2:00

THE OSWEGO WHEEL CLUB'S RACES.

Messrs. Campbell, Bates and Dickson started in the race open only to members of the Oswego Wheel Club. The contest was decided in two heats, Bates, who took the lead in each heat, being distanced by Campbell before the quarter mile was reached, the race terminating as follows:

	First Heat.	Second Heat.
Campbell	2:05	2:02
Bates	2:17	2:13
Dickson	2:34	Drawn.

It will be seen that in this race between the Oswego bicyclists that the time of the winner was slower than the time of the slowest man in the preceding race between the Fulton bicyclists.

THE SIX MINUTE RACE,

in which nearly every bicyclist on the grounds entered was won by F. C. Bazley of Oswego, said to be the poorest rider in that city. The conditions of this race made the winner the one making the mile nearest to six minutes, and the result of the race depended upon guess work and chance.

THE HURDLE RACE

was amusing in the extreme and was won by S. B. Mead. Two other men who came in ahead of Mead being disqualified because they did not comply with the conditions of the race. This also gave F. C. Bazley of Oswego, the second place.

THE TRICYCLE RACE

was started with three tricycles but after two heats a slight disagreement arose and the race was barred.

C. R. Nichols and Dr. W. A. Hall were the judges, while H. C. Gardner acted as time-keeper and Mr. Miller of Oswego as starter.

SPORTING NOTES.

James Elder jr., will contest in the bicycle races at the Oswego Falls fair.

Fred Hart of Oswego, Jay J. Wright and Frank Willard are spoken of as probable contestants in the bicycle races at the fair.

Frank Willard, who at one time thought of entering the races of the Springfield bicycle tournament, has decided not to do so.

A. Emerick and John Sharp were at Fair Haven last Friday to witness the glass ball shoot between the Leatherstockings of Oswego county and the Wayne county Gun Club.

A game of base ball between the Oswego Falls Reading Room and Phoenix Clubs had been arranged to be played on the fair grounds Saturday. The Phœnix club was on hand, but owing to the inclement weather the game was deferred until next Saturday, when it will be played on the same grounds.

NEW ESTEY ORGAN $75.

At a meeting of the Baptist church society yesterday afternoon it was decided that the ordination of Mr. B. R. Dow, their new pastor, should occur on the first Wednesday in October. All the churches of this Baptist Association will be invited to send their pastors and a committee of two to attend the ordination services.

It was also decided at the meeting that the church should have their usual victualing establishment at the coming fair and a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

For Man & Beast.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND GREATEST MEDICINE

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier,

SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap rum or poor whiskey drink to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. It is composed of the choicest Roots, Barks and Berries, combined with the EXTRACT OF SULPHUR in such proportions as to make it NATURE'S GREAT NERVINE.

SULPHUR Bitters

The Dose is small—only a Teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE.

THE FULTON TIMES
Wednesday, Sept. 12, 1883.

Overworked.

Up with the birds of the early morning—
 The dew drop glows like a precious gem;
Beautiful tints in the skies are dawning,
 But she's never a moment to look at them.
The men are wanting their breakfast early;
 She must not linger; she must not wait;
For words that are sharp and words that are surly
 Are what men give when meals are late.

Oh, glorious colors the clouds are turning,
 If she would but look over hills and trees;
But here are the dishes, and here is the churning—
 Those things must always yield to these.
The world is filled with the wine of beauty,
 If she could but pause to drink it in;
But pleasure she says must wait for duty—
 Neglected work is committed sin.

The days grow hot and her hands are weary;
 O, for an hour to cool her head;
Out with the birds and the winds so cheery!
 But she must get dinner, and make her bread.
The busy men in the hay field working,
 If they saw her sitting with idle hand,
Would think her lazy, and call it shirking,
 And she never could make them understand.

They do not know that the heart within her
 Hungers for beauty and things sublime.
They only know that they want their dinner,
 Plenty of it, and just on time.
And after the sweeping, and churning and baking,
 And dinner dishes all put by,
She sits and sews, though her head is aching,
 Till time for supper and chores draws nigh.

Her boys at school must look like others,
 She says as she patches their frocks and hose,
For the world is quick to censure mothers
 For the least neglect in their children's clothes.
Her husband comes in from the field of labor,
 He gives no praise to his weary wife;
She's done no more than has her neighbor;
 'Tis the lot of all in country life.

But after the strife and weary tussle
 With life is done, and she lies at rest,
The nation's brain and heart and muscle—
 Her sons and daughters—shall call her blest,
And I think the sweetest joy of Heaven,
 The rarest bliss of eternal life,
And the fairest crown of all will be given
 Unto the wayworn farmer's wife.

In the city of Baltimore there are about 11,000 colored Catholics out of a colored population of 53,000.

Bishop Borgess has forbidden the Roman Catholic churches of Michigan to raise any money by raffles, fairs, excursions or balls.

The first surpliced choir of men and boys ever seen within the bounds of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Vermont has made its appearance in St. Paul's church, Burlington.

Spurgeon's wife has for seven years been making collections of books for pastors whose salaries are small. In this good work she has collected and distributed over fifty thousand volumes. Last year's work was 9,146 books.

The statement which was made some time ago as to England furnishing images for Hindoo idolators is now reiterated with increased emphasis. It is said that these false gods are made in great quantities in Birmingham, and supplied as ordinary merchandise.

The corner stone of a mission church was laid in Cleveland this week by Dan. P. Eells, who has for six years been superintendent of the Sunday school from which the church has grown. Mr. Eells gives the church the building, which is to cost $30,000.

A Japanese scholar, not a Christian, declares that Professor Fisher's article on "The Christian Religion," which originally appeared in the North American Review, is the best defense of Christianity that has ever appeared in the empire. It has been translated by one of the missionaries and will be published in Japanese.

A correspondent of the Evangelist writes: "I am happy to say, so far as I can learn, that western Congregationalists—certainly those in this region, Oberlin included—utterly repudiate the new theology heresy. When in Chicago, Mr. Beecher, as I have been informed by the highest authority, was not invited into any Congregationalist pulpit.

The monogamous Mormons since rededicating their old temple at Kirtland, O., have maintained regular services there and are branching out into missionary effort in northern Ohio. They claim to have 30,000 members to 110,000 who believe in polygamy. They have churches in Boston, Fall River and Providence. They say the breach betwene them and Brigham Young's church is irreconcilable.

President Eliot, of Harvard, thinks it would be a great improvement in the relation between minister and congregation if the minister were frankly allowed sometimes to comment upon a fresh book instead of preaching a sermon, sometimes to read other men's sermons, instead of their own, and in general to direct his hearers in good reading, and bring them to know something of the minds and works of the leaders of the race, living and dead.

Two of the converts in a recent revival in Kansas City, Mo., who were to join the Presbyterian church asked for baptism by immersion. The Baptists offered the use of their baptistry for the purpose, but the pastor declined to perform the ceremony for his Presbyterian colleague. The Presbyterian pastor shrank from entering the water so a Methodist pastor came to the rescue and baptised the two Presbyterian converts in the Baptist church.

Our American system of theological training is no failure, and it is a libel on the ministry to say so. Both among the living and the dead, we could point to noble examples of its effectiveness. It has answered its purpose well through all our annals; and it is to-day answering that high purpose with a grand success in more than ten thousand pulpits. There is nothing in our country which has been a grander success than its faithful, hard-working ministry. There is nothing of which the whole American church may be prouder than its present effective method of ministerial education. [Chicago Interior.

Bishop Huntington of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of central New York utters some severe strictures on Sunday schools as generally managed. He says that the only task which warrants their existence is the religious training of children. He claims that for this great work the provision which is made is wholly inadequate. He hints that most of the teachers although well-meaning, are "without indispensable experience, dignity, discrimination or the faculty of instructing." And he thinks the clergyman who lets the duty of [illegible]

Lathrop's Summer Song,
FOR 1883.

Summer's here rather queer,
Weather neither warm nor clear,
But croquet I display,
For the skies will mend some day.

See my fishing tackle case,
Full of flies for killing bass,
Pike or prout or speckled trout
All you can pull out.

Rods and lines, fragrant pines,
Bananas from the tropic climes,
Rockers now, wagons too,
With iron ex, I'll sell to you.

Pipes, tobacco and cigars,
Trumpets, horses, engines, cars,
Doll cabs neat, candies sweet,
Bass drums never beat.

SCROFULA.

[illegible] of scrofula [illegible] has the power [illegible] by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle [illegible], as illustrated by [illegible] testimonials, prove Hood's Sarsaparilla to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,
SARAH C. WHITTIER.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is a skillfully-prepared compound, concentrated extract, by a process peculiarly our own, of the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science as alteratives, blood-purifiers, diuretics, and tonics.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 70,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

AYER'S

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced failing out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

Fashion Notes.

Coffee colors are revived.

Velvet hats are the English rage.

A broad brim needs a good sized chin.

A velvet and velveteen season is predicted.

Felt and velvet bonnets are taking the place of plush.

Copper color and mignonette are again fashionable.

English jackets and jockey cap bonnets will be much worn in the fall.

New round hats have stiff high crowns and straight or rolling brims.

Heads, wings, breasts, and crests of birds are the favorite ornaments for fall hats.

Small shoulder capes or collars with full pleated ruffles are among late novelties.

Wool batistes in checks and white and black mixtures will be much worn this fall.

The long Newmarket coat and the Newmarket bonnet, a jockey style, go together.

Grays, browns, and indefinite shades of blue or blue green bid fair to become very popular.

The chequer is still the rage, and is applied to every class of fabric from zephyr to satin.

New brocades have corded edges around the figures or flowers in the style of Escurial lace.

Crushed strawberry is no longer fashionable, shot blue and plum color having taken its place.

For traveling and utility suits for fall wear, checkered and hair lined flannels will be much used.

A pretty costume is composed of spotted muslin, upon which flowers, in their natural tints, are printed.

A dress entirely of silk is no longer correct for street wear, but has been relegated to carriage wear by women of taste and fashion.

There is death to bangs in every breeze that blows from France. Parisian beauties now wear their hair combed back from the forehead.

Mother Hubbard dresses are all the rage for young girls in their teens. They are belted at the waist, which is something of an improvement.

Chestnuts of gold are still worn, and dandelions with flower and seed pod are used not only on bonnets, but on ball toilettes. Lace parasols are arranged with Bernhardt fouillis of lace.

Many little girls are proud of their rich silk dresses, and this feeling is sometimes unpleasantly prominent, but at the same time the little ones are far more easy and comfortably in their simple cotton dresses, in which, if the truth must be told, they look quite as pretty, and which are far more suitable to the ages of the wearers.

Farm Gossip.

Good butter may be spoiled in churning. Over-churning, or churning at too high or too low a temperature, affects the texture and changes the proper waxiness to a sticky greasiness.

We once conquered a field of thistles by plowing early, planting to early potatoes which were dug in August, after which the surface was cultivated from once to twice a week until frost came. Not a thistle root was seen in the subsequent planting. [Green's Fruit Grower.

A milker should learn to milk quickly. Slow milking will spoil any cow, and there is little doubt that many cows are made unprofitable by bad milking. As soon as the flow of milk begins it should be drawn as rapidly as possible. Stripping with the fingers and thumb is a bad practice and should be unlearned at once and the whole hand used to milk with.

In contrast with the common practice of letting dairy cows go dry four months or so every year, a recent writer says that he has a cow that has completed her fourth farrow year, and has averaged during the past six months a fraction over five pounds of butter per week of first-rate quality. He cites also the case of a cow in Berkshire, England, which ten years ago dropped twins, and has given a good mess of milk daily ever since.

Strawberry plants may be set now and for a month to come on well prepared land, although as a general thing we prefer spring settling. Potted plants, if set now and mulched will produce a good crop next year. Strawberries are as easily grown as potatoes, and the farmer who does not raise an abundant supply for his family is not a good provider. The strongest thing in favor of autumn setting is the certainty that the work is done, and no danger that it will be forgotten or get the "go by" in the hurry of spring work.

Cattle and sheep should always have plenty of shade in the pasture. They like when they have eaten enough to lie down in a cool shade and take their comfort, and if they can do so they will thrive much better. A few shade trees for this purpose will pay well for any drain they make upon the fertility of the soil. If there are no trees it will pay to erect a cheap shed, even though it be but a rude structure of four posts set in the ground and a roof covered with brush wood or pine limbs. It should be open to the north always, and may be open on all sides if more convenient.

Eggs are most delicate when fresh. The sweetest and best eggs are made from good grain. By thorough good feeding the size, quality and quantity of eggs are largely increased. This thing can only be ascertained when the fowls are in confinement, or limited in their range. Thus situated they become a source of more profit to the owner. Green food is only an appetizer, and helps to mitigate the heating effect of their heavy diet. If ten acres are enough for profitable farming purposes, certainly two should be devoted to poultry. Fowls are great scavengers, and in fact, filthy feeders when at range, and the flavor of the eggs is more or less affected thereby.

The wheat crop at home and abroad continues to indicate a yield below that of last year and below the average expectation of three months ago. No doubt now exists of a deficiency of at least 70,000,000 bushels in this country, and an increase in the estimates of European demand of about one-half this amount. A part of this increase of about 100,000,000 bushels in demand compared with supply will be made up in [illegible] and our own Pacific [illegible]

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."

148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

The Barefoot Boy.

'Tis evening, and the round red sun sinks slowly in the west;
The flowers fold their petals up, the birds fly to their nest.
The crickets chirrup in the grass, the bats wheel to and fro,
And tinkle tankle up the lane the lowing cattle go,
And the rich man from his carriage looks out on them as they come—
On them and on the barefoot boy that drives the cattle home!

"I wish," the boy said to himself, "I was that millionare,
I'd have a palace for my home and never know a care;
There is no wish that heart can frame, I would not gratify,
There should not be in all the land a happier man than I!
What joy 'twould be to lead a life where cares would never come,
And be no more the barefoot boy that drives the cattle home!

And the rich man sighs unto himself: "My wealth I'd gladly give Could I live any other life than that which now I live—
Could I leave behind the dust and glare and tumult of the town,
And sleep at night, without a care, if stocks go up and down,
O, I'd give my palace and my yacht that sails the ocean foam
To be once more the barefoot boy that drives the cattle home."

WON FOR A WAGER.

CHAPTER I.

THE WAGER.

It was a warm afternoon in June as two well-dressed gentlemen were walking down the shady side of Piccadilly.

The older of the two could not have been mistaken for anything but a soldier.

It was not only his bronzed complexion, luxuriant moustache, and his erect bearing, but there is a je ne sais quoi about a military man that always betrays him to the careful observer.

As a matter of fact, Harry St. Albans was in the Guards, and was generally acknowledged to be one of the handsomest of that regiment of Adonises.

His companion was Horace Austen, who in order to avoid the stigma of being called an idle man, had chosen diplomacy as a profession.

No doubt he would have been an honor to it, and have left a well-known name behind him, but, unfortunately, when his father died he had been left sole possessor of about fifteen thousand a year, together with the patrimonial acres in Leicestershire.

Of course there was no necessity for him to work under the circumstances, and accordingly he enjoyed life after his own fashion.

There was a great difference between these two men, and it was probably the total dissimilarity of their natures and characters that made them such staunch friends.

St. Albans was firm and determined, but seldom lost his temper. He was studious—for a soldier, and cared but little for the empty chit-chat of society.

He was very proud, and somewhat sensitive, and would rather suffer anything than it should be imagined that he feared to embark in any enterprise, however hazardous, or that he considered anything impossible.

It was a favorite aphorism of his that there was no such word as "cannot" in the English language.

Horace Austen, on the contrary, was weak and vacillating, hasty and irritable, and would as soon have thought of running a mile as of reading for even an hour. He was as big a gossip as the proverbial "old woman," and was never happier than when detailing the latest on dits.

With all this he was good-hearted and generous to a fault; his defects arose chiefly from want of thought, and were rather those of omission than commission.

"She is certainly a most beautiful girl," observed Austen, curling the tips of his rather weakly little black moustache.

"Yes," replied St. Albans, rather absently.

"But awfully proud," continued Austen.

"I didn't think so," answered the guardsman.

"Why, my dear fellow," exclaimed the little diplomatist, "to my certain knowledge she declined to dance with between twenty and thirty of the best partis in the room last night, and kept her card half empty. And when I said, 'My dear Miss Carlton, may I take the liberty of enquiring why you have refused so many dances?' she turned her big eyes full upon me—you know the way she has, as though she were piercing you through and through—and replied: 'You may take the liberty, Mr. Austen, but I don't think I should, if I were you.' 'Why not, Miss Carlton?' I asked. 'Because it will be so much more pleasant for both of us if you will mind your own business.'"

A low laugh escaped from St. Albans as his friend concluded, and he observed:

"That was awfully good! You must have felt rather sat upon?"

"Good, do you call it?" cried Austen with mock indignation. "By Jove, I did not think so, and I know if she hadn't been such a deuced pretty girl I should have said something rude."

"You'd only have been sorry afterwards," remarked St. Albans.

"I suppose I should," replied Austen. "Besides, Isabel Carlton has something about her that seems to keep a fellow within bounds, you know."

"Has she, indeed?" observed St. Albans with languid interest. "I must pay more attention to her. I was only introduced to her last night, you know."

"And didn't you think she was charming?"

"I only noticed that she was a remarkably pretty girl, and waltzed better than any one I have danced with this year," answered the guardsman. "But you know, old man, I am not so impressible as you are, and don't go into raptures over every pink and white complexion I [illegible]."

"[illegible] a cold-hearted wretch, Harry," [illegible] Austen. "Here are half the [illegible] in town sighing for you, [illegible]"

"[illegible]," replied St. Albans. [illegible]

"Oh, I think she is very much like the rest of her sex," answered St. Albans; "easily won if a man only goes the right way to work."

"You are wrong, Harry," cried Austen. "I am persuaded you have made a mistake this time. Of course I know the experience you have had among the ladies, but Isabel Carlton is very different to the majority of girls."

"All right, Horace, if you like to think so," replied St. Albans; "but when you know as much about them as I do, you will agree with me that they are all alike. Some are a little better, some a little worse; but——"

All at once somebody paused just in front of them, and a voice they both knew exclaimed:

"How are you, dear boys? What may be the subject of conversation? It must be wonderfully interesting, for you have cut about half-a-dozen people who have bowed and nodded to you, knocked down four or five old women and children, cannoned against any amount of male pedestrians, and were finally about to pass me without recognition!"

The speaker was a friend of Austen's and an acquaintance of St. Albans.

His name was Barbsly, he had traveled a good deal, and seemed to have brought home the vices of the different countries he had visited.

He was a handsome man of the Machiavelian type of countenance.

Dark, with pointed black moustache, large black eyes, low forehead, and thin lips with an habitual sneer ever upon them.

Horace Austen shook hands with him, and replied:

"We were arguing about a young lady we saw at the Countess of Argand's last night; St. Albans is such a lady-killer that he seems to imagine he has only to look at a girl, and she is immediately won. I was maintaining that this young lady would prove an exception to the rule."

"Perhaps Captain St. Albans argues from experience," observed Barbsly with his usual, satirical smile. "But may I enquire who the young lady in question is?"

"Miss Carlton," replied Austen; "one of the finest girls in London."

A slight change passed across Barbsly's countenance, but he regained his composure so rapidly that neither of his companions noticed it.

"I am acquainted with the young lady you have been speaking about," said he quickly, "and I am of your opinion, Austen, that in spite of his well known successes among the fair sex, he is boasting of what he would find beyond his strength."

"I was not boasting at all," remarked St. Albans quietly, "I merely observed that I thought Miss Carlton was constituted very much like other young ladies."

"In what respect?"

"In that any decent-looking man, who chose to take the trouble, could win her," answered St. Albans.

"You are wrong, St. Albans," exclaimed Barbsly, who had turned round and was now walking with the two friends; "you are wrong, I can assure you. I have known Miss Carlton for some time, and she is utterly without heart."

"Do you think so?" asked the guardsman negligently.

"I am sure of it," replied Barbsly, in for him a somewhat excited manner; "and, what is more, I will back my opinion for five hundred—a thousand—any sum you like."

"It is scarcely a thing I care for betting about," answered St. Albans.

"What, have you changed your mind?" cried Barbsly. "I thought so!"

"I have not altered my opinion in the least," answered St. Albans; "but when I was at Eton it was not considered good form to bet about women; perhaps they have different ideas where you have been traveling. Where is it—Africa, South America, or Japan?"

For a moment Barbsly clenched his teeth, and a lurid light shone in his eyes, but by a violent effort he succeeded in dismissing his emotion, and replied with a low mocking laugh:

"That's a very good excuse, St. Albans, but it won't hold water. You can't pretend to think that anything that occurred between us in confidence would ever be divulged. Whenever a man contradicts or differs from me, I always like him to back his opinion, unless, indeed, he has conscientious scruples; but you are not a Quaker, Captain St. Albans, are you?"

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Austen. "Take his bet, Harry. It is only a bit of fun, of course, and will never be known beyond ourselves."

"I don't like it," said St. Albans.

"Will you retract your opinion then?"

"No, I'll be hanged if I do," replied the guardsman. "I'll take your wager. How much shall it be?"

"Whatever you like."

"Say five hundred pounds, then."

"All right," agreed Barbsly, pulling out a little betting-book, and making a note. "And what length of time will you take to bring this haughty young lady down to her bearings?"

"Shall we say three months?"

"Oh, you had better take until Christmas," answered the other; "it will give you more chance; and you will require all that time—and a year or two longer."

"Just as you like," said St. Albans carelessly.

"Then it stands as follows," exclaimed Barbsly, looking at his book: "Captain St. Albans bets Marcus Barbsly five hundred pounds that he will win Isabel Carlton within the space of six months; dated the 13th of June, 18—"

"That will do," replied the guardsman listlessly; then turning round he added: "We are going down St. James's-street; which way are you traveling?"

This hint was too plain to be resisted. Barbsly colored deeply, and was about to make a remark, but controlling himself he remarked:

"I am going straight on. Bye-bye."

"Why did you get rid of Barbsly like that?" enquired Austen as soon as they were alone.

"Because the fellow is such a consummate cad," answered St. Albans. "I never could bear the man, but after this afternoon's business, I dislike him more than ever."

"What has he done?" asked Austen.

"Why, your own common sense ought to tell you," responded the guardsman, [illegible] Isabel Carlton; and then seeing that I did [illegible]

"No, Harry, you are not a fool," observed Austen; but——"

"Look here, old man," interrupted his friend, "let us drop the subject please. I am sick of it, and for two pins I'd send the fellow his money and scratch the bet."

CHAPTER II.

A GOOD COMMENCEMENT.

After this Austen held his peace, and they continued to walk on in silence.

They had just arrived at the end of the street, and were about to cross over, when a sudden exclamation from his friend drew St. Albans attention to an old gentleman who was standing nearly in the centre of the roadway.

Owing to a levee that was being held at the palace, St. James's-street was crowded with vehicles of all descriptions from the humble hansom to the dashing drag.

In the midst of this crowd of carriages the old gentleman was standing, leaning upon a stick.

He had succeeded in crossing half over, and then, hemmed in on every side, he was unable either to advance or retreat.

"By heavens!" exclaimed Austen, "he will be knocked down and run over."

As he spoke the old gentleman was standing erect, eyeing the approaching vehicles defiantly.

At this moment a handsom cab dashed round the corner at full speed, the driver whipping up his animal to renewed speed.

In an instant St. Albans took in the scene.

Before a warning could possibly be given or understood, the cab would have passed over the prostrate body of the old man.

Without the slightest hesitation St. Albans sprang into the road.

Pushing past the horses' heads, dodging some and bending under others, he threw himself in front of the helpless old man.

The next moment the hansom was upon them.

With a grasp of iron St. Albans seized the horse's reins close by the bit.

Then exerting his immense strength, he forced the animal back upon his haunches.

The cabman now commenced to be abusive, but, fortunately, a policeman made his appearance, and St. Albans was enabled to land the old gentleman with safety upon the pavement.

"My dear sir," he exclaimed, holding out both his hands, "you have saved my life! What more can I say? I was all through the Crimean campaign, and witnessed some gallant actions, but I never saw anything to beat your pluck and promptitude of action!"

"My dear sir, pray don't mention it," replied St. Albans, "I only stopped a horse."

"And lucky for me you were there to stop it, or I shouldn't be standing here now," answered the old man.

Then catching sight of Austen, whom he had not noticed before, owing to his excitement, he exclaimed:

"Ah, Austen, my young friend, I am glad to see you. Doubly glad because you can do me the favor of introducing me to this gentleman."

"With pleasure, general," replied Austen. "Allow me to introduce you: General Carlton, Captain St. Albans—Captain St. Albans, General Carlton."

"More than pleased, sir, to make your acquaintance," cried the general, "and a very lucky acquaintance for me. And now what are you young gentlemen going to do this evening? If you are not engaged, you must come and dine with me."

"Only too happy," answered St. Albans.

"Very good. Then I shall depend upon you," said the old gentleman. "Seven sharp! You can show your friend the way, Austen. Until then good-bye."

A hearty shake of the hand and they parted; the old general going in one direction, and the two friends in the other.

"What a curious coincidence," exclaimed St. Albans. "I might have waited for five years if I had tried for such a thing."

"Deuced strange," said Austen.

"Bye-the-bye, you never told me you were on familiar terms with the family," continued the guardsman, "or even that you knew the old gentleman."

"You didn't give me an opportunity," replied Austen, coloring slightly; "you shut a fellow up so that he has no chance to say half he wants to."

"I say, old man," said St. Albans in a low deep voice, and looking searchingly at him as he spoke; "there's nothing between you and this girl, is there? If so, for Heaven's sake, speak out, and Barbsly and his bet may all go to the deuce together for what I care!"

"No, indeed, Harry," answered Austen. "She cares no more for me than she does for you. I admire her, of course, as anyone would who had the slightest perception of the beautiful, but she certainly does not return my admiration."

"That is all right then," remarked St. Albans. "Now let us go in and have a brandy-and-soda."

The motion was agreed to, and carried. After which came a game of billiards, and then they adjourned to their chambers in order to dress for dinner.

It was about a quarter to seven as they alighted from their hansom at the general's door, and as they were going up the steps the general himself drove up.

They entered together, and Carlton said:

"Come upstairs, my boy, and let me introduce my daughter to the man who saved my life."

They entered the drawing-room where two young ladies were seated.

Isabel Carlton and her cousin, Lucy Meredith.

Isabel Carlton was a magnificent brunette, with very large eyes, gorgeous hair, and a clear pale complexion.

Her form was most voluptuously moulded, and her features were as regular and as perfect as though they had been cut from marble. Lucy Meredith, on the contrary, was a blonde, petite, with blue eyes, and golden hair, her little nose a trifle "tip-tilted," as the Poet Laureate expresses it, and innocent mischief lurking in every dimple. There was nothing regular in her countenance, and yet the [illegible] made a charming face.

"Oh, papa," cried Isabel, rising as her father came in, "what has made you so late? We were getting quite anxious!"

"You may well have felt anxious, my dear," replied the general. "For if it had not been for this gentleman I should never have returned alive."

"What do you mean, papa?" [illegible] Isabel, looking from one to the other, as though to [illegible] her [illegible] the way, and I gave myself up for lost. Suddenly Captain St. Albans dashed in among the vehicles, laid hold of the horse, forced him back, and got me safely on to the pavement. By-the-bye, how did you manage that, St. Albans? Upon my soul, I believe you carried me. Never mind, here I am, safe and sound, and now I'll run away and dress, while you thank the gentleman who saved your poor old father's life."

The general quitted the room, and Isabel advanced toward our hero.

Fixing her beautiful eyes upon him, and placing her hands in his, she exclaimed:

"Captain St. Albans, it is impossible to thank you adequately for the service you have rendered me! But believe me I feel it deeply, and shall never forget it as long as I live. I am very grateful, more grateful in fact than though you had saved my life. For if I had gone it would not have mattered, if poor dear papa—"

Here she broke down, and with a stifled sob burst into tears, and hastily left the apartment.

Meanwhile Austen had been speaking to Miss Meredith, and when the guardsman was left alone, he exclaimed:

"Come here, Harry, and allow me to introduce you to Miss Lucy Meredith. Miss Meredith, this is Captain St. Albans, the hero of the evening, and——"

"Horace," interrupted St. Albans, "I shall have to break your neck for you."

"Pray don't do that," answered Austen, "for if you do, there will be nobody left to talk to Miss Meredith."

"For Miss Meredith's sake, then, I'll let you off this time," said the captain, "but don't do it again."

"Upon my word, Captain St. Albans, you seem determined to put us all under obligations," said Lucy Meredith with a merry smile; "not content with saving uncle's life, and overcoming Bella with gratitude, you allow Mr. Austen to live for my sake, thus making me your debtor also."

"I would do far more than that to make you my debtor, Miss Meredith," replied St. Albans, bowing low; and in this strain the conversation was carried on for some minutes.

At the end of this time the general and Isabel re-entered the room together, shortly after which dinner was announced.

"If you'll take Bella, St. Albans," said the general, "and you march with Lucy, Austen, I'll bring up the rear."

"I am sorry I was the cause of discomposing you so," remarked the captain as they were going downstairs.

"Don't mention it, Captain St. Albans," answered Isabel; "on the contrary, I ought to apologize to you for the unceremonious manner in which I left you. But my tears were tears of gladness, not of sorrow, and this I can assure you is a day I shall not forget for very many years to come, if I ever do."

They now entered the dining-room, St Albans being seated on the general's right hand, and opposite to Isabel.

As soon as the fish had been served, the general observed:

"Excuse me asking, St. Albans, but what regiment do you belong to?"

"The Guards, sir," replied our hero.

"Humph! Then I suppose you have not yet seen any service?"

"Not yet, general," answered St. Albans, "but I hope to."

"That's right, my boy! That's right!"

"I am getting very tired of this humdrum round of amusements, mingled with a little mounting guard and an occasional field-day and sham-fight."

"I should think you were," cried the general. "I cannot understand how fellows, who wish to be considered men, can put up with it year after year."

"Simply because they have nothing manly in their nature," replied Isabel, the color rising to her cheeks as she spoke. "I really think that the most detestable sight in the world is what we call a feather-bed soldier. All that is manly about him is his moustache, and all that is soldierly is his sword."

"Oh, come, my dear," cried her father, "I think you are a little too hard on the poor fellows. Remember that some of these same 'feather-bed soldiers', as you term them, have proved themselves men, and good men too, more than once."

"Never mind, uncle," said Lucy Meredith. "That is Isabel's sole point, you know. I do believe, if she had her way, she would make all the men go out and fight, as some of those horrid savage tribes do abroad."

"And what would you do, Lucy," inquired Isabel, "keep them all at home to assist in winding wool?"

There was evidently a hidden allusion in this, for Lucy colored up to the roots of her hair, and the subject of conversation was changed.

The gentlemen did not sit long after the ladies had left them.

One bottle of particular wine that the general only permitted to be drank on high days and holidays, a Trichinopoly cheroot, and they adjourned to the drawing-room.

"Now, girls, let us have some music," cried the old gentleman. "You don't know what an aviary of singing birds I have," he continued, turning to St. Albans. "I call Isabel my canary, and Lucy my linnet, and when their voices are combined in a duet, I would not give a snap of the fingers to hear any prima donna in the world."

Lucy commenced [illegible] ballad, well suited to her [illegible] St. Albans took the opportunity of [illegible]

"[illegible]

I hope you have not thought so for an instant."

"I am very glad to hear that," answered the captain, "because I aspire to a somewhat higher position in your estimation than that of a feather-bed soldier."

"Dear Captain St. Albans," cried Isabel earnestly, "pray do not mention that again. You were far from my thoughts, I can assure you, when I made that remark. Besides, have you not shown us to-day what your are made of?"

"Pray do not allude to that," said Captain St. Albans, half petulantly.

"I must say," went on Isabel, not noticing the interruption, "that for your own sake I wish you had a better opportunity of showing what you really are, than you are ever likely to have in your present regiment."

"I cannot say how grateful I am, Miss Carlton," replied St. Albans, "for the interest you exhibit, and perhaps the day may come, and before long, when it will bear fruit."

Isabel was now requested by her father to sing a favorite song of his, and then the cousins sang a duet.

The gentlemen now rose to take their leave.

"Remember this, my boy," said the general as he shook St. Albans by the hand, "you will be welcome here at any time. But wait a minute, that is a general invitation, which they say is none at all. Now I always insist upon one quiet night a week, and the girls have chosen Thursday, and if you like to come again, you will always find your napkin laid for you and a hearty welcome behind it."

"Good-night, Miss Carlton."

"Good-night, Captain St. Albans, and if it is necessary, allow me to second papa's invitation. We shall always be glad to see the one who saved his life."

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

This year is the semi-centennial of the inauguration of the movement called Pusyism in England, and it is being somewhat celebrated.

Williams college, with the beginning of this year, dispenses with evening prayers. It is the last of the New England colleges to make this change.

Dr. Kennion, the New York evangelist, has resumed his campaign in lower New York. He wheels a cart, distributing soap and dealing out bread and coffee.

Dr. Newman Hall argues against the pew-renting system, on gospel and upon economic grounds, and comes to the conclusion that it is not reasonable, not equitable, not expedient, and beyond all question unscriptural. If for no other reason than that it makes improper distinctions in the house of God, he argues that it ought to be abandoned.

Street preaching is losing what little power it ever had in this city, and also to a great extent elsewhere. The fact that so few preachers who have very good sense officiate in the streets tends to diminish the influence which the declaring of the gospel to the passing multitudes would otherwise carry. There have been times when some of the best preachers in Christendom harangued street crowds. But of late years it has come to be suspected that any preacher who prefers to use brick piles or curbstones for his pulpit is a crank.

[New York Sun.

Shall we give up the prayer-meeting? is a question discussed by the Christian Union. It is moved thereto by an article in an English religious journal treating of the decadence of the prayer-meeting in that country. The Christian Union notes the same decay of interest here, and remarks: If one looked only at the condition of the prayer meeting, he would decide that spiritual life was ebbing; if he looked only at the missionary work, home and foreign, of our churches, or only of our Sunday schools and Bible classes, he would conclude that spiritual life is increasing. To read aright the signs of the times he must look at both these tendencies. Meanwhile, pastors should remember that what they are to preserve is not the prayer meeting, but the spiritual life of the church. If the prayer meeting is the best instrument, use it; if providence indicates a better instrument, use that. The church never should degenerate into a social club; it never should become a mere preaching place; it never should content itself with being a mere "society for ethical culture," with a Christian title. It should be a reservoir of spiritual life.

The financial year of the American board closed on Sept. 6, and the following appeared in the Missionary Herald in regard to the finances: "The appropriations for the year were made last fall upon pledges given at the meeting at [illegible], which indicated that contributions [illegible] [illegible] which usually send in their contributions during the month of August will make it sure that these contributions do not fail to reach our treasury before the books close for the present financial year, upon the 8th of September, and if those generous donors, who love to remember this good cause at this season of the year with special gifts in gratitude for special divine favors, will send forward their thank-offerings we sha'l hope to receive at least $70,000, the average of the last two years for the month of August. But we sorely need the extra $100,000."

BRANDETH'S PILLS

They are compounded of Roots, Herbs and Gums of the most healing and beneficial kind.

As a Family Medicine they are unrivalled, curing Head-ache, Constipation, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia—clearing the blood of all impurities—acting on the Liver, Kidneys and other important organs, removing the waste tissue, and adding years to the lives of all who use them.

For fifty years they have been used by the American public, and their constantly increasing sales show how they are appreciated.

A Perfect Remedy in 20 Diseases.

ASHFIELD, MASS.

I am verging on eighty years, and deem it my duty to suffering humanity to say that my long life is due to BRANDRETH'S PILLS which have been my sole medicine for half a century. I know the last forty-three pears of my life is owing solely to their use. Your PILLS saved me many times after the best medical skill in several States had given me up as hopeless. I have had many converts to purgation with BRANDRETH'S PILLS, and have seen them perform almost miracles of cure. For children, a few doses have cured measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough. In all female troubles and weakness I have never known them to fail. In adult males I have known them to cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney diseases, dysentery and diarrhœa; even dropsy, paralysis, and appoplexy have yielded to a persistent course of BRANDRETH'S PILLS. In fact I have found them the true Life Elixir. They act as continual preventives against the effects of time, disease and labor.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the o'her day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. [illegible]. W. BENTLY."

"[illegible], IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Waltham [illegible] Watch * * * By the way this Elgy is a watch I sold in your Patent Dust Case to a farmer last fall. [illegible] he lost the watch in the woods, [illegible] in about one foot of water. It had [illegible] months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only [illegible]. The jobbing department of The Times, as heretofore, is in charge of Mr. J. M. Hewitt, a competent and skillful printer, and all work will be executed with neatness and dispatch and exactly according to agreement.

It is the aim of the present proprietor to publish a first-class local newspaper and in the attainment of this object she will be assisted by able co-workers.

In politics The Fulton Times will be independent, but not neutral. While it will not be the servant or organ of any man, party, faction or clique, it will express its opinion at all times on topics of both local and national interest.

In short The Fulton Times will continue to occupy a position in the front rank of the leading local newspapers of the great Empire State, and hoping that with each issue it will receive renewed approval from the citizens of the enterprising and beautiful village in which it is published it will remain your obedient servant,

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Only nine factories were registered, but the entire offering was sold and at fair prices, 10c and 10⅛c being the price quoted.

AT UTICA.

The market Monday was more active than could have been anticipated, and a strong undercurrent was perceptible, not only sustaining but really advancing the price of cheese slightly. The sales amounted to 10,991 boxes, consignments 990 boxes; total 11,851 boxes. Ruling price 10¼c. About 800 boxes of cheese [illegible] at 10¼c and 175 boxes of that at 10¾c, were small cheese.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The feeling was better upon the market Monday both among buyers and salesmen. The farmers were more ready to operate and the latter to accept the bids which were a little better upon the whole than last week. The following list shows the trade of the day:

THE FIRST DISTRICT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

was held at Oswego last Thursday and the following delegates were elected: [illegible] William M. [illegible] State—Charles N. Bulger, Oswego, Dr. R. H. Boyd, Hannibal, Edward Doyle, Oswego; alternates, W. B. Howard, Volney, Clark Morrison and Thomas Pearson, Oswego.

Judicial—Wm. C. Stephens, Volney, Ward B. Robinson, J. E. O'Gorman, of Oswego.

Senatorial—I B. Poucher, John Murphy, Scriba, D. H. Judson, James Caldwell, Volney, Thomas Murray, Oswego.

The delegates from the Nelson caucus of the town of Volney went to Oswego on the day of the convention, but did not put in an appearance at the convention, being informed beforehand that they would not be given recognition.

THE SECOND DISTRICT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Democratic district convention of the Second Assembly District was held at Central Square last Thursday, and the following delegates were elected:

State delegates—David L Wood, of Hastings; George H Goodwin of Mexico; and John C. Hutchinson of Schrœppel, with the following as alternates: S Remington, of Palermo; H H Potter of Orwell; and James Barnes of Constantia.

THE NELSON CAUCUS.

The Democratic caucuses of the towns of Volney and Granby were held last Wednesday just before The Times went to press. We published the list of delegates of the Granby caucus and of the regular Volney caucus, but the proceedings of the caucus of W. S. Nelson and his followers, who withdrew from the regular caucus on account of alleged unfair treatment, were not concluded when The Times went to press. The delegates elected at the Nelson caucus are as follows:

District—Charles G Bacon, John V Boomer, F M Wilson, Smith Woodruff, Porter Hyde.

County—C G Bacon, I C Curtiss, J Francis, Michael McDonald, Charles Owen, George Johnston.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The County Prohibition Convention is being held in Oswego to-day.

W. H. Steele, candidate for State Senator was in town Monday evening.

The Democrats of the Second district have nominated William H. Cox of Albion, for Member of Assembly.

The Republicans of the First district of Jefferson county have nominated I. L. Hunt for Member of Assembly.

It is said that D. H. Trimble of Palermo will run as an independent for Member of Assembly in the Second district.

Perfect harmony reigns in the Republican camp in this county, so says the Oswego Times. But the Fulton Patriot, the official Republican paper of the county, don't agree with the Times.

[Hannibal News.

Mr. Place on November 9th, 1881, in the Times remarked: "Mr. Cullinan can be the next Republican Assemblyman if he wants to." His predictions for once will within all human probability be verified. [Syracuse Herald.

Hon. George B. Sloan's endorsement of President Arthur's administration and civil service reform in the half-breed convention Saturday was quite touching. It is President Arthur who gave us Mr. John J. Lamoree for collector of the port, and civil service reform in this district, according to President Arthur, is represented by Mr. Lamoree. [illegible] During [illegible] and repairs, at a somewhat expensive [illegible] have been going on among our mills and considerable new machinery has been introduced into several of them.

THE RIVERSIDE MILLS,

W. G. Gage & Co., proprietors, have for some time past been undergoing numerous alteration and improvements. It has been the study of millers for years to invent some means of separating the air from the dust blown out of wheat and thus lessen the risk of conflagration and explosion. This has been a subject which Mr. W. G. Gage has given much attention and he claims that he has secured a piece of machinery that will accomplish the desired result. It is known as the Prinz's Dust Collector and eight of them have been put into the mill. They are handsome pieces of machinery. Four double and one single Milwaukee (Allis) rolls have been put in the mills, besides five new scalpers, two centrifugal reels, four Smith purifiers, a Gray purifier with dust collector attached, a Richmond duster, a bolt chest, four reels, the latter built by W. G. Gage & Co., and said to be the finest in this part of the State. The dust which will now be collected by the dust collectors, was formerly blown into a large room. The mill will be started up in a day or two. Its capabilities will be from 300 to 400 barrels of flour per day.

OSWEGO RIVER MILLS.

About the middle of June work was commenced upon the Oswego River Mills, Gilbert Bros., proprietors. The mill building has been raised twenty feet and a full set of rollers have been put in. It is claimed by Gilbert Bros. that theirs will be the only mill in the country that has ever attempted to grind buckwheat with rollers. The mill will commence to grind buckwheat about October 1.

THE PLASTER MILL.

Gage, Sheridan & Co., proprietors of the plaster mill, have put in new flumes, wheel covers and spouts and commenced running at 1 o'clock Monday morning and will run night and day until orders are caught up with.

THE VICTORIA PAPER MILLS

company have been making general repairs, including the introduction of new machinery. Three new dryers on the paper machine have been added, together with two new engine tubs and one of the finest double turbine water wheels on the river. The water wheel is of Leffles make. A new rotary bleach is yet to be built. The mill will probably start up next week.

OTHER MILLS,

including the St. Louis and Fulton, have also made more or less extensive repairs.

Rev. J. E. C. Barham, Warrenton, N. C., says: "I used Brown Iron Bitters. It is a complete restorative and a thorough tonic and advertiser."

HEALING BY FAITH.

The Efficacy of Prayer—A Correspondent who is convinced of its Remedial Properties.

To the Editor of the FULTON TIMES:

While so much is being said just now on the subject of healing, by the prayer of faith, I will relate an instance of the kind which I had in my own experience.

Some years ago when I was younger than I am now, my little son, five years of age was sick with Bronchitis. He had been afflicted with this disease always since he was a year old, and was growing worse all the time. On this particular day of which I am about to write, he was very bad. The cough that he had was something fearful to listen too, and his breathing also was very bad we thought he would die and the neighbors thought he would die. Medicines he had taken, until they were worn out upon him, and seemed to benefit him no longer. Outside the snow lay upon the ground nearly as high as the fences—the roads had not yet been broken out, nor the walks cleared and it was almost an impossibility for me to get out to go to the doctor. I was filled with distress beyond measure. What I should do I knew not, when suddenly the words were whispered in my soul, "Jesus can heal him," instantly sweet peace and heavenly faith sprang up in my heart, and I replied, yes Jesus can heal him. I went at once to my room and I prayed "O Jesus thou canst heal my little one. I cannot get out to go for medicine and even if I could, it might be of no avail. Remove I beseech thee, if it please thee, this disease from him now and forever." This was at five o'clock in the afternoon, that night he rested well coughing but very little and breathing easy, next day he was healed entirely. From that day he has never had a vestige of that disease about him. He is now twenty-five years of age and is well and strong.

Since that time I have had many special and more immediate answers to prayer. When Christians live near to God these experiences are common to them. In times of immergency and trouble the Lord hears and answers prayer. I know of many Christians in Fulton who could tell of instances similar to the above if they chose.

A. M. SEELEY.

The newly married couple will depart this evening for their new home at St. Thomas, stopping for a few days at Anoka, Minn., where they will visit L. Storms, father of the groom. Mr. Storms is a part owner of a lumber yard and store for the sale of general building materials and is prospering in business.

One of the two omnibuses which have so long traveled between the Lewis House and the D. L. & W. depot has been hidden from public view during the past summer. It will in a few days make its debut upon the streets again in as fine a dress of paint and ornamental decoration as ever beautified the exterior of any omnibus. Its general color is light yellow—almost cream color. On one side is the picture of a mounted plainsman and on the other a horsemen in the act of lassoing a wild horse.

Since Leonard & Wilson have been the proprietors of the omnibus line they have sought by kind and courteous treatment of their customers and by affording first-class accommodations to win public favor and they have succeeded.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said teat 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

Manager Stephens of the Opera House informs us that there has been a sale of tickets sufficient to warrant the inauguration of the proposed lecture course for the coming winter. The first entertainment of the course is a lecture by Mrs. Mary a Livermore, to be delivered Tuesday evening, December 4. Rev. Joseph Cook and Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent have also been engaged to deliver lectures. The remaining two entertainments of the course have not been positively decided upon as yet, but one will be a musical entertainment and the other will probably be an illustrated lecture, for which only first-class talent will be selected.

George Wells, foreman at the Victoria paper mills, will soon sever his connection with that establishment to take charge of the paper mill at Manlius. He has been a favorite among the workmen at the Victoria mills, as is evidenced by the fact that on Saturday evening he was surprised by being called into their presence in the mill where they had assembled in a group and was presented with an elegant golden headed cane. The presentation was appropriately made by F. C. Mosher in behalf of the employees of the mill. The position which Mr. Wells vacates in the Victoria paper mills will be filled by Frederick Gleesettle, formerly connected with George West's celebrated manilla mills at Boston and recently of an Oswego paper mill.

We shall have to-day and to-morrow a nice lot of Crawford Peaches. Parties who want them to Can should buy early.

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE,"

284 ADELPHI ST., BROOKLYN, N. Y.,
March 29, 1881.

No family should be without ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficacy far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and known them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint bronchitis, neuralgia, lumbago, inflammation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weakness, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with BRANDRETH'S universal life-giving and life-healing PILLS, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good sound health.

MRS. E. TOMPKINS.

ONE TRIAL.

If you have been using other Plasters one trial of Allcock's Porous will convince you of their [illegible] superiority. [illegible]

[illegible] The following is a brief synopsis of the discourse.

The Bible is a book. In all of the different [illegible] it is the book. No book which has ever been written can be taught so long and so constantly without wearing out. The attempt has been made in our great metropolis by a Jewish Rabbi and by a cultured orator to leave out the Bible from their Sunday services and substitute for it all that was grand and good in all literature, and in both cases they utterly failed to hold their audiences after a time. These writings have one quality which uplifts them above all literature. They were written by holy men through whose lives and minds the Infinite mind was revealed to the world. These selected writers inspired of God were of different temperament, writing in different ages, from different standpoints, and have given all that need be known of what God purposes to do with man. The unity of the Bible is one of its leading characteristics, and is evidence of its inspiration. It was written by kings, by shepherds, by fishermen, by herdsmen, by learned and by unlearned, by lonely men in the solitude of the deserts, and by men in the busy multitude, by captives, and by men in authority. Who would expect these all to agree? Sixty-six books by thirty or forty different men separated by centuries and yet all agreeing.

Dr. Hastings in his work on "Inspiration" gives the following illustration. If a man in Maine, one in New York, one in Ohio, one in Minnesota, one in California, one in Colorado, one in Florida and so on, were each given a block of marble to prepare to form a statue, and when brought together these blocks fitted into a perfect whole, how would you account for it? You would say at once, there is but one way in which this can be done. One mind planned all and gave directions to each. Law, prophecy, history, poetry and gospel all forming one harmonious whole. One mind, one heart, and one voice speaks through it all. The effects produced by this book on mankind proves it divine. Its influence upon man from the time its first books were written, all down the 1500 years of its building and the 1800 years since its completion prove it divine. Wherever the Bible is read and its precepts are practiced men become better. Why do not these men who go through the country denouncing the Bible for one or two hundred dollars a night, take up their abode in lands where there is no Bible if they are sincere? Simply because life is not worth living there, and they know it. Where else will you get the purifying, elevating influence you get from the Bible? This volume is the word of God, because it does the work of God; it makes man like God, and brings man home to God. It is a light shining in a dark place until the dawning of the day. When Christ shall come the second time and teach us all things we shall not need the written word. Until then let us treasure, teach and practice.

At the close of the sermon Rev. Charles S. Durfee was elected Moderator and G. R. Pike assistant clerk. The Presbytery adjourned until nine o'clock Tuesday morning.

TUESDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Upon assembling Tuesday morning a half hour was spent in devotional exercises, when the Presbytery proceeded to business. J. G. Benedict was chosen commissioner to Auburn Theological Seminary for a term of three years. Most of the business session was spent in listening to reports of the several committees. All were full of interest and urgent in the expression of the needs of the church working through its various boards. The completion of these reports finished the morning session and the Presbytery took a recess until 2 p. m. A sumptuous dinner provided by the ladies in the church parlors was then served and the Presbytery was put in excellent shape for the work of the afternoon.

The afternoon was taken up largely with the discussion of the overture of the general assembly regarding the reduction of representation and the narration of the state of religion in the various churches. The former called forth considerable difference of opinion, though the greater weight was against reduction, and it was voted that no reduction should be made. The Presbytery adjourned at 5 o'clock to meet in the spring at the Fourth Presbyterian church in Syracuse. At 5 supper was served in the chapel and at 5:30 all had taken their departure. The sessions were characterized by promptness, a business spirit and a noteworthy heartiness of tone. From the splendid sermon which introduced it, to the prayer which closed it, the whole meeting was effective.

What will Brown's Iron Bitters cure? It will cure Heart Disease, Paralysis, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Consumption, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and all similar diseases. Its wonderful curative power is simply because it purifies and enriches the blood, thus beginning at the foundation, and by building up the system [illegible]

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty-five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system; giving prompt relief even in cases of chronic pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

[illegible] next year will depend much on the treatment of the bed this year. A good growth late in summer and during the first half of the autumn will give a good crop next year. Scatter manure between the rows or about the stools, and work it into the surface soil with a steel rake or hoe if in the garden, or with horse culture in the field. Keep the runners cut, and a fine growth will be the result.

It is a current assertion that dark colored clover seed are more sure to germinate than light colored ones. Prof. Beal has tried some experiments on this point. In 1877 over ninety-three per cent. of the dark colored seeds grew and about eighty-three per cent. of light colored seeds. In 1821 the experiments resulted in favor of the light colored seeds. The experiments seem to show, that on an average, there is not much difference in the germinating power between the different colored seeds.

When cows gnaw rotten wood, old bones, etc., it is an indication that they are not getting phosphate enough. Milch cows rapidly exhaust land of phosphates, and in time pastures become so exhausted of this material that the grass produced does not satisfy the cows. There are two remedies: First, feed small quantities of bone meal to the cows twice a week; second, spread on the pastures 500 pounds of ground bone to the acre—this is much the best remedy, because it greatly improves the pasture by increasing the quantity as well as the quality of grass, and it is the most natural way to supply the wants of the cow.

Do not neglect the apple orchard because there is not enough fruit to pay for attention. Trees that have any apples on should be looked to and the codling moth worm or grub destroyed. Spraying with Paris green is now out of the season, as the fruit is too far advanced, and there are very few trees this year with fruit enough on to warrant the trouble even in season. Paper bands put around the trees that have fruit on will afford a harbor for the worms or grubs, where they may easily be destroyed. The bands should be examined every week or ten days. It is not much work and there will few worms be found, but every one killed is as much seed destroyed, which if left to multiply perpetuates the pest to the great damage of the apples in the next fruitful season, which we hope will come next year.

Headache and biliousness are promptly cured by the use of Ayer's Cathartic, sugar-coated Pills.

Lack of Courtesy.

"Did the man seem to exhibit a lack of courtesy?" inquired an Austin business man of a book agent who had failed to negotiate with a neighboring tradesman.

"O, I don't know but what he has got courtesy enough, and presume he keeps plenty of it in stock. He threw a chair at me the minute I entered his office; and just as I successfully dodged the chair, he caught me on the nose with a tin cuspidor, and that was followed by a paper weight, two tack-hammers and a loose door knob. He seemed to be shooting all the furniture out of a Gatling gun, though he may have been throwing them, and it is my impression he was loaded for book agents. But he didn't seem to lack anything, and presume if I hadn't withdrawn just as I did, the next thing would have been a shower of canned courtesy."

"Good; give me another."

"A Greenback speaker says that he can feel that the time has come for a change in the nation's financial policy, but the whole country can't see it."

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

A French lion tamer quarroled with his wife, a powerful virago, and was chased by her all around his tent. On being sorely pressed he took refuge in the cage among the lions. "Oh, you contemptible coward!" she shouted, "come you if you dare!"

"I understand you have rented another house," said an Austin gentleman to an acquaintance. "Do you like the location?" "Yes, the location's all right." "Many conveniences?" "Yes, quite a number of conveniences. There's a livery stable on one side, a lager beer saloon next door, and a lard factory right across the street. Everything seems handy enough as far as I can see."

FASHION NOTES.

Plaids and chessboard pattern goods are all the rage.

Dust gray is the fashionable color for traveling wear.

Wings, crests, and breasts of birds trim many seaside hats.

Short pelerines, with long, tab-like ends in front are much worn.

White stockings are worn only by brides, bridesmaids and the poor.

The shell-shaped straw hat is only meeting with moderate patronage.

For the chamber, linen canvas slippers without heels are fashionable.

As many positive colors will be worn in the fall as intermediate or mixed shades.

New market coats and a new ulster cloak, called the "Leno," are worn for wraps.

Anything like regularity in the arrangement of drapery is considered the opposite of good taste.

Large but light parasol handles are made out of cabbage stalks grown in the fields of Britany.

Soft twill plaid silks make elegant skirts worn under crepe de Chine or Indian cashmere polonaises or basques and draperies.

The most fashionable Parisians are wearing the basket drapery on the hips known as the Marie Antoinette paniers, and a close, narrow skirt below.

Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."

CHAPTER III.

AN ENEMY—A NOVEL PROPOSAL.

For some weeks St. Albans met Isabel Carlton at different balls, parties, and dinners nearly every night, and seldom or never missed one of what the general termed his "quiet evenings."

It was getting toward the end of the season, and people were beginning to look forward to recruiting exhausted energies with the aid of sea-breezes or sweet [illegible].

[illegible] the evening of Lady Doubleton's [illegible], and everybody, who was anybody, was present.

The Carltons were there, and Isabel greeted St. Albans with the sweet smile she always seemed to wear for him.

"We leave town this day week," said Isabel. "I am so glad."

"May I ask where you are going?" enquired St. Albans with more interest than he usually exhibited.

"We are going home," answered Isabel. "To Mulberry Hall, near Witherton."

"What's that about Witherton?" exclaimed the general, who was standing near.

"I was telling Captain St. Albans that we were going there next week, papa," replied Miss Carlton.

"Ah, and you must come down and spend a month with us, my boy," said the old gentleman.

"I shall be delighted, I'm sure," answered the guardsman with genuine fervor.

"That's right! When can you come down? When can you get leave?"

"I shall have a chance in about a fortnight," responded St. Albans.

"Then we shall expect you," remarked Carlton. "Drop us a line to say what train you're coming by, and the carriage shall meet you at the station. And now, my dear," he continued, turning to his daughter, "let us get out of this. I've had three heavy people on my gouty toe already, to say nothing of being squeezed nearly to death."

St. Albans saw them off, and after assisting Isabel into their carriage was returning upstairs once more.

He had reached the first landing, when he perceived somebody standing in front of him.

He was deeply immersed in thought and was about to pass by without looking up, but a well-known voice caused him to pause.

"Ah, my friend," exclaimed Barbsly, for it was he, "how are you this evening?"

"I am well, thank you," replied our hero coldly, and was about to move on.

"Wait a minute," cried Barbsly, placing his hand on St. Albans' arm. "I haven't seen you for a long time. May I inquire how you are succeeding?"

There was a cynical grin upon the fellow's face that irritated St. Albans to such an extent that he could scarcely refrain from knocking him down.

Mastering his emotions, however, with an extreme effort, he answered:

"Will you be kind enough to remove your hand from my arm, Mr. Barbsly?"

Barbsly looked at him for a moment in silence, his lip curled with a bitter sneer, then removed his hand, folding his arms [illegible].

"With regard to what you mentioned," [illegible] St. Albans, "I wish you to consider [illegible] have lost the wager, and I [illegible] forward you a check for the amount [illegible]."

"[illegible] I don't choose to believe [illegible] have lost the bet," remarked [illegible] showing his white teeth, "and [illegible] what I have witnessed to-night I [illegible]—what then?"

"[illegible] may please yourself about that," [illegible] our hero haughtily. "But I [illegible], Mr. Barbsly, not to interest [illegible] never interfere in any of [illegible]

[illegible] Barbsly, fixing his [illegible] "And [illegible] St. Albans, [illegible]

[illegible] he had not so much time or opportunity [illegible]

[illegible] a month's leave of absence [illegible] and it was [illegible] under his [illegible] into a first-class [illegible] Paddington station, en route for Witherton.

The fact of the matter was that Harry St. Albans, the notorious lady-killer, was in love at last himself, and began to realize the fact.

It was the first time he had ever suffered from the complaint, which is always the more serious according to the age of the sufferer.

The train arrived at Witherton at length. The dog-cart was waiting for him, and in half an hour he was safely deposited at Mulberry Hall.

The building was an old-fashioned red-brick mansion, of the time of Elizabeth. There was not an inch of stucco about it, and everything was as substantial as it looked.

St. Albans just had time to dress for dinner, and on descending to the drawing-room found the family assembled, together with several visitors.

He was received with great cordiality, and after being introduced to those in the room whom he did not know, he had the pleasure of conducting Isabel down to dinner.

"By-the-bye," exclaimed Isabel, "papa has invited your friend Mr. Austen down."

"I am glad of that," answered St. Albans, "for he has not been well lately, and the fresh air will no doubt renovate him. But how are we going to amuse him?"

"Amuse him!" repeated Isabel; "what do you mean?"

"Why, Horace is such a thorough Londoner that I am afraid he will be quite lost in a country house," replied our hero; "I know he never goes near his own—in fact, he always boasts that he does not even know it by sight."

"But he rides, does he not?"

"I don't think he has ever done more than an amble in the Row."

"Of course he shoots, then?"

"The walking would be too much for him. Fancy Horace trudging over the furrows in patent leather boots!"

"We have the river close by. It runs through the park. Surely he is fond of fishing or boating?"

"His opinion of fishing is synonymous with that of Dr. Johnson—'a fool at one end and a worm at the other,' and his knowledge of boating is confined to the steamer that takes him across the channel on his annual expedition to the continent."

"Then I am afraid we shall have to trust to Lucy's powers of amusement in order to entertain Mr. Austen."

It so happened that Lucy Meredith caught the last sentence during a pause in the conversation, and as Isabel looked across, her cousin's face was "flushed as red as a rose."

The next moment it was as deadly white.

With the usual tact of a woman, Isabel drew her own deducements, and immediately changed the conversation.

After dinner St. Albans challenged the general to a game at billiards, and our hero did not see much more of the ladies that evening.

It was about an hour after daybreak the following morning when St. Albans awoke. The sun was shining brightly into his chamber, and the birds had commenced their matutinal concert.

The captain was not an early riser—very far from it; in fact, when in town he considered noon a very decent hour for breakfast.

But on this occasion, although he turned over and over, he could not manage to get to sleep again.

So, making the most of a bad bargain, he sprang out of bed and dressed himself, determining to have a look round the estate before breakfast.

He soon found himself in the park, and directed his footsteps toward a silver stream he could see in the distance, which he presumed to be the river Miss Carlton had mentioned the previous evening.

When he drew nearer, he perceived a small boathouse standing upon the bank.

It was built after the style of a Swiss chalet, the lower portion being large enough to contain a couple of boats, and the upper story apparently fitted up as a sitting-room.

As he approached, he discovered the door to be open, and was about to enter when Isabel Carlton came out.

"Good-morning, Captain St. Albans," she exclaimed. "I was not aware that you were an early riser."

"I am not one habitually, Miss Carlton," he replied; "but really, after this experience, I think I shall make a rule of taking a walk before breakfast."

"It is the most enjoyable time of the day at this season of the year," observed Isabel, "and I invariably take advantage of it."

"It would be a nice morning for a row, would it not?" remarked St. Albans.

"That's just what I [illegible]

[illegible] his eyes were fixed [illegible]

"Isabel!" he suddenly exclaimed, as they approached the bank. "Isabel, you said just now you would trust implicitly to me. Would you trust to me for ever? Would you trust yourself to me? Would you trust your future happiness to me?"

A moment—an anxious moment—passed and then as St. Albans' feet struck the shore, Isabel, in a low voice, replied:

"Yes, Harry, I will trust you in everything, as I have trusted you this morning."

At first St. Albans could scarcely realize it. It seemed too much.

"Do you really mean it, Isabel?" he cried, trembling with excitement and nervousness, strong man though he was. "Oh, am I dreaming? Will you really be my own dear wife?"

"I will," softly answered the young girl.

In a transport of happiness he seized her in his arms, and raising her from the ground, pressed kiss after kiss upon her soft red lips.

"For shame, Harry," exclaimed Isabel, nearly smothered, as soon as she could speak. "Think of that boy looking on.—Besides, I am wet through."

"Pardon me, darling," cried Harry penitently; "I was so happy, I forgot all about the ducking we have had. Shall I carry you home?"

"No, indeed sir," replied Isabel with a saucy look from her big black eyes; "I have had enough of that for the present—besides, the exercise will prevent my catching cold."

They immediately started off at a sharp walk towards the Hall, though Isabel found her wet things terribly in the way.

They had scarcely reached the lawn in front of the house, when they perceived the front door open, and the general rush frantically out, bareheaded, followed by visitors and servants.

The cowboy had not waited to see the denouement, but had dashed away up to the Hall with the news that Miss Carlton and a gentleman had been upset in the middle of the river and drowned.

Nearly maddened with grief, the old gentleman ran across the lawn to the river, expecting every moment to see his daughter's dead body being carried towards him.

But he had not proceeded many yards when she was in his arms alive and well.

"Oh, my darling child!" he exclaimed; "I feared I had lost you; how were you saved?"

"Ask Captain St. Albans, papa," answered Isabel just a trifle shyly.

"What, another obligation, St. Albans?" cried the general, seizing the captain's hand as his daughter made her escape and ran off to change her things; "not satisfied with saving the father's life, but you must save the daughter's also."

The captain smiled.

"What can I say? I cannot speak. Words will not express my feelings. You have done me the greatest service one man can do another, and I will never forget it."

"Pray do not mention it," said St. Albans.

"I only hope to heaven I shall be able some day to serve you in some way, and show what my gratitude really is."

And as he turned round to re-enter the house the old man dashed the tears away from his eyes.

CHAPTER IV.

LOVE-MAKING.—CROSS-PURPOSES.

It had been arranged that the party should ride to Ravenshill that morning, a distance of about ten miles, and view the old ruined monastry and wander about the grounds.

They started away about eleven, leaving Isabel, who required rest after her excitement, and St. Albans, who was far too happy and exalted to be fit society for anybody but himself, behind to recruit their strength after the morning's performance.

St. Albans wandered aimlessly about for a short time, lighted three cigars one after the other, and allowed them to go out again, tried to amuse himself by knocking the balls about on the billiard-table, and at last threw down his cue, muttering half aloud:

"I wonder if I shall find her in the morning-room."

He speedily found his way thither and knocked at the door.

It is wonderful how timid love makes some men!

Fellows with as much assurance as a London street-boy no sooner become victims to the tender passion than they grow as bashful as a schoolgirl.

"Come in."

He entered the room, and, as he had expected, discovered Isabel reclining upon a couch.

A book was in her hand, but as she was holding it upside down, we may take it for granted that she had not profited much by its contents.

"I thought I should find you here," observed St. Albans as he seated himself by her side. "I have something to say to you."

[illegible]

[illegible] love would vanish like snow in July."

"When did you first [illegible] for me, dearest?" enquired Harry anxiously, and drawing her beautifully moulded form nearer to him as he spoke.

"I hardly know," answered Isabel, "but I think I began to notice how different you were to other men the day that you saved papa's life, and——"

But she was unable to continue, for our hero, raising her head a little, pressed his lips to hers, and indulged in a long and loving kiss.

"Oh, Harry!" cried Isabel reproachfully as soon as she was able to speak.

"I cannot help it, darling," answered Harry. "Remember this is the first time I have ever really loved, and I feel almost beside myself with joy and happiness."

"Am I really your first love?" enquired Isabel, with her large eyes melting with passion looking upward into his own.

"I swear you are," replied Harry; "I have never loved a woman before, and I shall never love another."

For a few moments they gazed at one another in silence, and then once more St. Albans caught the lovely girl up in his arms, and sipped the nectar from her rich, ripe lips.

Harry had not been sitting by her side as he imagined more than a quarter of an hour, when Isabel chanced to catch sight of the ormolu clock on the mantle-piece.

"Oh, Harry!" she exclaimed, "it is lunch-time!"

They had been conversing for two hours.

"Oh, I knew there was something I wanted to ask you, dearest," observed St. Albans as Isabel rose. "May I speak to the general?"

"Certainly," answered the young lady without the slightest hesitation. "I am not ashamed of my choice, and I am certain papa will be proud of his intended son-in-law."

She paused for a moment before opening the door.

Her eyes were filled with love, happiness and elation.

She placed her hands upon his shoulders, and stretching up touched him lightly with her lips, saying:

"God bless you, my own dear love!"

The next moment, before St. Albans had recovered from his emotion, she had vanished. After lunch, St. Albans sought an interview with the general.

The old gentleman was in an apartment dedicated entirely to his own use, and termed "The Den."

Female servants were never allowed to enter it, and any attempt at "tidying," "cleaning up," or "putting things to rights a bit," always resulted in such domestic hurricanes that he was now allowed to enjoy his seclusion undisturbed.

"I have come to ask you a favor, general," observed St. Albans as he entered the room.

"Certainly, my dear boy," answered the general, opening the drawer of a table standing near, and pulling out a cheque-book. "I've been young myself, and I know what it is to outrun the constable. How much do you want? Don't be afraid, speak out!"

"My dear sir, you have mistaken my meaning," answered Harry, deeply affected. "Thank Heaven! I am not in want of money."

"What can I do for you, then?"

"Why, sir, you were kind enough this morning to express a desire that you might have an opportunity of doing me a favor. You have now the opportunity; in fact, the happiness or misery of my future life lies in your hands!"

"What is it, my boy? I'll be hanged if I can understand you."

"To speak plainly, sir, I love your daughter, and she returns my affection. Have I your permission to make her my wife?"

For half a minute the old gentleman sat silent and motionless. Then, speaking slowly, he replied: "That was the very last thing in my thoughts, and the shock upset for a moment. She is the only thing left now that I have to live for; but of course it must come sooner or later." The old general, deeply agitated, bent his head down for a moment; then, as if recovering himself, he said huskily:

"Take her, my boy. I am sorry, more than sorry, to part with her; but I would sooner you had her than anybody else in the world."

The tears stood in the old gentleman's eyes as Harry seized his hand and exclaimed:

"General, I will never be the cause of separating you from your child."

The general shook his head [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] you have done me, I must decline it."

"Don't say that! for Heaven's sake, don't say that!" exclaimed Austen, his eyes growing dim. "Be my wife, Isabel, and I will devote my life to ensure your happiness!"

"It cannot be, Mr. Austen," replied Isabel. "I regret having to cause you pain; but it is no use my allowing you to indulge in false hopes, so it will be kinder of me to tell you at once. I love another."

Austen sank into a chair standing near him, and covered his face with his hands.

There is always something painful in witnessing a man's grief, and especially so for a woman when she knows she is the cause.

Isabel watched him in silence for a few minutes, and then approaching, placed her hand upon his shoulder and observed:

"Do not give way like that, Mr. Austen. Bear up against your grief like a man. I will promise to forget what has passed during the last half hour, so that nobody shall be any the wiser, and in the course of time you will no doubt find somebody who will make you happier than I could possibly have done."

"Never, never!" murmured Austen; "my future life is a blank. I shall never care for another woman."

"Don't say that," exclaimed Isabel soothingly. "Compose yourself, and look at it from a sensible point of view; if you give way in this manner you will only make yourself the cynosure of all eyes, and possibly the laughing-stock of your friends. Be a man, conquer the weakness, and show me that I can still reckon on Horace Austen as a friend."

"You can, you can!" answered Horace, mastering his agitation. "If ever you want a friend, come to me. I will serve you to the death."

"I was sure of it," observed Isabel; "and now I will leave you to recover yourself."

And she quietly left the room.

Some people, when they have a grief, pet it and nourish it, and seem to take a delight in enlarging and increasing it in every possible way.

Horace Austen was one of these, and after Isabel had quitted the apartment, he sat with his head in his hands, as thoroughly wretched as he could possibly make himself.

He was so occupied with his affliction that he did not hear the door open behind him, and his first knowledge of anyone having entered the room was a low sweet voice exclaiming:

"Oh, Mr. Austen, what is the matter?"

And Lucy Meredith, looking charming in her riding-habit, but evidently much discomposed at the sight before her, advanced towards him.

Horace did not reply; in fact, he could not.

"What is the matter? Do tell me," cried Lucy, sitting down by his side, and looking as miserable himself. "You are not ill, Horace, are you?"

"I am not ill," answered Austen with a sigh.

"Then what is it? Do tell me. Confide in me. It will relieve you to speak about your grief, whatever it is."

And Lucy took his hand with a true woman's sympathy.

Unhappy as Horace was, he could not help noticing, in a little sidelong glance that he indulged in, how wonderfully pretty Lucy looked, with her soft eyes full of compassion, as she timidly caressed his hand.

"I cannot speak of it," replied Horace. "It must descend with me to my grave."

"Oh, do not say so!" exclaimed Lucy. "Trust in me. Your trouble may not be so great as you think it."

"Oh, yes, it is—far greater," answered Horace. "In fact, it couldn't be greater."

"But surely something can be done," said Lucy. Then she continued coaxingly: "Come now, tell me all about it."

Horace had another look at her.

She was certainly a charming little girl, and was evidently prepossessed in his favor.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Monday was a dull day upon the Syracuse Dairymen's Board of Trade owing to a rain storm which prevailed all day. Only 709 boxes of cheese were offered for sale. Most of this was sold at good figures.

AT UTICA.

The market at Utica Monday was one of the most buoyant of the season. While the advance was not large, it was enough to create a good feeling among dairymen, and betokens a further improvement in the future.

Sales 10,456; commissions, 875; total, 11,331 boxes. Ruling price, 10⅝c. Sales of correspoding day in 1882, 8,189 boxes; in 1881, 9,265 boxes. About 40 tubs of butter sold at 25½ to 26½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

There was a lively trade in cheese at Little Falls Monday and considerable sparring was indulged in by the buyers. Some appeared disposed to pitch in and secure certain amounts of the finest stock at almost any price necessary to secure it, while others did not believe in paying such figures and bought light. The market showed an advance of nearly a cent over the previous week. Following is the trade of the day:

Lots	Boxes	Price
1	78	9¾
17	1207	10½
51	4078	10¾
1	60	10⅞
85	9685	11
14	1342	Com.
11	1186	p. t.
180	10616
Farm Dairy	840
Total	11456

AT FULTON.

The offerings were light on the Fulton market Monday evening. Owing to the inclement weather the usual number of salesmen did not come to the market, only eleven factories being represented. They made offerings of 1200 boxes of cheese, which sold at 10½c and 10¾c and 11c., the larger proportion going at the latter prices.

A Temperance Movement.

[illegible] good [illegible] is respected. As the result of this [illegible] we see, on every hand, unmistakable evidences of reformatory action. People who a few years ago endured suffering the most intense in the name of duty, now realize the utter foolishness of such a course. Men who were under the bondage of bigoted advisers allowed their health to depart; suffered their constitutions to become undermined and finally died as martyrs to a false system of treatment. There are millions of people filling untimely graves who might have lived to a green old age had their original troubles been taken in time or properly treated. There are thousands of people to-day, thoughtlessly enduring the first symptoms of some serious malady and without the slightest realization of the danger that is before them. They have occasional headaches; a lack of appetite one day and a ravenous one the next, or an unaccountable feeling of weariness, sometimes accompanied by nausea and attribute all these troubles to the old idea of a slight cold or malaria. It is high time the people awoke to knowledge of the seriousness of this matter and emancipated themselves from the professional bigotry which controls them. When this is done and when all classes of physicians become liberal enough to exclude all dogmas, save that it is their duty to cure diseases as quickly as possible, and as safely as possible; to maintain no other position than that of truth honestly ascertained, and to endorse and recommend any remedy that has been found useful, no matter what its origin, there will be no more quarreling among the doctors, while there will be great rejoicing throughout the world."

"I am well aware of the censure that will be meted out to me for writing this letter but I feel that I cannot be true to my honest convictions unless I extend a helping hand and endorse what I know to be good. The extended publications for the past few years and graphic descriptions of different diseases of the kidneys and liver have awakened the medical profession to the fact that these diseases are greatly increasing. The treatment of the doctors has been largely experimental and many of the patients have died while they were casting about for a remedy to cure them."

It is now two years since my attention was first called to the use of a most wonderful preparation in the treatment of Bright's disease of the kidneys. Patients have frequently asked me about the remedy and I had heard of remarkable cures effected by it, but like many others I hesitated to recommend its use. A personal friend of mine had been in poor health for some time and his application for insurance on his life on account of Bright's disease. Chemical and microscopical examinations of his urine revealed the presence of large quantities of albumen and granular tube casts, which confirmed the correctness of the diagnosis. After trying all of the usual remedies, I directed him to use this preparation and was greatly surprised to observe a decided improvement within a month, and within four months no tube casts could be discovered. At that time there was present only a trace of albumen, and he felt, as he expressed it, 'perfectly well,' and all through the influence of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy he used."

After this I prescribed this medicine in full doses in both acute and chronic nephritis, (Bright's disease) and with the most satisfactory results. My observations were neither small in number nor hastily made. They extended over several months and embraced a large number of cases which have proved so satisfactory to my mind, that I would earnestly urge upon my professional brethren the importance of giving a fair and patient trial to Warner's Safe Cure. In a large class of ailments where the blood is obviously in an unhealthy state especially where glandular engorgements and inflammatory eruptions exist, indeed in many of those forms of chronic indisposition in which there is no evidence of organic mischief, but where the general health is depleted, the face sallow, the urine colored, constituting the condition in which the patient is said to be bilious, the advantage gained by the use of this remedy is remarkable. In Brights disease it seems to act as a solvent of albumen; to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes; to wash out the epithelial debris which blocks up the tubuli uriniferi, and to prevent a destructive metamorphosis of tissue."

"Belonging as I do to a branch of the profession that believes that no one school of medicine knows all the truth regarding the treatment of disease, and being independent enough to select any remedy that will relieve my patients without reference to the source from whence it comes, I am glad to acknowledge and commend the merits of this remedy thus frankly.

Friday.

Yesterday was to have been the opening day of the annual fair of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society but a more unfavorable day could not have been selected for such an event.

The managers therefore decided to continue the fair through Friday hoping for pleasant weather the remainder of the week. This morning the prospects of favorable weather are encouraging.

The high wind and mist that prevailed yesterday did not prevent the usual activity of Exhibitors in getting their wares upon the grounds and in arranging them as far as possible in a manner that will make them most attractive to the gaze of the multitude.

The exhibitons are large this year—much larger in fact than usual—and especially is this the case in reference to machinery and farming implements. There is a good display of wagons, R. K. Harris, R. B. McCully and W. W. Hill being represented.

In the main building a large number of Syracuse and Oswego firms are found displaying their wares in the most attractive manner.

Mr. A. Bristol occupies a prominent position in the western end of the main building and his Fu[illegible] musical instruments, sewing machines, etc., is well represented.

Next to Mr. Bristol is M. M. Williams, the druggist, who makes a fine exhibition of druggists fancy goods and toilet articles.

In the exhibition building south of the main hall Geo. Johnston, J. J. Wright, J. H. Woodin and Sheridan & Co., Fulton, hardware men make an elaborate display of stoves.

Fair Notes.

Mr. Gilbert, principal of the Oswego Business College, will write your name beautifully on 25 cards for 25 cents. Give him a call.

Don't fail to see the great collection of birds and animals at T. H. Box's museum opposite floral hall. It is the largest and one of the most attractive shows on the grounds.

Prof. Geo. H. Ball & Bro., veterinary dentists, of Syracuse, are making their headquarters at the Lewis House during the run of the fair and can be seen there by anyone needing their services.

WANTED—10,000 women to call on me during the fair in east side of main building up stairs, and I will give out cards and excursion tickets free to Niagara Falls and return. T. S. LAW.

McCarthy of Oswego has on exhibition in the east end of the main building the largest and finest assortment of lamps, Japanese ware, glassware and crockery ever on exhibition on the the Oswego Falls fair grounds.

The Empire State cider presses manufactured by M. P. Schenck & Co. are now on exhibition on the grounds. Parties desiring to purchase power presses or hand mills will find it to their interest to call and see the machinery in operation.

The "Famous Clothing House" of Syracuse has a fine display of clothing in the west end of the main building which is worth examining. The agents of the house have exhibited a first class line of goods, including every style of overcoat in a very tasteful manner.

Peck & Schilling of Oswego make an excellent display of musical instruments and sewing machines. They represent the Davis sewing machine. Their stand is in the northern wing of the main building, where affable attendants will be found to exhibit their goods and answer every question the public may desire to ask.

Up stairs in the main building at the angle of separation of the south and west wing are exhibited by W. J. Brewster & Co. of Hannibal several models of beauty in the form of sewing machines, denominated the New Home. One of the machines is not only curious but beautiful, being made of birdseye maple. Call and examine the machines and see them work.

The Hartford Sewing Machine, represented by Geo. R. Baldwin of Granby Center, makes a very nice exhibit of their goods. This machine is the one that took diplomas and a bronze medal at the Onondaga Fair of 1882 at Syracuse. The machine is growing in favor with the public, their traveler, R. A. Smith, reporting great increase in sales. Their ladies are very respectfully invited to make them a call at their stand in floral hall.

[illegible] stated that "The Banker's Daughter" would be produced at the Stephen's Opera House, Fulton, some time during the present season. We are happy to be able to announce that the play will be given next Tuesday evening, October 2, by a first-class metropolitan company under the management of James F. Crossen, a veteran in the dramatic art, whose name alone gives assurance of a delightful evening's entertainment. The play has proved to be one of the most popular dramas ever placed before the American public and needs no eulogy. Of its rendering by the Crossen Company that excellent dramatic critic the Brooklyn Eagle says: "The Banker's Daughter," as presented at the Grand Opera House last evening by the Crossen Combination, was an enjoyable performance. The charming play is given with all detail, attractive scenery and exceptionally rich costumes. The company is especially adapted for the various parts."

Last Week's Wedding.

Miss Hattie E. Dada and Mr. Eldon Storms were married last Wednesday by Mr. James S. Riggs. About fifty relatives witnessed the ceremony and the newly married couple were the recipients of a large number of useful and valuable presents. They left Fulton for the West Wednesday evening, stopping a few days at Anoka, Minn., where they will be the guests of L. E. Storms, father of the groom, who will give them a reception. Upon their arrival at their new home at St. Thomas, they will immediately commence housekeeping, Mr. Storms having erected a handsome house purposely for the reception of his young bride before coming East to claim her.

Thus is Fulton losing her fair daughters, four of them having been wedded to gentlemen from abroad within as many weeks.

Crazed by Blood.

Miss Minnie McCarthy, an adopted daughter of John McCarthy of Granby has been engaged in picking hops at Eaton for the past few weeks. Last Friday she was brought to Fulton in the care of Dr. E. L. Miller of Eaton, in an insane condition. It seems she had witnessed a stabbing affray at Eaton, and fainted at the sight of blood. When she awoke from her stupor she was found to be afflicted with hysterical insanity. Drs. Hall and Bacon have examined her and agree that she is insane. She will be placed in an asylum.

Ordination of Mr. Dow.

Preparations are in progress for the ordination of Mr. Dow, pastor of the Baptist church. The ordination will occur next Wednesday. The examination of the pastor beginning at 1:30 p. m. The other services will follow and as far as arranged will consist of an ordination sermon by Rev. W. H. Maynard, D. D., of Hamilton Theological Seminary, the charge to the pastor by Rev. M. A. Wilcox, of the West Baptist church, Oswego, and the charge to the church by Rev. D. D. Owen of Central Square.

A Strike.

The molders and helpers in E. W. Ross's foundry struck yesterday morning. Their complaint is that Mr. Ross will not agree to pay them weekly, but insists upon continuing to pay them monthly, and then hold two weeks' pay back, so that a new man must work six weeks before he receives any money.

Mr. Ross states in regard to the matter that a new man engaged in his employ can get money of the firm at any time to supply the necessities of life. Mr. Ross thinks the grounds upon which the men have struck are Inconsistent.

Mrs. John J. Wolcott and daughter, Miss Helen, who have been visiting friends in Oneida and Herkimer counties for the past few weeks, returned home Saturday.

At a prize shoot in Oswego last Wednesday C. F. Campbell, Eli M. DeRusha and W. P. Hillick of Fulton were winners of some of the best prizes, capturing over $25 out of the $75 offered.

James Parker of Oswego Falls signed a contract Monday with President Marsh of the Oswego Falls Board of Trussees to build a new stone arch bridge across the outlet of Lake Neahtawanta at Hannibal street, the bridge to cost $874.60.

Workmen are engaged in sinking the foot-lights in the Stephens Opera House into the floor of the stage. By this arrangement the lights cannot be seen by any portion of the audience and they will be thrown more advantageously upon the actors. An improvement is also being made in the arrangement of the seats.

Do not buy a surplus of three cent stamps this week, as after next Monday, October 1, they will prove a source of inconvenience. All three cent stamps which have been issued will always be good for postage. No more of them, however will be issued. They can be made available for instance, in prepaying packages on newspapers that go by weight. Or, together with a two cent stamp, the three cent stamp is useful for making up the sum which pays for a single letter—five cents—to foreign countries.

[illegible] Howe and [illegible] pastor [illegible] matters the trustees of the church recommended that an advisory board be selected, one member to be chosen by Mr. Howe, one by Mr. Kinmouth and a third by the gentlemen whom Messrs. Howe and Kinmouth should respectively choose. This was accordingly done and the arbitration committee consisting of Rev. Dr. Taylor of Binghamton, Rev. Mr. Grush of Lockport and Mr. Dixon of Smyrna, met in Oswego Falls last Friday and Saturday, and gave the interested parties a hearing.

In their findings the committee advised that a council of churches be called to dissolve the relations of the society and its pastor, this being the custom in Congregational churches in both the installation and dismissal of pastors. The decisions of these councils, although not obligatory, are usually accepted as final. The council in the present case will meet in Oswego Falls next Tuesday. In view of the decision of the arbitration committee, Rev. Mr. Kinmouth gave in his resignation on Sunday as pastor of the church and will await the action of the council upon his resignation. He has decided to preach his farewell sermon next Sunday morning and in the evening the choir, assisted by a number of cornetists, will give the retiring pastor an ovation in the form of a sacred concert.

Mr. Howe states that the church will probably be dedicated as soon as the carpets are down and the electric lights put in, and these improvements will be completed in a very few weeks. The amount necessary to clear the church of debt Mr. Howe thinks will be raised by subscription at the dedication. A change of pastors may, however, defer the matter for a brief period.

Messrs. Henry and K. F. Salmon are occupying one of the stores of the Opera House block, where they are engaged in the manufacture of sheep skin slippers to be worn in rubber boots.

Thomas P. Haviland was brought before Police Justice Piper last week for being intoxicated. The sentence, which required the prisoner to pay a fine of $10 or go to the penitentiary for six months, was suspended until October 5.

A team belonging to Martin Randell, a Granby farmer, ran away Sunday morning, while Mr. Randall was returning home from Wilcox's cheese factory with his cans filled with whey. Mr. Randall had stopped at Mr. Chubb's and was unloading a can of whey when the team became frightened and bolted, not stopping until they reached Wilcox & Preston's meat market on Broadway, Oswego Falls, where they ran into a post.

Frank McCann, a liveryman of Oswego Falls, left a horse and buggy standing in front of A. E. Nettleton's store Saturday evening and while he was absent in James Elder's saloon, Joseph Newton, a young man living at Stony [illegible] and who was intoxicated, appropriated the rig and started for home. Next day after diligent search, McCann secured his property with the exception of a part of a suit of clothes which was in the wagon. In the bicycle races at the Onondaga county fair at Syracuse last Friday, J. F. Wright and James Elder, jr., won the first and second prize medals valued at $50 and $30 each. The winners are to be congratulated, especially the latter who has had his bicycle but a little more than three months. C. R. Willard of Oswego Falls and H. F. Lyon of Binghamton were the other competitors in the race, the latter winning third place.

There lies on our desk a copy of No. 15 of Volume I of the Dakota Daily Capital, published at Bismarck, Dakota, by E. A. Henderson, son of Orin Henderson of Fulton. The paper is brim full of news, its general make-up indicates superior editorial ability, and its typographical excellence is one of its merits. Of the paper and its editor one of its western contemporaries says:

"The Dakota Daily Capital, published at Bismarck, is a candidate for favors. It promises to become a very popular candidate, too, for E. A. Henderson, whose name is at the masthead, is one of the brightest of Dakota's young journalists, and will make the influence of his pencil felt all over the territory."

Dr. C. G. Bacon claims that THE TIMES misrepresented him last week. It did, but not intentionally. Dr. Bacon heads the list of both delegations made by the Nelson caucus. THE TIMES stated that all the district delegates went to Oswego to attend the convention. We intended to say and should have said that they all went with one exception, which would have meant Dr. C. G. Bacon. THE TIMES will not intentionally misrepresent any man, but sometimes in the hurry of editorial work the most careful writers are liable to omit or insert a sentence or phrase which will give an incorrect interpretation to a paragraph or article.

Dr. Bacon says that he will not attend the county convention, that he took no part in the proceedings of either caucus; that he was put upon the delegations without his knowledge or consent and that he was not present at either caucus save a few minutes at the opening of the regular caucus, where he soon became disgusted and left the hall.

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

Black velvet necklets are worn high about the throat and fastened with diamond studs.

Waistcoats just like a man's are in favor, and over them is worn a cutaway jacket. Next!

Pinked out flounces of silk are used as trimming for mantles, bonnets, gowns and parasols.

Cheese cloth costumes, trimmed with wide torchon lace, make pretty morning dresses in the country.

Narrow ribbons of yellow with six tiny silver bells at each end are tied around the throat.

The new felt hats for fall wear are to be worn over the forehead, and have rolled brims on either side.

The Marie Louise blue will be about the most fashionable color this fall. It is a trifle darker than sapphire blue.

Linen band collars have two button holes near the upper edge, through which narrow ribbon is run and tied in a long looped bow.

"Tel-el-Kebir" is a new cloth for costumes, resembling albatross cloth, only much thicker. It comes in monochrome patterns, and also in brocades, some of which are very gorgeous.

White brocaded satins for wedding dresses show new designs of ... blossoms, pond lillies, and their stems, humming birds and fern frounds, primroses and sheaves in white silk. Some of the most expensive patterns are outlined with cut crystals and fine pearl beads.

Morning gowns for the house are made in Mother Hubbard style of pink, buff or blue percale, with the yoke, round collar and square cuffs of cream white Irish point embroidery. The straight skirt has a deep hem, with a bunch of tucks above, and is buttoned down the front with thread buttons.

Dressy basques are cut open in oval shape below the throat, and finished off with a standing net collar embroidered with gold silver or steel beads, and made to project by fine thread like wires, and fastened by a diamond brooch that represents buttons. The sleeves are of lace to the elbow with beaded ruffles, and there are satin creves for epaulets.

When you suffer from dyspepsia, heartburn, malarial affections, kidney disease, liver complaint and other wasting diseases. When you wish to enrich the blood and purify the system generally. When you wish to remove all feeling of weakness, weariness, lack of energy, try a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters and see how greatly it will benefit you. It surpasses all known remedies as an enricher of the blood and a perfect regulator of the various bodily functions. Ask your druggist.

FARM GOSSIP.

Fall plowing should be done early, and as often as possible.

An excellent way of speedily fertilizing land is by plowing under some heavy green crop.

An experienced dairyman says that a teaspoonful of saltpeter fed a cow daily will prevent the unpleasant flavor imparted to the milk by feeding on turnips or cabbage.

Sorghum makes excellent fodder if cut when the heads begin to shoot. It is the best not to allow it to seed, and if cut when two-thirds grown the fodder is tender and very juicy. It does not dry and crumble as quickly as corn fodder, is sweeter and much preferred by stock.

Mixed husbandry is the only sure way to success in farming. Repeated cropping with a single cereal will bring a waste of the plant-food elements in the soil that will, in the end, so reduce the yield as to entail certain loss upon the land-owner.

A Pennsylvania farmer recommends orchard grass on land infested with daisies; the grass smothers them out by the third year. He would sow two bushels of orchard grass, four quarts of timothy and four pounds of clover.

A New Yorker heats linseed oil, places it in a shallow dish, and turns the wheels of his wagons while the felloe passes slowly through it. ... oil fills the pores of the felloes ...

All of the above preparations displayed in Pond's Extract Company's show case are sold at Watson's Drug Store.

Lathrop's Summer Song

FOR 1883.

Summer's here rather queer,
Weather neither warm nor clear,
But croquet I display,
For the skies will mend some day.

See my fishing tackle case,
Full of flies for killing bass,
Pike or prout or speckled trout
All you can pull out.

Rods and lines, fragrant pines,
Bananas from the tropic climes,
Rockers new, wagons too,
With iron ex. I'll sell to you.

Pipes, tobacco and cigars,
Trumpets, horses, engines, cars,
Doll cabs neat, candies sweet,
Bass drums never beat.

HALL'S
Vegetable Sicilian
HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

A lady in Toronto got to laughing over some amusing incident and could not stop. Finally a doctor was called in, and he couldn't quiet her. But at last a friend thought to remark that the lady's mouth looked large when she laughed, and that put a stop to the mirth in a minute.—[Boston Herald.

"How old would you think my daughter was?" asked a mother of a lady friend at one of our summer resorts; "would you think she was 18?" "Oh, yes," was the candid reply, "I should think she was 18—about ten years ago!" "They never speak as they pass by" now.—[Yonkers Statesman.

"Your friend will find this neighborhood very lively in the evenings, even if it does look a little lonely in the daytime," said the real estate agent. "The people in the block are all very musical; all have pianos and organs, and the family across the street play on five different instruments. "Ah, indeed," was the reply. "That will just suit, for my friend is as deaf as a post."—[Philadelphia News.

By taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla many a poor sufferer who submits to the surgeon's knife because of malignant sores and scrofulous swellings, might be saved, sound and whole. This will purge out the corruptions which pollute the blood, and by which such complaints are originated and fed.

Caught in a Lie.

An unbleached Austin domestic in the employment of the Pettigrew family was caught neatly in a lie not long since. Mrs. Pettigrew sent her with a note to Mrs. Col. Percy Yerger. After having been gone an unreasonable long time, Matilda returned.

"Did you take that note to Mrs. Yerger?"

"Yes, mum, but she was done gone down town to make some calls."

"Then you left the note with the servant."

"Leff de note wid de sarvint?"

"Yes, that's what I said."

"No, mum; de servant was done gone out, too."

"If the servant wasn't there, how did you find out that Mrs. Yerger had gone out calling?"

"How did I—yes, mum—I jess spicioned she had done gone out callin', bekase how thar war nobody at home? De house was done locked up, an' de shutters was turned down, so I brung de note home."

"Well, go right back, now, and see if Mrs. Yerger has not returned."

"Yes, mum, but—"

"But what?"

"I don't know where she libs."—[Siftings.

Dr. Jas. B. Mills, Saltmarsh, Ala., says: "Several of my patients have used Brown's Iron Bitters for chronic indigestion with benefit."

Cometary Phenomena.

On Monday night about midnight, the 10th inst., Prof. Swift, director of the Warner observatory, Rochester, N. Y., discovered another comet in the same constellation with the one recently found by Prof. Brooks. It is moving almost directly toward the earth, and hence shows very little motion, so that Prof. Swift found it difficult to verify and was unable to do so until last Saturday night. The two comets will very likely cross each other's orbits in their progress, and their appearance so nearly together, and within so short a space of time is a most singular, if not a significant fact.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

But croquet I display,
For the skies will mend some day.

See my fishing tackle case,
Full of flies for killing bass,
Pike or prout or speckled trout
All you can pull out.

Rods and lines, fragrant pines,
Bananas from the tropic climes,
Rockers new, wagons too,
With iron ex. I'll sell to you.

Pipes, tobacco and cigars,
Trumpets, horses, engines, cars,
Doll cabs neat, candies sweet,
Bass drums never beat.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic [illegible] remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The Lowell Citizen says that Pennsylvania's Governor wears his hat over his ear. How would he look wearing his hat under his ear.—[Siftings.

It will be hard to convince Conkling that Jim Blaine didn't have a hand in the scalding Roscoe recently received at Hot Springs.—[Siftings.

The editor who kicked a poet down stairs apologized to a friend who had come in to steal exchanges by saying that he couldn't help it; he had a sole for poetry.—[Burlington Free Press.

"Yes," said the druggist, "I'm very sorry I gave Mr. Snaggs the wrong dose by mistake and he died. He's the second good cusomer I've robbed myself of in that way this year."—[Boston Transcript.

A lady in Toronto got to laughing over some amusing incident and could not stop. Finally a doctor was called in, and he couldn't quiet her. But at last a friend thought to remark that the lady's mouth looked large when she laughed, and that put a stop to the mirth in a minute.—[Boston Herald.

"How old would you think my daughter was?" asked a mother of a lady friend at one of our summer resorts; "would you think she was 18?" "Oh, yes," was the candid reply, "I should think she was 18—about ten years ago!" "They never speak as they pass by" now.—[Yonkers Statesman.

"Your friend will find this neighborhood very lively in the evenings, even if it does look a little lonely in the daytime," said the real estate agent. "The people in the block are all very musical; all have pianos and organs, and the family across the street play on five different instruments. "Ah, indeed," was the reply. "That will just suit, for my friend is as deaf as a post."—[Philadelphia News.

By taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla many a poor sufferer who submits to the surgeon's knife because of malignant sores and scrofulous swellings, might be saved, sound and whole. This will purge out the corruptions which pollute the blood, and by which such complaints are originated and fed.

Caught in a Lie.

An unbleached Austin domestic in the employment of the Pettigrew family was caught neatly in a lie not long since. Mrs. Pettigrew sent her with a note to Mrs. Col. Percy Yerger. After having been gone an unreasonable long time, Matilda returned.

"Did you take that note to Mrs. Yerger?"

"Yes, mum, but she was done gone down town to make some calls."

"Then you left the note with the servant."

"Leff de note wid de sarvint?"

"Yes, that's what I said."

"No, mum; de servant was done gone out, too."

"If the servant wasn't there, how did you find out that Mrs. Yerger had gone out calling?"

"How did I—yes, mum—I jess spicioned she had done gone out callin', bekase how thar war nobody at home? De house was done locked up, an' de shutters was turned down, so I brung de note home."

"Well, go right back, now, and see if Mrs. Yerger has not returned."

"Yes, mum, but—"

"But what?"

"I don't know where she libs."—[Siftings.

Dr. Jas. B. Mills, Saltmarsh, Ala., says: "Several of my patients have used Brown's Iron Bitters for chronic indigestion with benefit."

Cometary Phenomena.

On Monday night about midnight, the 10th inst., Prof. Swift, director of the Warner observatory, Rochester, N. Y., discovered another comet in the same constellation with the one recently found by Prof. Brooks. It is moving almost directly toward the earth, and hence shows very little motion, so that Prop. Swift found it difficult to verify and was unable to do so until last Saturday night. The two comets will very likely cross each other's orbits in their progress, and their appearance so nearly together, and within so short a space of time is a most singular, if not a significant fact.

Don't fill the system with quinine, when fever and ague, and malarial fevers, can be much more effectively treated by Ayer's Ague Cure. Warranted to cure.

"Do you wish to know," said a man of science, walking into my kitchen, yesterday, "how to know that your fruit can is certainly air-tight?" I was at that moment contemplating a can which had a little neck on the upper edge and it was hard to judge whether the rubber would effectually keep the air out. The man lighted a bit of paper put it into the can, slipped the rubber ring over, and put the glass cover on. The burning paper exhausted the air, and behold the cover was with difficulty removed.—[Exchange.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

O'er sea-sands bare and brown—
It said: "The whole caboodle has

CHAPTER V.

DISHONORED—A WELL-MERITED CHASTISEMENT.

The next day Harry St. Albans had ridden over to Witherton, ostensibly to look after a favorite horse that he expected down, but in reality to cool his excitement by means of a good gallop.

Harry had not quitted the Hall half an hour, when a footman announced a visitor.

"A gentleman wishes to see you, miss."

"To see me, James?"

"Yes, miss," replied the footman. "On business, I think he said."

"Oh, about some charity, I suppose Show him in."

Five minutes later, and Mr. Marcus Barbsly stood before her.

"What is the meaning of this, Mr. Barbsly?" exclaimed Isabel, drawing herself up as she prepared to leave the room. "The last time I saw you, I desired you never to force your way into my presence again."

"I know you did," answered Barbsly. "But what is the use of speaking like that to a man who loves you as I do? You might as well order a starving wretch not to eat food if it was placed before him. Stay a minute. Do not leave me yet. I have something to tell you that will interest you, something about St. Albans. Ah, I thought that would prove the sesame to your attention."

"If you have anything to say about Captain St. Albans, be quick and say it," exclaimed Isabel, "for I have no time to waste."

"Before I commence," said Barbsly, "let me ask you once more, is there no chance for me?"

"How dare you speak thus?" said Isabel indignantly.

"Can you not return me a little affection for the wealth of passionate love I feel for you?" said Barbsly, unheeding her remark. "I will be satisfied with very little, and——"

"If you have only called this morning to insult me, Mr. Barbsly," cried Isabel, "I will wish you good day."

"Stay a moment," said Barbsly. "By Heaven, if I can't win you, I swear St. Albans shan't. What I have come about this morning is to show you a little memorandum signed a few months ago by Captain St. Albans; for, although you will not hearken to my love, I still love you, and would not have your happiness wrecked by a gambling roue."

"What do you mean, sir?" enquired Isabel indignantly. "If Captain St. Albans were present you would not dare to make use of such language in connection with his name."

"Will you kindly read that?"

And he handed her his little betting-book.

Isabel glanced at the page, caught St. Albans' signature, and read the cruel wager that he had made with Barbsly the previous June.

"Oh, it is impossible!" she cried wildly. "It cannot be true! You have forged this for your own base purposes. I will not believe it, sir! It is simply impossible that Captain St. Albans could have behaved in such a manner."

"If you do not believe me and the evidence of your own eyes, ask Captain St. Albans," answered Barbsly coolly. "Hard-hearted profligate as he is, I don't think he would stoop to a falsehood."

"I will ask him," said Isabel, "and if you have been vilifying him, beware, sir, for his just indignation will be terrible."

"I can stand all that," replied Barbsly with a sneer. "By-the-bye, you had better keep the page the wager is written upon."

And tearing it out he handed it over to her.

"You might have spared yourself all this pain and misery, you know," he remarked, "if you would but have accepted me when——"

"Silence! Do not profane the name of love by using it in connection with your base passion," interrupted Isabel; "and now you have accomplished your object, perhaps you will go; there is the door."

[illegible] the bell as she spoke, and, [illegible] satisfied with his morning's [illegible] Barbsly was shown out.

[illegible] when St. Albans re[illegible] and he was leaving [illegible] his things when [illegible]

[illegible] to see you [illegible] when you are dis[illegible]

[illegible] wanted, Harry [illegible]

"It is not so, Isabel, I swear," cried Harry. "I acknowledge that I was foolish enough to make this bet, but it was before I knew you. Directly I became acquainted with you, I learned to love you for yourself——"

"And what is the amount of the wager—five hundred pounds! Do not forget that, Captain St. Albans," interrupted Isabel, "to say nothing of being able to boast at your club of another conquest. Oh, Heaven! that I can know how I have been treated and yet live! I wish I were dead or mad, I care not which, so that I should not know the shame and disgrace that I am suffering."

"Dearest Isabel, pray be reasonable, and hear my explanation," said St. Albans.

"I do not wish to hear another word from your lips, Captain St. Albans," answered Isabel; "you have done me the greatest wrong it was in your power to do, and I never wish to see you again. Oh, great Heaven, why did you not let me drown? Better be dead a thousand times than live to endure such shame as this."

"But, Isabel, I beseech you to listen to me for one brief minute, while I——"

"I shall do nothing of the kind. For once and for ever understand that it is all over between us. You are my father's guest, consequently I cannot order you out of the house, but if you have the smallest remnant of gentlemanly feeling left, you will remove your obnoxious presence as quickly as you can."

"Is it possible, Isabel," exclaimed St. Albans, "that your affection for me has vanished so quickly? You never could have loved me at all."

"I did love you, St. Albans, and truly, but you have completely altered my nature, and now I hate you. Go! Get out of my sight! Every time I look upon you I think of my dishonored name, and if you remain here much longer, I believe I shall lose my senses."

"Good-bye, Isabel," cried St. Albans, "you are driving from you a man who loves you truly and devotedly. I have been foolish, I acknowledge, but not criminal. Some day you may see your error and be sorry. When you do, I only hope you will not feel half the agony and anguish that I am suffering now. Good-bye, and may God bless you."

In half an hour St. Albans was once more riding towards Witherton.

He started away from the Hall at a wild gallop, but as he neared the town his pace gradually decreased.

It happened to be market-day and the High-street was crowded with farmers and their wives.

A crowd of about a dozen gentlemen had collected about "The Swan," the hotel par excellence, and as St. Albans pulled up, he caught the sound of a sneering laugh.

For a moment all the blood in his body seemed to rush to his head.

With an immense exertion of self-control he calmed himself and looked quietly round. As he had expected, the centre of the group was Marcus Barbsly.

He was standing with his hands in his pockets, and a malignant cynical smile upon his evil face.

Very calmly St. Albans threw his bridle to the ostler, who had come out to assist him, and dismounted.

Without the slightest change of countenance the guardsman walked straight up to the man who had wrecked his earthly happiness. Barbsly turned very pale, and seemed for a moment to cower, but before he could move, St. Albans seized him by the collar of his coat.

"Cowardly, treacherous scoundrel!" he exclaimed. "I warned you how I should treat you. You have had your innings, now I shall have mine."

Then turning him round as though he had been a child, he commenced to flog him.

His horsewhip was a stout one, made of hide, and the arm that wielded it knew how to use it to advantage.

Barbsly's coat was soon cut to ribbons, and the lashes commenced to mark his back. He howled, shrieked and prayed for mercy, but St. Albans was adamant.

"You shall receive the mercy you have shown me," he answered between his teeth.

At length, when the wretch's back was striped with long red cuts, and his own arm began to ache, he desisted.

"Now, if you have the spirit of a man in you, and require satisfaction," he exclaimed, "you will find me at my club, and I shall not refuse you. In the meantime, go and rest in your proper sphere—the gutter!"

And lifting him up with one hand, he flung him heavily into the filth and debris that had accumulated by the side of the pathway.

CHAPTER VI.

RETRIBUTION.

And in death they were not divided.

About a couple of months after the events related in the last chapter, a number of gentlemen were seated in the smoking-room of the principal hotel in a small garrison town.

"By-the-bye, Jones," exclaimed one, "who is your new major?"

"A fellow named St. Albans," was the reply. "He was in the Guards, but he exchanged into ours, because we are ordered out to the Cape."

"By Jove! that's queer taste."

"They say that he's tired of his life," remarked another; "and, by Jingo, it looks like it! I never saw a man ride 'cross country as he does, in my life. I believe if there was a house in the way he would go for it."

"That reminds there's a meet to-morrow, isn't there?"

"Yes, at the Red Gate."

A stranger who had been seated near the door now rose and left the room. Making his way down to the stables, he accosted the ostler.

"I want a hunter for to-morrow; can you let me have one?"

[illegible]

[illegible] Barbsly, for [illegible]

thought St. Albans. "Perhaps he is going to try the horsewhip on me. It will be worse for him if he does. Anyhow I shan't get out of his way."

In fact, it would have been rather difficult to have done so.

The major was riding close to an immense bullfinch, and unless he had pulled in it would have been impossible to have avoided him.

Nearer and nearer approached the two horses, and St. Albans called out:

"Where are you riding? Look where you are coming!"

"I am riding at you, Henry St. Albans," replied Barbsly; "and now I am going to have my revenge, curse you!"

Now St. Albans saw his danger.

He was mounted on a delicate, highly-bred animal, in comparison to which the other was a dray-horse.

If they met he was bound to be overthrown, and at the pace they were going the consequences would most likely be fatal.

The major did not fear death—on the contrary, he had courted it several times in the last few months; but he did not want Marcus Barbsly to have the satisfaction of being the cause of it.

The only chance he had now was to get ahead by means of increased speed, and he encouraged his horse by whip and spur. But Barbsly had well calculated his angle, and in another half minute the collision must occur.

Suddenly Barbsly's animal caught his foot in a rabbit burrow, stumbled, and fell heavily, throwing his rider over his head against the trunk of a tree close to the hedge.

St. Albans immediately pulled up, and one or two others rode over and dismounted. They raised him and felt his pulse, but his heart had ceased to beat.

His neck was broken.

* * * * * * *

Our concluding scene is in the Transvaal. For hours our gallant men had been fighting against a better-armed and more numerous body of the enemy.

Their ammunition was expended, but still they were not conquered.

The casualties during the engagement were enormous, and the Boers, with their usual good-feeling, not satisfied with the execution they had committed, were amusing themselves by firing at the hospital tent in spite of the red cross banner that waved above it.

The surgeons were almost worn out, and had it not been for the assistance of some noble-minded women, who, following Miss Nightingale's glorious example, had left country and comfort to attend to the poor wounded soldiers, heaven only knows what they would have done.

"Sister Hyacinth," exclaimed one of the medical men, "assist me for a moment here; see if you can get a little brandy down his throat."

Sister Hyacinth approached, and, raising the pallid face, upon which the dew of death had already commenced to gather, placed the canteen to his lips.

As her gaze fell upon the well-remembered features, a spasmodic cry burst forth:

"Harry!"

The sound of that sweet and well-loved voice recalled the fleeting spirit, and St. Albans opened his eyes.

"Isabel," he murmured, "is it really you? Now I can die happy."

"Do not talk of dying, my darling," cried Isabel. "Live for my love! I was wrong, Harry, to send you away; I know all now, but it was my wicked pride Will you forgive me, Harry?"

"Yes; a thousand times yes," replied Harry. "This is happiness—to know that you still love me. Now I shall go hence content."

"No, no, Harry," wailed Isabel; "you must live for me. You must not—shall not die!"

"One kiss, darling!" murmured the dying man, opening his arms.

She threw herself upon his breast with bitter sobs, and their lips were pressed together.

Suddenly a well-known whistling sound was audible, and a rifle-bullet, fired from the hill above, entered the tent.

It struck Isabel behind the shoulder, and penetrated transversely through her lover's left breast.

They were killed by the same ball, locked in each other's arms, and they lie in the same grave, in a far-off land.

Mrs. Austen's eldest daughter is christened Isabel, and when Lucy and Horace are engaged in the delightful occupation of "baby worship," they frequently speak of her unfortunate namesake, and how she was "WON FOR A WAGER."

THE END.

If disease has entered the system the only way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood. To this end, as is acknowledged by all medical men, nothing is better adapted than iron. The fault hitherto has been that iron could not be so prepared as to be absolutely harmless to the teeth. This difficulty has been overcome by the Brown Chemical Company or Baltimore, Md., who offer their Brown's Iron Bitters as a faultless iron preparation a positive cure for dyspepsia, indigestion, kidney troubles, etc.

An Austin parent was very anxious that his son should become a distinguished physician, but the boy kicked.

"If you insist on it, pa, I am willing to become a distinguished veterinary surgeon, but I'll never undertake to cure people."

"Why do you prefer to doctor animals?"

"Because after they die under my treatment the relatives will never come around and reproach me for having destroyed those nearest and dearest to them.—Siftings.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

Ex-President Hayes gives $5,000 toward paying for the new Methodist Episcopal church at Fremont, Ohio.

The Society of Friends in England has just repealed the prohibition of the marriage of first cousins, which has been in force in that body for nearly 200 years.

Since the close of the civil war the Southern Methodist church has expended about $5,000,000 for educational purposes, mostly among the colored population. Twenty-five colleges which now have an aggregate of 8,500 pupils have been established, and over 2,000 churches erected.

That method is best for him which he can most effectually use to lodge Bible truth in the understanding and at the same time most persuasively impress that truth upon the heart of the greatest number of hearers, as the means of leading them to appropriate and corresponding action. The understanding and conscience of the audience are the faculties to be addressed, and through these and the truth apprehended, the heart is to be moved; and all this in order to lead to the proper action on the part of the hearer.—[New York Independent.

There is a somewhat undignified contest between Methodists and Presbyterians in Pleasantville, Westchester county. There is an old village and a new village, which is the railroad center and the thriftier place. There the Presbyterians lately established a church and many Methodists joined. Each side is charged with proselyting. "Why," said an excited Methodist lately, "those Presbyterians even offer inducements in the shape of chromos for the children to attend their Sunday school. The other day the Presbyterians got up a picnic to go to Lake Mahopac, and they tried their policy of bribing children with promises. Our side then got up a picnic for the same day and broke theirs up. So you can see which church the people go with."

The board of aid for colleges and academies of the Presbyterian general assembly of the United States held its second biannual meeting in Chicago lately and remained in session all day. The afternoon was spent in adopting by-laws for the government of the board. A comunication was read from Dr Arthur Mitchell, of Cleveland, Ohio, declining the office of secretary, at a salary of $4,000 a year, which had been tendered him. Early in the afternoon the board went into secret session to consider applications for aid from the colleges of Salt Lake City, Utah, Pierre, D. T. Hastings, Neb., and other places in the west. The board held another long session in the evening and spent the time in a desultory discussion of the application of several institutions for help. The result was that a resolution was passed pledging whatever aid the board might be able to give to college at Emporia, Kansas, the college at Pierre, D. T., the college at Waitsburg, W. T., and the academy at Fergus Falls, Minn. A secretary will be elected October 5.

At a camp meeting in a western state where permits were issued by the managers for the sale of articles of food, the question arose whether a person not having such a permit could be prevented from engaging in trade within the limits of the camp grounds. The matter was taken into court, and it was claimed that the rule of the association interfered with the freedom of trade enjoyed by the citizens of the State. The law on the subject was stated to be as follows: "If a camp meeting is located in a field or woodland, and entirely without the limits of a city or village, any person selling articles of food or drink at any other place than his residence or place of business, must have a written permit from the trustees or managers of such camp meeting to sell said articles, otherwise they will be liable under the act. The object of the statute is not to grant a monopoly of the business of selling food and drink, but to prevent disturbance of the meeting. If the meeting is within the limits of a village it will be subject to the ordinances of such village, and the permits of the managers of the meeting will be effective only when they are not in conflict with such ordinances."

THE FULTON TIMES

Wednesday, October 3, 1883.

F. G. BULLOCK - - EDITOR.

LOOK out for a political revolution in Oswego county this fall. The signs of the (Oswego) Times indicate such a result.

JAY-EYE-SEE beat St. Julien in three straight heats at the Gentlemen's Driving Park in New York Saturday. The purse was $5,000 and the time 2:20½, 2:18½, 2:19. The track was slow. St. Julien was the favorite at 100 to 80.

THE Democratic State convention held at Buffalo last week nominated the following ticket: For Secretary of State—Isaac H. Maynard, of Delaware; for Comptroller—Alfred C. Chapin of Kings; for Treasurer—Robert A. Maxwell of Genesee; for Attorney-General—Denis O'Brien of Jefferson; for State Engineer and Surveyor—Elnathan Sweet of Albany.

THE Republican county convention was held in Oswego last Saturday. Strange to say but one convention was held and but one set of candidates was put into the field. After a close contest continuing through three informal and three formal ballots, M. L. Wright of Mexico was nominated for County Judge by 90 votes against 84 for H. C. Howe of Fulton. Frank David of Phœnix was then nominated for Surrogate by acclamation. The remainder of the ticket nominated is as follows: For Coroner, E. F. Marsh of Oswego Falls and W. H. Caldwell of Pulaski.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Fourteen factories sold 2,460 boxes of cheese, the highest quoted price being 11¼c.

AT UTICA.

There was a booming market on Monday, every one being anxious to secure a portion of the early September make. The special impetus came from buyers who wanted cheese for the home trade, and who, in order to get the choicest brands, kept bidding against each other, until even the factorymen themselves were surprised. Sales 11,821 boxes; commission [illegible]18; total 12,0[illegible] boxes. Ruling price 11⅜c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The market was very active and prices showed a gain of nearly one cent per pound above last week's figures. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price
14	918	11¼
54	6,016	11⅜
2	100	12
8	208	p. t.
11	1,111	Com.
114	10,434
Farm Dairy	886
Total	11,320

AT FULTON.

Twenty-two factories registered with 2,017 boxes of cheese. The buyer offering 11¼ to 11⅜c., four factories selling at these prices.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION.

Teachers' examination will be held at the following times and places: Mexico, (school building No. 8,) Oct. 12, 1883. Oswego, (normal,) Oct. 13, 1883. Examination to begin at 9 a. m.

Trustees are hereby notified not to employ teachers who do not possess a certificate or other evidence that they are duly licensed.

Mr. Ryder's Successful Exhibition.

The exhibit of Mr. P. S. Ryder, the photographer and crayon artist of No. 72 South Salina street, at the fair, amply deserved the high official and private encomiums it received, and accordingly it is not a matter of surprise that the judges viewed his charming little studio, filled with the rarest treasures of the potographic art, with hearty approval. After the sharp competition that was had in photography, it must be extremely gratifying to Mr. Ryder that the judges did not have to hesitate an instant before affixing the seal of merit upon his exhibit.—[Syracuse Herald.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 80,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ, [illegible]

AN OLD MAN LOSES HIS LIFE.

Run Down by a Race Horse—Other Accidents.

LARGE CROWDS IN ATTENDANCE.

The Baby Show—Excellent Horse and Bicycle Racing—The Premium List.

The sixteenth annual fair of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society was held upon Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week and was a decided success in every respect, with the possible exception of the financial footings. It is probable, however, that the receipts will cover the expenses, and the association is to be congratulated upon being able to run a successful fair without making their grounds a public beer garden. They were in earnest in their endeavors to suppress the traffic as was evidenced by the fact that the only place on the grounds where liquor was found was pulled, although no arrests were made.

The attendance was large on each day of the fair with the exception of Tuesday, when the weather was raw and bleak and rainy. Thursday, the third day of the fair there were probably fully 12,000 people on the grounds.

The exhibitions in nearly every department were large, although there was a notable absence of Fulton firms from the main building, which was largely taken up by Syracuse and Oswego firms. A portion of Fulton's business interests, however, were well represented, for A. Bristol might be seen with a large and fine display of pianos, organs and sewing machines by all who took the trouble to walk to the western end of the first floor of the main building. Miss Gertie Ottman presided at Mr. Bristol's instruments. But Mr. Bristol was not the only representative of this interest in the building. Around the corner in the north wing of the hall was the display of Peck & Schilling of Oswego, whose Fulton agent is Mr. Fred Kenyon Jones. The fine playing of this gentleman showed off the instruments to the best advantage.

Again, M. M. Williams came to the front and in person exhibited a beautiful display of druggists' toilet articles and Mr. Williams pleasing presence was not the least of the display.

Giving a passing glance at the many booths when mingling with the crowd it was almost impossible to make special notes of each and every one, but we could not help noting the grand display made by the "Famous Opera Clothing House," 2 and 3 Weiting Block, Syracuse. This house though young in years is old in experience and knows how to attract the attention of the public, not by any flimsy means, but by showing them a class of goods that are in keeping with the times. The general comments made by the throngs of interested spectators, regarding the fine clothing displayed by the "Famous" were of the most complimentary kind and doubtless many will remember the place when purchasing this season. The "Famous Opera Clothing House" is one of the largest clothing Houses in Central New York.

There were other displays of almost equal note in other lines of goods. C. M. Barnes of Oswego had a large and tastefully arranged display of hats, caps, furs, robes, trunks, traveling bags, &c., while opposite Mr. Barnes was the extensive exhibit of Kingsford, the Oswego dry goods man.

Next to Kingsford was a fine representation of the wares to be obtained at China and glassware emporium of Jas. McCarthy of Oswego.

In the exhibition building south of the main hall the first floor was entirely taken up with Fulton's wide awake hardware men, and George Johnson, Jay J. Wright, Sheridan & Co., and John H. Woodin each made a display of stoves which were well worth a more detailed description than limited space admits.

R. K. Harris McCully, Bristol and W. W. Hill exhibited wagons of one kind or another and M. P. Schenck was on the grounds with one of his patent cider mills.

There were other exhibitions, big and little, whose displays we dislike to pass over, but the complete premium list which we publish must tell the rest of the story in this connection.

THE RACES.

FRANK WILLARD WINS TWO BICYCLE [illegible]

[illegible] dragging along until late in the afternoon, taking five heats to decide the contest, which resulted in a victory for A. Cooper's Sunset. The race was as follows:

A. Cooper's Sunset	1	3	1	2	1
T. G. Thompson's Daniel	3	2	3	1	3
A. B. [illegible]	4	dr.
G. S. [illegible]	2	1	2	3	3

Judges—W. B. Turner, John Gardinier, D. Suttin.

C. G. Whipple's bl. g. Dick Jones, T. S. Burden's b. m. Eullela and D. H. Trimble's b. c. Fan were entered for the colt race. After the first heat the judges declared the race off, giving Dick Jones first money and declaring the other horses distanced.

During the afternoon George S. Hosmer of Syracuse gave an interesting exhibition of tandem team driving, sending his team around the track in a mile heat in 2.52.

Friday's races opened with the bicycle events, the first being a race of mile heats open to all amateurs. The first prize in this race was a gold watch and chain valued at $80, the second a silver watch valued at $25 and the third a cyclometer. Frank Willard won this race, with Jay J. Wright second and James Elder third. The time in this race was excellent and is given at the half mile and mile:

	First heat. half mile	First heat. mile	Second heat. half mile	Second heat. mile
Willard	1.33	3.39	1.45	3.41
Wright	1.34	3.45	1.49	3.55
Elder	1.42	3.51	1.53	3.57

Judges—J. H. Case, O. J. Jennings.

A half mile bicycle race between Bert Hoff and Ed. Marvin was won by the former, his best time being 1.59. S. B. Mead was entered in this race, but drew in the second heat.

The best horse race of the fair was then called. There were four horses entered and the first heat was close, especially on the home stretch, which the horses came down in a bunch. The purse amounted to $200—$100 to the winner, $50 to the second, $30 to the third and $20 to the fourth. Following is the summary:

G. C. Potter's Lola P.	1	1	1
C. G. Whipples Jim Sargent	4	2	2
A. Cooper's Sunset	2	3	4
T. G. Thompson's Daniel	3	4	3

Time—2.33¼—2.39—2.36¾.

Judges—John Gardinier, D. Suttin, J. H. Case. Timer—O. J. Jennings.

Between the heats there was an exhibition of driving by ladies and a mustang running race, Mrs. Eugene Bracey, Mrs. James Martin, Mrs. Earl Robinson, Mrs. Andrus Morse and Mrs. John Vedder competed in the ladies' driving exhibition and the first three drew prizes in the order named. The mustangs whirled around the track in a half mile heat in 1.06½.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

AN OLD MAN INSTANTLY KILLED—OTHER ACCIDENTS.

On Wednesday afternoon George Sickler, aged about 75 years, was instantly killed on the race track opposite the entrance gates. Sickler was attempting to leave the grounds just as the first heat of the horse race had started. He had partly crossed the track when warned of the near approach of the racing horses and rushing back escaped injury. Again he attempted to leave the grounds, but had barely stepped upon the track, when T. S. Burden's Eullela, who was behind the other horses, ran upon him, the "off" thill piercing his neck, which was broken. The ill-fated man was thrown to the ground and the horse and sulky both passed over him. He never moved after falling. His remains were moved to the freight house of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western depot, where Coroner Gilbert held an inquest.

On Friday as Miss Ann Brown of Oswego Falls was crossing Broadway at Third street she was run down by a team which with the wagon passed over her, dislocating her shoulder and causing other injuries. She is under the care of Dr. Marsh and is recovering.

The same day two vehicles collided near Stoddard's Hotel and one of them was badly damaged. No one was hurt.

THE BABY SHOW.

AN EXHIBITION WITNESSED BY 4,000 PEOPLE.

Probably the most interesting and amusing exhibition on the grounds during the fair was the baby show which attracted 4,000 or more people to the grand stand at 12 o'clock Friday. The mothers with their dimpled darlings were seated in the top of the grand stand where they were exhibited to the gaze of the judges and the admiring multitude. The names of the babies exhibited are Homer Parkinson, Ward Eastman, Maud Eastman, Maud Locke, Matie Miller, Willie Rumsey, Cassie Marsh, Maud Smith, Burnie Ellis, Grace Summerville, Mabel Marsh, Judson Marsh, Mabel Guile, Edith and Ethel Wachtershausen, Belle Keblin, Grace Martin, Robbie Wright, Ruth Dines, Maude Searle, Stella Greene, Eva Vinton, Glenn Trimble and Eddie Danahan, making a total of twenty-three. The judges were J. S. Poucher, Mrs. James Morrow and Mrs. Joel Baker. Prof. T. T. Hart acted as their secretary. After considerable hesitation they awarded the prize—$5, offered by A. Gregg, of Pennelville—to Grace Martin, making honorable mention of Edith and Ethel Watchtershausen, twins, Mabel Guile, Robbie Wright, Mabel Marsh and Judson Marsh, in the order named.

A Good Little Boy.

M. C. COOKE.

I love to go to Sunday school
And put my pennies in the plate;
I love to learn the Golden Rule and save the heathen from their fate; I wouldn't break the Sabbath
No! For that is awful wicked, Oh!
I wouldn't swear. To steal a pin would be a very dreadful sin. I give my playmates tracts and tell them all about the burning hell where bad boys go who like to play upon the blessed Sabbath day I pull off legs and wings from flies; and I put out our kitt'n' eyes; Such fun! It made me laugh to see it, blinded,
BIBLE: crawl away from me. I TRACT:
find bird's nests and smash the eggs. I break the little chickens' legs and once I put some Paris Green in mama's tea. You should have seen her fight; It was so jol- ly that I gave a lit- tle to the cat. It died. Some time
I mean to try to stick a pin in ba- by's eye. The dear bells ring. Now I must go for I'm a little lamb you know, and if you're not a Christian, too
dear sinner let me pray for you.

[illegible] Horace McCausey, aged 60 years of age, was found Monday morning between 9 and 10 o'clock dead, in David Wall's woods, in the town of [illegible], near the steam mill. He left his home about a half mile distant from where he was found dead, Sunday afternoon and was last seen alive at about four o'clock. He was subject to apoplectic fits and it is supposed that he fell upon his face in one of these fits and was suffocated.

The family became alarmed at his prolonged absence, and at six o'clock Sunday evening a search was commenced by six men, sons and neighbors of the deceased, which resulted in their finding him at the hour stated above, upon his face. His remains were taken home and Coroner Gilbert summoned. An inquest was held and the jury gave a verdict in accordance with the above facts.

McCausey was a well known farmer. He leaves a wife and quite a number of children, mostly grown.

AFTER MR. RIGGS AGAIN.

The Presbyterian Church at Ithaca Send Two Committees to Hear Him.

It was not long ago that a vigorous efforts was made by the Presbyterian church at South Orange, N. J., to induce the Rev. J. S. Riggs to become its pastor, but although a larger salary was offered than the Fulton church could pay, Mr. Riggs decided that it was his duty to remainnFu lton and therefore declined the offer. Lately overtures have been made to Mr. Riggs from the Presbyterian church in Ithaca. A committee of gentlemen came from the Ithaca church to hear him preach. Subsequently the gentlemen called upon Mr Riggs to see if he would consider any action toward change of field. Rev. Riggs informed them that he had decided to remain in Fulton for the present. Nevertheless a second committee came on and the unanimous judgment of the whole committee led to a request in the form of a letter to Mr. Riggs that he would appoint a Sunday to preach for them with a view to settlement. Mr. Riggs has put a stop to all further action by a positive refusal.

The Presbyterian Society of Fulton feel much annoyed at these continued proselyting attempts of outside churces to get their pastor away from them.

Won by Crack Shots from Fulton.

At the Baldwinsville fair last Friday C. F. Campbell and W. P. Hillick won the first and second prizes in the rifle shoot at 200 yards. There were fourteen competitors. Messrs. Campbell and Hillick each secured 32 out of a possible 35. Mr. Campbell's being the best increased score.

Two of a Kind.

On Saturday Ellen McCaffery, the alleged wife of Barney McCaffery made a complaint before Police Justice Piper to the effect that she had been assaulted by Barney McCaffery, who she avows grabbed her by the hair and threw her down. When the case came to trial both parties claimed that the other was intoxicated and the woman admitted that she had served a number of terms in the penitentiary. The case was adjourned until next Saturday.

A Cat's Queer Family.

One day last week Orville Johnson, who lives about five miles east of Fulton, found a nest of gray squirrels in a hollow tree. Taking them home, Mr. Johnson presented them to a cat who was already the mother of four kittens. Pussy adopted the young family, providing them with nourishment, to the detriment of her kittens, who at once seemed to take the second place in her affections. In fact the young squirrels became masters of the situation, cuffing the "Toms" and "Tabithas" around at will.

Centennial Reception.

All friends of the Episcopal church in this place are cordially invited to be present at a reception to be held at the residence of Mr. W. S. Nelson, First street, on Saturday evening next, from 7.30 to 9 o'clock.

This reception is given in honor of Rev. J. B. Beaubien the new rector of Zion church and also as commemorating the Centennial of the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States.

The Thespian Society.

It has been decided by the Thespian Society to give another entertainment for the benefit of the Zion church organ fund, on or about Thanksgiving time. And in response to the many solicitations to repeat the "Trial by Jury" at the time of their entertainment last winter, they will give the same with enlarged chorus and several new features which will make it a very charming operetta. They will also add an amusing farce or comedy and no effort will be spared to furnish a very pleasureable entertainment for all who may be present.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

I should have written you before in regard to the Rheumatic Syrup which you sent me, but have been waiting to see if the result was permanent. I can confidently say that it has had a very gratifying effect on my wife, relieving her of all pain within three days after she commenced taking it. I also gave away one bottle of the Syrup to a friend, which had the same effect as on my wife. My wife has suffered great pain from rheumatism and kidney difficulty for years, and at times could hardly move. She has tried a great many medicines recommended to no purpose. It is the only remedy that gave her permanent relief. Yours

A PULPIT VACATED.

FINALLY BRETHREN FAREWELL.

The Text from which Rev. A. E. Kinmouth Drew His Inspiration Sunday.

According to announcement Rev. A. E. Kinmouth preached his farewell sermon Sunday morning as pastor of the Congregational Society of Oswego Falls. He was greeted by a large audience who listened attentively to his utterances from first to last. He spoke of the fifteen months in which he had labored among them, of the many pleasures and sorrows he had experienced in their midst, of the happy hours he had passed in the homes of some of his parishioners, and alluded feelingly to the times when he had had occasions to officiate in the laying away of loved ones, and of the comfort he had endeavored to administer to the mourners. These allusions drew tears to many eyes. He said he had proclaimed the Gospel boldly at all times and had always stood as he stood now, in fear of no man. He used an illustration to show that the relation between church and pastor was like the marriage relation and that though harsh words might be sometimes spoken the differences should be adjusted and there should be no divorce in either instance.

By vote the church decided not accept Mr. Kinmouth's resignation. The council of churches was not held yesterday, but will be called for a future date. Further action by the church is expected. In the meantime its pulpit is vacant. It is expected that a clergyman from abroad will preach next Sunday.

A Sad Bereavement.

Syracuse Sunday Herald.

Died at Marysville, Mo., September 25th, 1883, Mrs. Bayard Monk, formerly Miss Carrie VanValkenburg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick VanValkenburg of this village. She was married in August, 1881. Soon after her husband returned to his place of business in Marysville, where she joined him one year later. This young lady's death is one of great sadness when we think of her young and cheerful life and hopeful future, going out far from her childhood's home, with no friend but her loving husband to comfort her in her hour of great trial. It seems but yesterday that we met her smiling face, and heard her gleeful voice with kind words for all; for her life was but the manifestation of the exuberance of youthful joy. She was an only and idolized child, and was ever solicitous of the welfare and happiness of her parents. She was passionately fond of music, and her sweet songs come to us now with sad remembrance. She was a member of the Universalist choir and Sunday school.

We will cherish her memory and tender to him who has been smitten with this, his greatest sorrow, our warmest sympathy.

FULTON, Sept. 29, 1883.

The remains of the deceased arrived in Fulton Saturday morning, accompanied by the bereaved husband. The funeral occurred Sunday afternoon at the Universalist church in this village, which was crowded. Rev. J. S. Riggs delivered a touching and appropriate address. A beautiful floral emblem, the offering of a number of the deceased lady's intimate friends, surmounted the coffin. N. H. Gilbert, basso; F. A. F. A. Gage, tenor; Miss Gertie Stephens, soprano; Mrs. J. T. Pratt, alto, and Mrs. Fred Emerick organist, furnished the music, while S. E. Lincoln, Will Farrell, J. T. Pratt, E. V. Lathrop, W. J. Boomer and E. F. Blanchard were the pall bearers. The remains were deposited in Mt. Adnah.

THE FATHER OF FISH-CULTURE.

Seth Green's Ideas About the Finny Tribe and Some of His Varied Experiences.

(Turf, Field and Farm.)

"How did you ever come to devise this scheme?"

"I have been working at it ever since I was large enough to bend a pin."

The above remark was addressed to Mr. Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist, who is known to the entire world, and his reply indicates the extent of his labors.

"When I was quite young," he continued I would lie on the limbs of trees that reached out over the water entire afternoons watching the movements of the fish and studying their habits. In this way I discovered many characteristics which were before unknown. I saw, as every observer must see, the destructive elements that are warring against fish, and I realized that unless something were done, the life in the streams in this country would become extinct. To counteract this disastrous end became my life work, and I am happy to say I have seen its accomplishment."

"Were you successful on the start?

"No, indeed. Up to that time all artificial attempts to hatch and raise fish from spawn had failed, and I was compelled to experiment in an entirely new manner. The work was a careful and tedious one, but I finally succeeded, and to-day I am able to hatch and raise fully seventy-five per cent of all spawn."

"Enormous! Why, that is a larger percentage than either the vegetable or animal kingdoms produce in their natural condition."

"I know it, but we exercise the greatest care in the start, and guard the little fellows until they become able to care for themselves."

The foregoing conversation occurred at Caledona where the representatives of this paper were paying a visit to the state fish hatcheries. It has been his privilege to report very many interesting sights during the past twenty-five years, but the view presented here exceeds in interest anything ever before attempted.

"How many fish are there in those ponds, Mr. Green?"

"As we have never attempted to count them it will be impossible to say. They extend way up into the millions though. We shipped over three millions out of the pond this year and there seemed to be as many after wards as before. We have nearly every variety of the trout family and many hybrids."

"You speak of hybrids, Mr. Green. What do you mean by that?"

"I have experimented for years in crossing the breed of the various fish and am still working upon it. We cross the female salmon trout with the male brook trout, and thus produce a hybrid. Then we cross the hybrid with the brook trout, which gives us three-quarter brook trout and one-quarter salmon trout. This makes one of the finest fish in the world. He has all the habits of the brook trout, lives in both streams and lakes, develops vermillion spots on his sides, rises readily to a fly, is far more vigorous and fully one-third larger than ordinary brook trout of the same age. The possibilities of development in the fish world are great and we are rapidly ascertaining what they are."

As the man of news watched the countenance of Mr. Green while he was giving the above account, he could not but feel that he was in the presence of one of the few investigators who, from a rich and life-long experience, bring great benefit to the world. Let the reader imagine a strong and stalwart frame, surmounted by a head strongly resembling that of Socrates, and covered with a white silky beard and luxuriant gray hair. Seth Green, the father of fish culture, is a picture of health, and the reporter could not help remarking so.

"If you had seen me the last winter and spring, young man, you might have thought differently, said the veteran.

"How is that? One would think, to look at you, that sickness was something of which you knew nothing."

"And so it was until last winter. I went down into Florida in the fall to see what kind of fish they had in that state and study their habits and was attacked with malaria in its severest form, and when I came home I realized for the first time in my life that I was sick. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of malaria can appreciate my condition. I went to bed and remained there all the spring, and if there ever was a sick man I was the one."

"It seems hardly possible. How did you come to recover so completely?"

"My brother, who had been afflicted by a severe kidney trouble and threatened with Bright's disease was completely cured by a remedy in which I had great confidence. I therefore tried the same remedy for my malaria and am happy to say I am a well man to-day and through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, which I believe to be one of the most valuable of medicines. Indeed, I see it is endorsed by the United States medical college of New York, and that Dr. Gunn, dean of that institution, has written a long article concerning its value."

"And are you now as well as formerly?"

"Apparently so. I keep the remedy on hand all the while though and do not hesitate to recommend it to others."

"One question more. How many ponds of fish have you here and how are they divided?"

"Well, we have 43 ponds which are divided up as follows: 23 ponds of brook trout, 2 ponds of salmon trout, 4 of McCloud river or rainbow trout, 3 of California mountain trout, 2 ponds of hybrids, 4 of one-quarter salmon and three-quarters brook trout, 2 ponds of gold fish and 1 pond of Carp. Then we have what we call the centennial pond or 'happy family,' consisting of crosses of different fish, including Kennebec salmon, Land Locked salmon, California salmon brook trout, salmon trout and hybrids. These fish range in size from minnows to 15 pounds, and in age from one and one-half months to eleven years. I forgot to say also, that we have a [illegible]

[illegible] certainly cause of congratulation to every American that this country produces so many men whose genius brings value to the world, and it is proof positive of the greatest merit that a remedy even with such high standing as Warner's Safe Cure is known to have should be so strongly endorsed and recommended by one so reputable and reliable as Seth Green.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

FASHION NOTES.

Wide velvet ribbon is fashionable for bonnet strings in lieu of the two or three narrow pairs worn during the summer.

Demi-saison capes called epaulet pelelines are made or cloth cut high on the shoulders with dolman wings and covered with embroidery or braid.

The newest habit bodices are pointed in front and have coat-tails behind finished with buttons. These are made of cashmere and are worn with a gathered waistcoat of checked silk.

Watteau drapery is no longer confined to the back of the garment, as French contourieres speak of watteau vests that hang from the throat and are tied across the bust with velvet ribbons.

English traveling cloaks are furnished with straps and buttons by which they can be converted into a pretty dolman or a polonaise with paniers when the wearer quits the train and stops at hotels for dinner.

Dresses that imitate princesse designs are among the new importations with the Bretonne vest front and skirt in one piece, and the drapery fastened on the basque back so that the back seems all in one piece.

The newest ulsters are of rough but light cloth in the newmarket shapes with perpendicular folds spreading down from the waist, and a collar and waistbands of velvet. Ulsters of cheviot are made with a "colleen" cape scollopped at the edge over a frilling of cloth.

English women provide themselves with several waistcoats for a single dress of cheviot or amazon, and thus vary their toilets. A cream white cloth waistcoat. one of bright scarlet, or a striped vest of blue, red and white will go well with either a blue or red serge dress.

The first round hats for cool days have square equestrienne crowns with stiff, straight, narrow brims. The trimming is ten pleats or milliners' folds of velvet strait around the crown nearly reaching to the top, and a bunch of ostrich tips in front. English walking hats have the velvet that drapes the crown carried over the brim smoothly in a way that makes a new effect.

Fine cloth shot with colored threads is the newest material for ladies autumn suits. The bodice and tunic are of dark green or brown dashed with red or with blue, and the Scotch pleated skirt is of stripes of the colors in the upper parts. A crimson or blue waistcoat inside this cloth bodice adds to its style and may be made of cloth or of moire fastened by small, flat gold buttons like sequins.

Small bonnets for autumn are called princess bonnets, because they are in favor with the Princess of Wales, who was brought up to make her own bonnets, and therefore likes simple shapes. For this reason milliners object to them, as ladies can make them without assistance, and have merely to cover them with the folds on the crowns and put a pair of gentle gray doves on the left side, pierced by a silver dagger, which apparently holds them in place.

Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair fresh and bright. It not only restores the color, but imparts gloss and luxuriance to faded and gray hair.

"Here, my good man, is half a dollar for you," said one of the wealthiest and, at the same time, one of the most respectable citizens of Austin, as he handed over the cash to a dilapidated looking tramp.

"Heaven's blessing be upon you," was the grateful reply. "You know how to appreciate the feelings of a man who has dogs set on him, and has had to work out his fine on the streets. You know what a man goes through who has a drunken wife and six worthless children, and whose brother is making wagons in the penitentiary," and once more calling down the blessings of Heaven on his benefactor, the unfortunate man steered for the nearest saloon. —[Siftings.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very [illegible]

This being composed of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving immediate relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a Liniment is demanded. The Oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with that terrible Headache! Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism! Use Sulphur Bitters, it will cure you. What makes you trouble so? Your nerves are all unstrung and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap rum, whiskey or poor beer drink to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only to destroy. It is composed of the choicest Roots, Barks and Herbs, combined with the EX-TRACT OF SULPHUR in such proportions as to make it NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To change my lot with yonder boy? Not if I know myself.

Over the grass that's full of ants and chill with dew to go,

With a stone-bruise upon either heel and a splinter in my toe!

Or, I'd rather sail my yacht a year across the Ocean's foam

Than be one day the Barefoot Boy that drives the cattle home."

FARM GOSSIP.

L. H. Bailey picks off the wormy apples in his orchard by means of a curved knife or hook fastened to a long pole. Wormy apples, he says seldom drop until the worms have left them, and the popular notion that animals, in devouring the fallen apples are also exterminating the worms, is a mistake.

Fruit evaporating companies are being organized in different parts of the west. There is no doubt that these institutions will afford favorable opportunities for the investment of capital, and fruit growers in the vicinity of them will be benefitted by the increased demand that is sure to follow for their products.

The agricultural editor of the New York Times reminds farmers that the ragweed is an annual and if cut down before it seeds, there is an end of it for that season. It is a dangerous inhabitant of the pasture lands, for when eaten largely it has the effect of packing the stomach with dry indigestible matter, and of poisoning the blood. The disease thus produced is what is commonly called dry murrain and is a fatal disorder.

Lightning rods are not always a protection; sometimes the best cannot carry off the whole current of electricity when the tension is very great, and the rod itself may be melted into parts. At this season barns are filled with hay or grain that is in process of fermentation or sweating. That produces warm vapor, which ascends in steam from the cupola or eaves of the roof. If this is higher than the lightning rod it will attract the lightning first and carry it right into the barn. The safest lightning rod is of 1-inch round iron, painted, with a five parted point, spreading like prongs of a fork, and covered with copper or gilded. This should be fixed to a pole 20 feet higher still. The rod should go down to permanent water in the ground.—[N. Y. Times.

Pigs will make better pork for a run in clover stubble or pasture. We undoubtedly suffer from insects as much as we do, and so much more than our fathers did because we do not allow the freedom of our pastures, orchards and stubbles. A pig is a natural and accomplished scavenger and never shirks his duty. Fill him with corn and he will all the more eagerly search for insects. In the pasture he will turn over the droppings, break them up and scatter them, and take every wire worm that may harbor under. In the corn stubble he will search out every cut worm and white grub, and in the orchard every apple worm. He may not be a neat plowman, but wherever he may plow he will leave thorough good work behind him. It would pay every farmer to keep a dozen pigs in his fields in the fall and early spring for this use alone. And the pork will be better and more wholesome.—[N. Y. Times.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough of cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

A great many people's religion is almost the real thing, but not quite. It reminds us of the artist who claimed he could paint a piece of cork so like a stone that if thrown into the water it would at once sink to the bottom. When he tried the experiment, however, the people who were looking on were surprised, not that the cork did not sink, but that what seemed to be a stone floated. The difficulty is that so many people keep their religion to talk about, just as they keep a pug dog for a pet. When they make their religion a team horse they will find out how much of a load it will draw.

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."

148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

[illegible] New Yorker— [illegible] the [illegible]— The Dude.

New York, Sept. 25, 1883.

"[illegible]" This was the sign that greeted the [illegible] clerks and shop people [illegible] evening, as they plodded through the rain past the bridge entrance. Every one is ready to try a novelty even if he loses his head, and a ride over the bridge on the cars was too great a novelty to resist; so I climbed stone steps, passed the money changer seated in his wooden temple, and went with the crowd up another flight of stairs onto the platform of the spacious terminus of the bridge. Electric lights illuminated the station and everything is neat but not gaudy. The decorations are done in subdued greens reds. The cars were gliding in and out without apparent motion and without much noise. As soon as a car came in from Brooklyn it was switched onto the opposite track and was soon filled with people. Only one car is sent over at a time and as soon as it comes up to the platform, the wonderfully intricate grip, (which is entirely beyond my power to describe) takes up the cable and at a given signal, the brakes are released and away goes the car at a rapid rate. No jar is experienced in starting and the whole trip is made in six minutes without stops, noise or vibration. As soon as everything is systematized there is no doubt that the road will be well patronized. People already begin to grumble at the five cent fare, and it does seem too much to pay, when you can cross on the ferry almost under the bridge, for one cent. Of course the bridge is most convenient and its road will attract some travel. Descriptions of this endless cable road have been published in almost every paper in the land, so further comment here is useless. As I stood back from the crowd on the platform I saw everyone pushing and crowding for a place on the cars. I could not help but think of the over pushing, rushing, crowding New Yorker. Nowhere in this world can you find his counter-part. He lives in some small town near New York and of course comes down on the train. He rises at five a. m., bolts down what he can find to eat, runs for the train, grabs a paper and in the dim morning light pokes his eyes out trying to read the news, rushes for the ferry boat, drops into a seat and continues reading. In his office he is quick and hasty and will go through more work in a forenoon than ordinary mortals will in two days until some day he drops dead in the harness, a premature old man. He has suddenly left the commercial world but his place is soon taken by some of the still more active busy people that are constantly coming up to get the vacant places. "Thus runs the world away." The hasty New Yorker is one type and below is a description of another familiar one. I had always heard of the "New York bruiser" and this summer it was my luck to see him, pure and unadulterated. He is analogous to the Bowery Boy of old time. I witnessed the departure of a picnic of a social club which we shall call the O'Reily Solidity. Bruiser was solid with the solidity. Half an hour before the boat started, Bruiser swaggered up and down the dock. His dress was loud in the extreme and so was his manner. A large white tile hung on one side of his head, a very short black coat, fitting very close, a pair light skin tight pants, patent leather shoes and a bright flashing tie, a conspicuous bulge just over one hip spoke of his shooter, and a still larger one on the opposite side spoke of a well filled flask, a stubby growth of whiskers covered his face and the cigar he smoked smelled strong and pointed heavenward. A dainty little female approached the dock, and Bruiser gaily tripping up to her, raised his tile and then the following dialogue was rehearsed. "Hey Kittie will yer go to der picnic wid me?" "Oh I'm already spoken for, so I can't." "Wat's dat?" "If I see yer goin wid any other galoot, I'll tump him on the neck and pitch yer off the dock; Der yer hear?" and away he went, with a far away look in his eyes and suggestively patting his hip pocket.

Broadway is again ripped up. This time by the Western Union Company. They are putting all their down town wires underground and the unsightly poles are to be removed. This will surely be an improvement but the laying of the conducts has sadly spoiled the looks of the street and the tempers of the people. There is not much room for many more pipes under Broadway now, for Edison, two steam heating companies, the Western Union, two telephone [illegible] numberless gas companies [illegible] laid a regular net work of pipes. [illegible] there are the Croton [illegible] sewers. Now [illegible] Broadway [illegible] to Central Park.

The policemen and firemen have put on their heavier suits and the dudes have changed the light canes for more ones substantial. But they still persist in chewing the heads of the canes just the same. A kind hearted man has opened a dudes' retreat up town and soon the dear creatures will all be anchored there and then there will be no danger of their getting blown away, and the cold chilly winds of December won't trouble their delicate frames. Poor martyrs, how they must suffer. I always thought that a dude was bad enough but now the dudes have been evolved. She is indeed beyond the descriptive powers of the WANDERING JEW.

FASHION NOTES.

Sleeves are longer than those made for spring dresses.

Combinations of wool, velvet, and satin will be much worn.

The new Louise velveteens simulate and are invoiced velvets.

Bourettes are again in vogue but they are not like the old bourettes.

For the short coats, the Melton and West of England cloths are very popular.

Waistcoats or plastrons, plain or pleated, appear in almost all new corsages.

Embroidery cut out and applied on woolen and silken stuffs will be much used.

Cheviots come in stripes, checks, and large blocks, in all the combinations of color.

Pointed velvet yokes are used on silk dresses which have Vandyke pointed trimmings.

All the new gathered flounces have the edges cut in leaf, dog tooth, or Vandyke points or blocks.

Gilt lace and white crepe lisse, crinkled crepe and silver braid are combined in the new neck wear.

Crape finished wools, wool and velvet combinations, and cloaks of all sizes will be worn next winter.

Skirts cut in Vandykes or blocks at the bottom, falling over a pleated flounce, are a feature in fall costumes.

One of the handsomest silk fabrics of this season is black satin de Lyon brocaded with fine cut jet beads, woven into the fabric.

A brilliant shade of plum color, and another of rich dark blue, have quite taken the place of strawberry and terra-cotta in popularity.

Jackets, mantles, dolmans, visites and circles, small capes and scarfs, make up the varied importations of fall and winter outer garments.

Coffee colored lace, brought into favor by the Princess of Wales, who wore it recently upon a dress of ivory white satin, is seen upon the latest imported evening dresses of cream white satin, and pearl white brocade.

Sets of embroideries on gold and silver gauzes and net, or black, white or tinted nets, are sold at prices varying from $150 to $250, such embroideries forming all of the trimmings and the greater part of the dress.

For dressy winter evening toilets, transparent stuffs of all colors will be worn, such as silk, gold and silver gauze and nets, with satin velvets, chenille, and feather embroideries, the figures very solid, while the grounds are very open.

Very long gauntletted gloves of Suede and wash leather will be worn this autumn for driving, shopping, and with walking costumes. The handsomest are not of the lately fashionable pale yellow or tan shades, but come in dark green, bronze, brown, olive, and other quiet colors, slightly stitched with pale gold silk, and having the gauntlets lined with the same delicate tint.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

Since the organization of the Patent Office, 7,290 patents covering electrical appliances have been issued. Nearly 2,500 have been granted within the past two years.

Be not too ready to condemn
The wrong thy brothers may have done;
Ere ye too harshly censure them
For human faults, say, "Have I none?"

"My dear Oliver, have you seen my trunk key?" Mr. Oliver Westley's brow contracted slightly at the words and he drew away the hand which had been caressing his wife's pretty golden hair.

"Is that trunk key lost again?"

"Now, Ollie," said the little lady with a world of pretty penitence in the lengthened monosyllable. "Don't scold. Upon my word, it's the first time I've mislaid it the whole morning."

"It's too provoking, Pearl," said the husband, pushing back the books on the table before him with a movement denoting intense irritation. "Will you never break yourself of this careless habit, my love?"

Pearl was silent, looking down like a naughty child who had been chidden.

"You don't know what an annoyance these heedless habits are to a methodical man like myself, dear," he added in a gentler tone, as the red lip began to tremble and the eyes to diffuse. "Do try to be more thoughtful, for my sake. Here is your lost treasure," he added, quietly taking a tiny steel key from his vest pocket. "I found it on the stairs, and thought it an excellent opportunity for giving my careless little wife a lesson."

Pearl clapped her hands at sight of the restored treasure and danced out of the room in girlish glee.

"A perfect child," murmured the husband, looking after her, with a smile and sigh blending unconsciously."

"Well, if I don't make haste, I shall be too late for that engagement with Eberly. Let me see—the notes are in my iron safe I believe. Nothing like locking up things and keeping the keys yourself. If Pearl only followed my example—"

Mr. Westley paused seeking in his various pockets with nervous haste for something which seemed not to be forthcoming.

"Very strange," he muttered, biting his lips. "I always put it in that coat pocket, "Possibly I may have laid it on the table among those papers."

The aforesaid papers rustled hither and thither like animated snowflakes, as Mr. Westlake hurriedly sought among their confused masses, but it was all in vain.

"I can't have lost it," he exclaimed, in dire perplexity. "And every one of those notes are locked up in the safe, with no earthly chance of getting at it. But I am certain the key can't be lost. I never lose anything. It won't do to wait many more minutes. I'll just put on a clean shirt and run down town. Hang that key!"

Mr. Westley hastened up to his room to complete the details of his toilet ere he left the house; but his trials were not yet destined to terminate.

He was a methodical man, therefore his wardrobe was carefully locked; he always kept things in one place, therefore the keys were snugly reposing in one corner of the inaccessible iron safe.

He rushed frantically back to the library, hoping faintly that the key might be on the mantlepiece where he had not yet searched.

"No, it was not there; but a treacherous inkstank was, the contents whereof, by one unlucky sweep of the elbow descended in an ebon cataract over his shirt front, the shirt bosom upon which alone he had depended.

"Well, here is a catastrophe!" he murmured, gloomily stanching the ink flow with his pocket handkerchief. "Let me see—there is that money I promised to pay Eberly to-day, and now—"

He stopped short: a cold dew of dismay breaking out on his forehead—the money drawer was a fixture of the wretched iron safe!

Penniless ann shirtless, what more desperate state of affairs could his worst enemy desire for him?

There was a lower depth yet, however; would he not be characterless, likewise, if his wife should, by any inopportune chance, discover that he, the model of rule and order, had lost his key?

So thought Mr. Westly as he went off to a day of perplexities and mortifications in the city.

"If ever I tease Pearl again about losing things," he muttered inwardly, as he entered the room on returning home, I hope I'll be drowned with a hundred weight of keys about my neck! It's certainly a judgment upon me."

He unbuttoned his coat as he spoke, forgetful of the ink stains of the morning.

Pearl uttered a faint scream, and shrank back exclaiming:

"My dear Oliver, what is the matter with your shirt?"

"The matter! Oh!" he said coloring and laughing. "I remember now—I spilt a little ink over it this morning. It dont signify much."

"Do let me get another for you dear."

"No, no," said he, eagerly detaining her, "it isn't at all worth while. Do sit down and be happy, my love."

But Pearl [illegible]

[illegible] of Pearl's merry laughter [illegible] his ear like a chime of silver bells.

He laughed, too; he couldn't help it.

Mrs. Pearl Westly was a discreet little female. She never alluded to the subject of keys again, and her husband was never known after to reproach her with carelessness.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough of cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf [illegible] Succesful Undertaking and Escape from an Impending Fate.

(Buffalo, N. Y., News.)

One morning several years ago, just as the dull gray light was beginning to show itself in the east, a small band of men might have been seen deployed about a house on Ferry street, in Buffalo. There was nothing special in the appearance of the men to indicate their intention, but it was plain they had business of importance on hand. Suddenly a man appeared at one of the windows, took in the situation at a glance, and, swinging himself outward with wonderful quickness, scaled the roof of the house. This man was Tom Ballard, the notorious counterfeiter; and armed to the teeth and fully realizing the situation, he defied justice and the officials below him. Some of the officers, knowing the desperate character of the man, proposed to shoot him until he was killed, but one of the number promptly protested, and declared that if his brother officers would assist him to ascend he would capture the man alive. Accordingly he began the difficult and dangerous task, and succeeded in bringing the prisoner to the ground in safety.

The man who accomplished this task was Mr. Thomas Curtin, the present superintendent of the city police of Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Curtin is a man who is known by every prominent detective and policeman in America, and he stands pre-eminently in the front of the profession. Quiet and gentlemanly in appearance and manners, he possesses a courage, combined with marked physical powers, that make him the terror of evil doers and the pride of law abiding citizens. Few people can realize, however, the trials, exposures, and even privations, to which members of the municipal police and fire department are exposed. Compelled to be on duty at uncertain hours, subjected to the most inclement weather, and often necessitated by the nature of their duties to protracted undertakings, they endure a nervous and physical strain that is terrible. Such was the experience of Mr. Curtin in former days; and it is not surprising that he found himself suffering from a mysterious physical trouble. In relating his experience to a representative of this paper he said:

At times when I was on duty I would feel an unaccountable weariness and lack of energy. My appetite was also uncertain and my head seemed dull and heavy. I did not fully understand these troubles, but supposed, as most people suppose, that I was suffering from malaria. I tried to throw off the feeling but it would not go. I thought I might overcome it, but found I was mistaken and I finally became so badly off that it was almost impossible to attend to my duties. I have known any number of men in the police and fire departments of this country who have been afflicted as I was, and I doubt not to-day there are hundreds similarly troubled who, like myself, did not know the cause, or really what ailed them."

"Your present appearance does not indicate much physical debility," said the interviewer as he looked at the 220 pounds of bone and muscle standing nearly five feet eleven inches in height before him.

"Oh, no; that is altogether a thing of the past, and I am happy to say that for more than a year have I enjoyed almost perfect health, although I now realize that I was on the road to certain death by Bright's disease of the kidneys and travelling at a rapid pace."

"How did you come to recover so completely?"

"That is just what I want to tell you, for I believe it may be of great service to many others in my profession, who may possibly hear of it. I began the use of a popular remedy at the earnest solicitation of a number of friends in this city, and found to my great gratification that I was feeling better. This feeling continued and I gained in strength and vigor until now I am perfectly well—and wholly through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure which I believe to be the best remedy for policemen, firemen, railroad men or any other class of people exposed to the danger or a change of weather, ever discovered. Since my recovery I have recommended it everywhere, and never knew a case where it failed either to cure or benefit. I would not be without it under any consideration, and I am positive it is a wonderfully valuable and at the same time entirely harmless remedy. Indeed I see that Dr. Gunn, dean of the United States Medical College of New York, indorses it in the highest terms."

"So you experience little difficuly in the execution of your duties now, Mr. Curtin, do you?"

"None whatever. Our department was never in better condition than at present."

"And do you never have any fear of some of the desperadoes whom you have been the means of bringing to justice?"

"Not in the least. Such men do not try to retaliate, partially because they have not the courage, but oftener because they respect an officer who does his duty."

The policemen, firemen, letter carriers and other public employees in this country have a particularly trying life. When, therefore, a simple and pure remedy that can restore and sustain the health of all such men is found, it should be cause for great congratulation, especially when recommended by such a man as Superintendent Thomas Curtin of Buffalo.

JAY GOULD is said to be contemplating the creation of a new summer seaside resort to rival Newport at Burn's Point in Connecticut on Long Island Sound—the site of Fort Trumbull of the revolution. It is said that his action in the matter is due to his having been snubbed by aristocratic Newport because of the vigorous language which he is accustomed to use, even before ears polite.

"ALTHOUGH Mr. Blaine prefers to rereceive a rental of $12,000 for his Washington house to expending $20,000 in sustaining it, there is no doubt that his family will spend not only this winter in Washington, but as many winters as he lives. He simply will not entertain largely while engaged in literary work. He has sent his best furniture to Maine," says the New York Herald "P. I." man.

GEORGE GEDDES, one of the most widely known agriculturalists of Central New York, died at his home at Fairmount, near Syracuse, Sunday evening at the age of 74. Mr. Geddes has been a State Senator, Salt Superintendent, and president of the State Agricultural society. He was greatly devoted to farming matters and has contributed many papers to the public prints. He was a member of the Farmers' club of Syracuse, where his pithy and humorous talk was always enjoyed. The deceased's father, James Geddes, was prominently connected with the building of the Erie canal.

A NEWSPAPER war has been in progress in New York for the past two weeks. It was opened by a reduction in price from four cents to two on the part of the Times. The next day the Tribune reduced from four cents to three cents. Finally the Herald came down from three cents to two, its antebellum price. Then the news dealers took a hand in the fight and refused to sell the Herald or Times for less than three cents per copy, claiming that the margin of profit allowed them by the publishers was so small that they could not afford to sell them at a less figure. The Herald has retaliated by establishing news depots and news routes in different parts of the city, where all papers are sold at publishers' prices. Just how the matter will terminate remains to be seen, but it is certain that the news dealers will find James Gordon Bennett a hard man to defeat in any enterprise he takes in hand, as he is immensely wealthy and would doubtless rather spend a million dollars than fail to carry his point.

IT will be remembered that Ex-Senator George H. Forster, of Westchester county, resigned from the Republican State committee last year, and announced his intention of voting for Cleveland. [illegible] [illegible] of the most important county offices.

And if each and every candidate of whatever party, hailing from Mexico is not elected, it will not be the fault of Mexicans.

Republican and Democrat alike will vote for M. L. Wright for County Judge.

Republicans and Democrats alike will vote for George H. Goodwin for Surrogate.

And they will do this simply because these men hail from Mexico. If both Wright and Goodwin should be elected Mexico would then be the abiding place of four of the most important county officials, and this is precisely the result that Mexico most desires.

THE TIMES would like to throw out a suggestion in this connection. Why would it not be in keeping with the noble example set by our sister town for Republican and Democrat alike of southern Oswego county to vote solidly ly for southern Oswego county men—for Charles W. Avery for Judge and for Frank David for Surrogate.

If the Republicans of southern Oswego county conclude to adopt our suggestion in reference to Judge Avery they will but be following the example of their northern neighbors who came to the front a few years ago and so vigorously assisted to defeat a Republican candidate for Sheriff who hailed from southern Oswego county.

AT THEIR OLD TRICKS AGAIN.

The Oswego Times contained a contribution a few days since from one of its numerous unreliable Fulton correspondents stating that THE FULTON TIMES "is offered for sale;" that "$4,000 is asked and $1,800 offered."

It is hardly necessary to say that neither of these statements is true or have any foundation of fact other than the malicious imagination of the man who wrote them.

THE FULTON TIMES is not for sale, nor has it been offered for sale since its present proprietor came in full posession of of it. Unsuccessful overtures have several times been made looking toward its purchase, but that any one should have sufficient cheek to offer $1,800 for a property worth $5,000 is too ridiculous to need denial.

The proprietor of THE TIMES is very well satisfied with her investment and has no desire to dispose of it.

Our New York contemporary, a small edition of which is issued at Oswego Falls, copied the paragraph referred to from the Oswego Times. And we suppose this is the way the proprietor of that sheet took to thank us for loaning him nearly three columns of type to help fill up his local columns last week.

CHAIRMAN WARREN, of the Republican State Committee made a tour of inspection of this Senatorial District Saturday and found a very unsatisfactory state of affairs. He was met at Oswego by a large number of leading local politicians of the Republican stripe with whom he held a conference. Going on to Watertown he held a conference with Senator Lansing's friends. From Oswego he is reported as saying that he believed that Mannister Worts was the regular candidate, while at Watertown he expressed the belief that Senator Lansing was the regular nominee of the party. Just what Chairman Warren thinks about the matter is yet to be ascertained, but we do not know that it will particularly concern anybody what Chairman Warren thinks, after the 6th of next month, as under existing circumstances a Democrat is almost certain to go the Senate from this district.

Dr. E. FRANK MARSH is a nominee for the office of Coroner on the Republican ticket and D. H. Gilbert for the office of Coroner on the Democratic ticket. Both gentlemen are residents of the town of Granby. Both are good men and should receive their full party vote. While Mr. Gilbert has made an excellent Coroner since his appointment to the office, Dr. Marsh is a young physician of excellent standing and has already had considerable experience in medico legal-cases.

A Beautiful Book.

An elegantly bound volume entitled the "Changing Year," has been presented for our criticism. The work is an intermingling of the finest steel engravings and sonnets of favorite poets. Its plan is a comparison of spring, summer, autumn and winter of the year with the similar stages of a man's existance and so neatly is the work executed that it is at once ornamental, entertaining and useful. Perhaps we could not better illustrate the value of the volume than by giving place in our columns to the beautiful

PREFATORY SONNET.

From dawn to dark, from brightest gold to grey,
From boisterous winds of March to April showers,
From Summer strength to Winter's failing power,
The year speeds over its [illegible] way.
[illegible]

[illegible] was the youngest of a family of four children, her sisters [illegible], of Utica, N. Y., and Mrs. Caroline O. L. Osgood, of [illegible], N. Y., and her brother, A. H. Leavens Esq., of Utica, N. Y., all survive her. She was married in the year 1829 to Mr. David W. Bacon, at Trenton, who died in 1869. In the spring of 1867, Mrs. Bacon came west to live with her daughter and only surviving child, Mrs. R. M. Billings, and has ever since made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Billings at Spring Prairie. Her only relatives in the west being Mrs. G. G. Reeve of Lyons, a niece, and her grandson, Mr. John C. Bacon of Spring Prairie. There is much in the life and character of Mrs. Bacon that deserves more than a passing notice, but the record she has left, of kindly sympathy and helpful deeds in time of need, her devotion to family and friends, her intelligence and social qualities which endeared her to all who knew her, speak more eloquently than words the virtues of her life. She had been a member of the Unitarian church for many years and lived a Christian life, and when the summons came she was ready to go. Firm in her Christian faith and in the hope of a joyous meeting with loved ones on the other shore she sank peacefully to rest. Beautiful flowers in rich profusion, tokens of love and sacred memory were brought by numerous friends, and placed by loving hands, adorned the casket, as it was laid away in its final resting place.

"Oh, for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still."

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Every box of cheese offered at the Syracuse Dairymen's Board of Trade Monday was sold, says the Standard, and according to the same authority 1,109 boxes were offered, but no price is quoted.

AT UTICA.

The Board of Trade looked rather slim Monday as many of the salesmen were absent. The sales were 7,345 boxes; commissions, 821; total 8,166 boxes; ruling price 11½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The market Monday ruled firm and prices were slightly better than the previous week. The following is a list of the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price
3	254	11½
31	2554	11¾
32	3630	12
1	70	p. t.
14	1280	Com.
81	7788
Farm Dairy	630
Total	8418

AT FULTON.

Twenty-five hundred and fifty-one boxes of cheese were registered on the Fulton market Monday night from twenty-five factories. The bulk sold at 11¼c., while a few choice lots went at 11½c.

The price at a corresponding date last year was 13c.; 1881, 12c.; 1880, 12½c.; 1879, 11½c.; 1878, 9c.

OUT OF TOWN.

Pennellville.

PENNELLVILLE, Oct 9.—Emmet Turner and wife left yesterday morning for a few weeks' visit in Iowa, and other parts in the West.

CAUGHDENOY, Oct. 8.—Mrs. A. Hart has been called to Canada by the serious illness of her mother.

Growth of a Large Industry.

Such has been the growth of the business of Wm. Knabe & Co., piano manufacturers, that even their immense factories have not been large enough for them. To accommodate this increasing business, they have leased a large and convenient building just opposite their factories. The building was formerly used as a tobacco factory, and its size suits well for the purposes to which it will now be put. The building is on the southwest corner of Eutaw and West streets, fronting 135 feet on West street and 55 feet deep, with an engine house 25 by 15 feet. It is four stories [illegible]

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Sandy Creek is afflicted with a scourge of malaria.

The annual session of the central New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal chusch opens in Syracuse to-day.

The First Assembly District Republican Convention is called to meet in St. James hall Oswego October 18.

A new time table has gone into effect on the Rome, Watertown, and Ogdensburg railroad. Also a slight change in time on the Ontario and Western.

Alderman Brown has brought suit against the city of Oswego, claiming $5,000 damages for the loss of his ten-year-old son by drowning on July 3d. He alleges that the wharf was not in proper repair.

Minitt Dubois, of East Saginaw, Mich, who with his family has been visiting his father in Scriba, started for home Monday. In attempting to board the train after it had started, he slipped and fell and one hand was run over and cut off. He is about 40 years old.

Robert Gordon, of Oswego, made a general assignment last Wednesday. Mr. Gordon had been in business in Oswego about 25 years. In 1878 he failed and compromised by paying 50 cents on the dollar. In January, 1881, his entire stock was burned out, but he soon started again, and was supposed to be doing a prosperous business. His assignment is a general surprise. His liabilities will amount to about $50,000, and his nominal assets about the same amount.

The Neal Block, Oswego, was burned last Wednesday night. The fire caught in the mansard roof, where tinners had been at work during the day. The damages are as follows: Neal block $12,000; M. P. Neal, tailor, stock, $5,000; Linsley & Bullock, dry goods, 25,000; David Wright, billiard room, $1,200; P. W. Cullinan, law office, $1,000; B. F. Chase, law office, $1,000; masonic lodge, $5,000. The property was well insured. Nine firemen were injured.

[illegible]

On Sunday evening, June 27, 1880, [illegible] Dodgeson and Lewis Townsend [illegible] into the mill raceway in this village while driving from Oswego, where they had been spending the day. Dodgeson was drowned, as was the horse, while Townsend escaped.

Two years later in May, 1882, the widow of Dodgeson brought a suit for $10,000 damages against the village of Fulton, claiming that the village was responsible for the loss of her husband's life. The plaintiff claims that at the time of the accident her husband and Townsend were driving carefully along First street and meeting a wagon just north of the place of the accident turned out for the purpose of passing the same and in so turning out came in line with the street lamp at the canal bridge crossing at Oneida and First streets. On the other hand the village claims that Dodgeson and Townsend started for Oswego on the morning in question for the purpose of participating in a drunken debauch. That both at Minetto on their way down to Oswego and at Seneca Hill on their return they drank to such an extent as to be utterly incapacitated to drive safely; that while it was impossible to prove the sale of liquor directly to them—on account of its being Sunday, the sale of liquor being illegal on that day as well as the liability of the sellers to damages for his death—yet they were traced almost every step of the way from Minetto to Fulton by their drunken and boisterous conduct and after getting within the corporation of the village they were heard and seen driving in a furious manner in company with another wagon containing friends. They were also traced by a broken wheel or a sprung axle-tree to the very point of Dodgeson's death. The trial was commenced in Oswego last week and concluded yesterday, S. A. Webb and J. J. Lamoree being the plaintiff's attorneys, while W. C. Stephens and Judge Huntington were attorneys for the village. It is said that the charge of Judge Churchill, before whom the case was tried, was a fair and just statement of the case and facts in the case. The verdict, which gave the plaintiff damages to the amount of $1,300 was evidently a compromise verdict, for if the plaintiff was entitled to any verdict at all, it would be for an amount largely in excess of this. The judgement of every disinterested person who heard the suit was that since Dodgeson could not have recovered for any injury he might have sustained under the same circumstances, the plaintiff, his widow, should not have recovered.

Many facts material to the case have come to light since the trial which it was impossible to learn before.

Monday evening Lewis Townsend was arrested for perjury at the trial and the end is not yet.

THE SCHOOL MEETINGS.

Appropriations Made for the Ensuing Year.

Last evening school meetings were held in the various districts and to-day the election of school officers will occur from 12 o'clock m. till 4 p. m. in Districts No. 1 and 2 of Volney and District No. 14 (upper Oswego Falls) in Granby.

At the school meeting in the Emory District Levi Candee was elected trustee, Lewis Sherman, collector, A. L. Hatch, clerk, and Mrs. John Cory, librarian. One hundred and twenty-five dollars are to be raised for school purposes.

School District No. 15 of Granby (upper Oswego Falls) voted to raise $640 for school purposes.

At the meeting of District No. 2 of Granby (lower Oswego Falls) S B Mead was elected trustee, W R Hancock, clerk, and Amasa Williams, collector. The appropriations were: teachers' wages, $500: fuel, $60; incidentals, $43; to trustee for making out tax roll, $15; total, $631.25. There was $40 in the collector's hands which was voted to be used for grading the school grounds.

Beauty at the Bee Hive.

Bennett & Stewart, one of Fulton's popular dry goods firms, held a grand levee last week at their store on First street. A large stock of carefully selected goods had been arranged in the most tasteful and showy manner that the ingenious brains and deft fingers of the skillful assistants of this firm could devise. The occasion was the annual fall opening of the above named firm and the "Bee Hive" seemed to be fairly replete with the choicest goods in the market. The front windows especially presented a very attractive appearance, while the inside of the store was replete with such elegant goods as velvets, [illegible]

THEIR RELATIONS DISSOLVED

THE OSWEGO FALLS CHURCH WITHOUT A PASTOR.

The Action of a Council of Nine Churches at Howe's Hall Yesterday.

A mutual council representing nine Congregational churches met yesterday at Howe's Hall, Oswego Falls, at 3:30 p. m. to take action looking toward the dissolution of the relations between the Oswego Falls Congregational church and its pastor, Rev. A. E. Kinmouth. The churches represented were Utica, Oswego, Homer, Cortland, Cambria, Churchville, Smyrna, Volney and Lysander. The council went into executive session and discussed the findings of the arbitration committee which met a few days since. The council then adjourned until 7 p. m. and upon reassembling Rev. A. E. Kinmouth made some remarks and asked the council to dissolve the pastorate. He expressed his love for the church and said he hoped there would be no division.

B. R. Howe also spoke a few minutes in quite a feeling manner, offering his resignation as deacon.

The council made a report declaring the relations of Rev. A. E. Kinmouth and the church at Oswego Falls dissolved.

The attendance at the council was large and the results satisfactory. Rev. Wm. A. Robinson of Homer acted as moderator and Herbert M. Dixon of Smyrna as scribe.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Heart Disease Finds a Victim in the Oswego Falls Factories This Morning.

About 2 o'clock this morning John Sharpe, an employe in the wool washing department of the Oswego Falls factories, became suddenly ill and died within a few minutes, surrounded by his companions who came to his assistance. Fifteen minutes before his death he was laughing and joking apparently in the best of spirits. His sudden demise was attributed to heart disease. The deceased was a warp dresser by trade, was 40 years of age and had been in this country about a month. He leaves a wife and child who are still at Bradford, England.

MR. DOW ORDAINED.

AN APPROPRIATE SERMON BY REV. DR. MAYNARD.

A Large Representation of Baptist Churches Present—Fulton Clergy Participate.

Last Wednesday was the time appointed for the ordination of Mr. B. B. Dow and early in the day the delegates from the different churches of the Oswego Baptist Association began to arrive. The church was handsomely decorated with flowers and at 1.30 p. m., the services commenced. Rev. Mr. Grafftey of the East Baptist church of Oswego was chosen Moderator and Mr. Brown of South Richland, clerk. Rev. Mr. McFarland of Hannibal offered the opening prayer, and the candidate was presented and examined by the council, which consisted of delegates from seven churches as follows:—Rev. D. D. Owen, of Central Square; Rev. D. P. Brown, of South Richland; Rev. W. C. Johnson, of South West Oswego; Rev. Geo. Grafftey, Rev. Mr. Wilcox, Thos. Matthews, F. B. Lathrop and David Harmon, of Oswego; Rev. J. J. Townsend and Rev. L. Muzzy, of Pulaski; Rev. David McFarland, A. V. Lund, Mr. Wiltsie, Moses Dumas of Hannibal; Rev. J. P. Simmons, C. S. Osgood and C. W. Streeter, of Fulton, and Rev. Dr. W. H. Maynard, of Madison University; Rev. R. A. Burdick, of South Hannibal, and Rev. J. H. Benedict, of Jordan.

The examination being satisfactory the council retired for consultation and after a short interview returned and proceeded with the ordination, which was opened by the reading of the Scripture lesson by Rev. W. F. Markham, of the M. E. church, after which Rev. J. S. Riggs, of the Presbyterian church, offered prayer.

Rev. Dr. Maynard of Hamilton then preached the ordination sermon from Numbers 20th chapter 10th and 11th verses—"And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them hear now ye rebels must we fetch you water out of this rock? And Moses lifted up his hand and with his rod he smote the rock twice, and the water come out abundantly and the congregation drank and their beasts also." [illegible] a few of the thoughts presented: The temptation which overcame Moses was impatience. Christian courage gives one a quiet dignity. Christ's sweet spirit of forgiveness on the cross was an example of true Christian courage. The pastor is sometimes impatient because his church will not adopt some pet plan which he feels is for their good and for the good of the cause. Sensitiveness at opposition is weakness. He is not wise who defeats his own plan by impatience. If it is for the good of the cause a little tact with patient and faithful teaching will convince the church of the fact. Drop the seed into the soil and await the operation of nature, and if at last the church fail to see your plan in the same light that you do, you will doubtless live to thank God for it. Despondency is another cause of impatience. Unless there is a firm self sacrificing principle vexations will discourage and at last overcome. Be patient with the stumbling ones. There should be discipline in the church, but be sure the right ones are disciplined, not the poor tempted and struggling ones who are daily fighting for the mastery over sin and yet often falling, but the scheming, polished and intriguing who are rich in this world's goods and so largely escape open censure. Do not be bitter toward those who differ with you on doctrinal points. If they are in error and have been regenerated they will grow up into the light by and by. Be not impatient because of the small ingathering of souls, but examine yourself and see that your heart is longing for souls more than anything else. Intellectual earnestness is not spiritual unction. Be not impatient on account of small congregations, but take the parable of the leaven and trust the leavening is going on. Stand firm, work patiently and earnestly and your reward is sure.

Rev. David McFarland of Hannibal offered the ordaining prayer and Rev. J. J. Townsend of Pulaski extended the hand of fellowship in behalf of the council, Rev. M. A. Wilcox of the West church of Oswego delivered the charge to the Pastor in a very pleasing manner, and Rev. D. D. Owen of Central Square gave the charge to the church earnestly, briefly and to the point.

The exercises were closed with an appropriate hymn at 5.15 p. m.

A Fulton Artist Complimented.

The art notes of the Syracuse Sunday Times contains the following compliment of a piece of work by Mr. D. Stiles which is displayed in that city:

"There is a study by Mr. D. Stiles, of Fulton, at Hendricks,' which shows execution by a painter who knows how to paint. It represents a philosopher intently engaged in the solution of the problems of the globe. It is difficult to get a proper light and position in the store for the study, which cannot be seen at its best in consequence. The drawing of the hand holding the compass is fine and the representation of the fur collar is very effective. Although the subject is not very attractive, the execution shows marked artistic merit. Mr. Stiles paints the strongest heads of any one else in this vicinity."

A wealthy Fulton miser recently lost a poverty stricken brother, whom he had during the latter's life-time given but trifling assistance. Upon hearing of his demise he sent a dollar to the son of the deceased. The boy, with true American spirit, sent back the gift of his stingy relative with the message that he was not a dog to be made happy by the bestowal of a bone.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

Girl in hammock
Looks so sweet,
Man rides past,
Big moustache,
Girl in hammock
Makes a "mash."
Mash is mutual,
Day is set,
Man and maiden,
Married get.

II.

Married now,
One year ago,
Keeping house
On Baxter row.
Red-hot stove,
Beefsteak frying.
Girl got married,
Cooking; trying,
Cheeks all burning,
Eyes look red,
Girl got married,
Nearly dead.
Biscuit burnt up,
Beefsteak charry,
Girl got married,
Awful sorry.
Man comes home,
Tears moustache,
Mad as blazes,
Got no hash;
Thinks of hammock
In the lane,
Wishes maiden
Back again.
Maiden also Thinks of swing;
Wants to go back,
Too, poor thing!

III.

Hour of midnight,
Baby squawking,
Man in sock-feet,
Bravely walking;
Baby yells on,
Now the other
Twin, he strikes up,
Like his brother.
Paregoric,
By the bottle,
Emptied into
Baby's throttle.
Naughty tack,
Point in air,
Waiting, some one's Foot to tear;
Man in sock-feet—
See him—there!
Holy Moses!
Hear him swear!
Raving crazy,
Gets his gun,
Blows his head off,
Dead and gone.

IV.

Pretty widow,
With a book,
In the hammock
By the brook.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

For Man & Beast

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF

StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. R. W. BENTLEY."

"CRESTON, Iowa, April 23, 1882.

Cider from late apples is of better quality and possesses more body than that from early apples. It will also keep much longer.

Before planting a pear orchard take careful counsel as to the varieties. Too many sorts have been the cause of many sad disappointments.

The American advises people to spread out their potatoes in a dark, airy place for a week before putting them in barrels or bins, as a precaution against rot.

When turnips, potatoes and other vegetables are chopped finely and fed to fowls they will sometimes be refused; but the difficulty can be obviated by sprinkling the vegetables with corn meal.

The roofs of barns should be steep, and if of wood the surface either painted or the shingles dipped in lime water, to make them more durable. Straw and dirt collect under flat roofed shingles and cause rapid decay.

Pear blight is one of those mysterious things which, "no fellow can find out." It puzzles the wise and the foolish, and no expert can tell whence it cometh nor where it may strike. It affects trees in grass and those in cultivated soil; but some varieties seem to resist the disease better than others. But it tends to keep the price of pears high, and thus the blighted hopes of the pear-grower are relieved by a fair money return from what is left.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen—For many years I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism. Much of the time I had but little use of my arms; my hands were drawn out of shape, and nearly lost the use of one of my limbs. I have been treated by the best physicians, and have many different remedies that were highly recommended but grew worse all the time until I commenced using Rheumatic Syrup, and before I had used one bottle I began to improve, and after taking the Syrup four weeks, I was completely cured, and to-day I am as well as ever, and can use my hands and limbs as freely as when a boy. The effect of the Rheumatic Syrup has been truly wonderful in my case, and I find, on inquiry, that it is doing equally as well in every other case where it is being used. You are at liberty to use my name as you choose, as I am very glad to be able to say, as I can, that the Rheumatic Syrup is one of the best medicines on the market, and a single trial will convince any one of its wonderful merits. cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

[illegible] Remarks of books they know,

[illegible] with them in the staunch Mayflower.

A gentle lady, thin and white,
In a hammock swinging light,
Longfellow, and in the shade
Devours rhyme and lemonade,
While bending near her lover sighs,
[illegible] gazing into the eyes
She murmurs, "'Tis so nice that we Are neither of low family,
But of old Puritanic stock,
That landed upon Plymouth rock."

IN THE STUDIO.

"Justin."

The word was spoken so softly and shyly that it passed unheard. Daisy Lester raised her eyes and peered round the coffee-urn, thereby elongating and distorting her pretty reflection in its well-polished substance until it appeared to consist chiefly of one great, staring eye, the other feature being insignificantly small.

Her husband was so deeply interested in the morning paper that he was quite unconscious of her scrutiny.

"Justin, dear," she said, a little louder.

"H'm?"

As he did not look up, this inarticulate murmur failed to express any interest in what she might have to say.

"Is that model of yours coming today?" she asked, with the color slightly showing in her white forehead.

"H'm?"

"Do you expect the model to-day?" she repeated, without any change of tone.

"H'm," he said, affirmatively, with a slight nod in the direction of the paper.

"Will she stay long, dear?"

No reply.

"Will she stay long, dear?"

"Who?"

"The model."

"Stay," he repeated, absently, feeling for his toast and turning over his empty cup with a clatter. "Oh, yes, I hope so."

Daisy swallowed the remainder of her coffee in half-angry gulps, then folded her hands and silently watched her husband.

He was good-looking enough in his way, though rather too stout even for six feet two of height, considering he was not much over thirty. His crisp, black hair was allowed to grow to somewhat more than the customary length, but his dark beard was trimly and closely cut.

Five or ten minutes passed, and he flung paper on one side, pushed back his chair, and looked at his watch.

"Half-past nine. That girl will be here at ten, and I have a bit to put in before she comes, so I must be off. And look here, Daisy, I'm not to be disturbed for anything. It gets dark so early, and to-day is so bright that I shall work as long as I can see. Get your luncheon when you like. Have dinner early—say five, if that will suit you. But, till dusk I'm out—engaged, no matter who want's me."

"Oh, Justin! I was going to ask you to go out with me this afternoon."

"Won't to-morrow do as well? Any dull day; but time's getting on, and I ought to have finished the picture this week. You understand? I keep the model all day. Send her in a sandwich or something at about half-past twelve."

He walked around to her side, took her small chin in one great hand, placed the other under the yielding knot of her plentiful ruddy hair, and turned her face up to be kissed.

"When are you going to sit for me?" he asked, his artist eye noting the delicate gradations from her creamy complexion to the bright tints of her hair.

"Now, if you like," she said, eagerly. "Let me sit for that girl you are doing. I will be as still as possible for hours. Oh, Justin, do let me. Then I should be of some use to you."

He laughed outright.

"You are nearly a foot too short; not to mention other objections. No, my girl, you will be of much more use in saving me from interruptions than by serving as a model. But I will paint you some day, when I can afford to."

"Afford to, Justin?"

"When I can afford to paint what I do not mean to sell."

Jones, the maid—known by her surname on account of the floweriness of the name bestowed upon her at her baptism with Ethelfreda—entered at this juncture, after a modest tap; but quickly retreated to knock more loudly and announce from behind the shelter of the door:

"If please, sir, the muddle's come."

"Show her into the studio. I'll be there directly." There was a quick [illegible]; Justin Lester straightened [illegible], his collar, and, [illegible] and dignified tread, quitted [illegible]

[illegible]

"Yes, it is," said Daisy, who rather [illegible] Jones. "But it stands on an easel, not a weasel, Jones."

"Yes'm."

When her maid was gone Daisy sat down and sighed once more.

"The prettiest woman he had ever painted, he called her. And she had such a 'sweet expression.' And I am too short! I wonder what he married a short girl for, if he wants to paint tall ones. I could have stood on something! No, it isn't because I shouldn't do. He likes having her, I know he does. Well, the picture will be finished soon, and then she'll be done with. I suppose he doesn't think I should look well in a Gainsborough hat and long cloak."

She fetched some water and refreshed the plants that bloomed in the window, though with a melancholy and resigned air, like a much ill used woman, resolved to bear her wrongs with patience. After that there was so many little house-keeping duties to fulfill, that by degrees, her fancied griefs were forgotten.

There was a dainty pudding to make with her own fair hands, for Justin objected to Jones' cooking; there were the cut flowers to arrange for the table; there was the man who came with the gilt frames, and who was determined to see Mr. Lester, to be spoken to and sent away; there were all her husband's beloved little pots, jars and vases, that he called his properties, to be dusted, he permitting them to ornament the drawing room on condition that Jones should never touch them; there were a hundred other little things to do, of whose existence no one without a house of her own would dream.

But, after her solitary luncheon, when the afternoon gave her no more active occupation than a piece of needlework, her thoughts turned to the beautiful model with wearying persistency.

"I will go and look in to see how Justin is getting on," she said, at last, sticking her needle safely into the hem on which she was engaged, and trying to think she was going to do the most natural thing in the world. "I'll go very quietly, and then he surely won't mind."

She went out at the back, crossed the intervening yard, and laid her hand on the knob of the studio door, half hesitating. Then she turned it gently and drew back the heavy curtain that hung over it inside to keep out the draught.

For two or three seconds she stood there, with her face gradually assuming a deathly whiteness; for there, his back toward her, was the artist, his model in his arms. The Gainsborough hat lay against his shoulder; and his head was bent as if to catch the words of her who wore it.

Daisy let fall the curtain, shut the door as gently as she had opened it, and hurried back into the house.

When the daylight was fading Justin Lester locked up his studio and went in to look for his wife.

There was no answer to his loud "Daisy, where are you?" but Jones came running out of the kitchen.

"Missis is gone out, sir; but she left a note for you on the dining room table."

He entered the dining room, wondering a little at such an unusual proceedings on his wife's part, opened the letter and read:

"I have gone home to mamma. I wish I had never left her."

That was all; and it puzzled him not a little. He sat down on the table, which gave a demonstrative crack, re-read the note, frowned heavily, crumbled it up; then, relenting, smoothed it out, and stared at it once more.

"Oh, very well!" he said abruptly, at last, as before his mind's eye rose the weak, vain widow from maternal embrace he had taken his poor weak Daisy. "Whatever she has got into her head my dear mother-in-law will encourage her to keep there."

He walked about the room with his hand clasped behind him; unconsciously brushing the tablecloth awry, and kick the chairs out of their usual positions in his hasty passage to and fro; giving vent now and then to his feelings in such expressions as "Pshaw!" "Absurd!" and "What on earth!"

Then, acting on a sudden impulse, he sat down by Daisy's little writing table, placed a sheet of paper ready and took up a pen. For some minutes he chewed the end of his penholder, with his eyes, half closed, fixed upon the paper. But at last, abandoning the idea of writing, he rose and rang the bell.

"Your mistress has gone out for a few days," he told Jones, when she appeared; "let me know when dinner is ready. You must manage as well as you can till she comes back."

* * * * * *

A week after this, on a gloomy, foggy afternoon, Justin Lester sat in his studio, his legs extended before him, his hands thrust deeply into the pockets of his brown velveteen coat.

He sighed, which was not a habit of his, and gnawed the ends of his black mustache.

"I thought silence would bring her to her senses," he said to himself, "but here are seven days gone and no Daisy. Pah! I'm sick of it! I shall have to fetch her back. I can't stand this sort of thing any longer. Let's see if a [illegible] will do me any good. I feel as low and out of sorts as can be!"

He said it with a kind of [illegible] and [illegible] a small, [illegible]

[illegible]

Justin gathered up his legs, and rose, laying aside his pipe with instinctive politeness. He made, however, no movement to greet her.

There was a dead silence. At last Daisy nervously took off her hat, and unfastened her cloak so that it fell from her shoulders.

"I have forgiven you, Justin!" she said, gently and tremulously, with the tears rising to her eyes, as she advanced a little nearer.

"Thank you!" he said, dryly. "That is kind."

The sarcastic tone took immediate effect. Her eyes flashed, and she drew herself up.

"Why do you look at me as if I were in fault?" she asked indignantly. "Do you think I am such a poor, weak little thing that I would put up with anything?" I am weak enough as it is to come back without even so much as a word from you."

Her husband looked at her coldly.

"What do you expect? Look here, Daisy. You have put me to great inconvience by this foolish proceeding, to say the least of it. Why did you go?"

"You know why," she answered, passionately.

"Be so good as to suppose I don't and tell me."

"I came to the studio that afternoon," said Daisy, and the blood rushing to her face at the recollection.

"For heaven's sake speak out!" he said, impatiently.

Daisy burst into tears.

"I never thought you would be so cruel, Justin? How can you torture me so?"

Justin was really angry. His color rose and he bit his under lip savagely.

"Listen to me!" he said, after a pause. "I have never to my knowledge, since we were married, done or said anything that I should be ashamed for you to know. Before—"

"Oh! hush, Justin; how can you! I think," said the poor girl, with a trembling voice, "that I had better go back."

She turned from him, took up her hat and cloak and moved towards the door. With three strides her husband was at her side.

"Can't you believe me, child?" and he laid his hand on her shoulder.

"I wish I could!" she sobbed; but I saw you, Justin—you and her."

"Her!"

"The model. But I will forget all about it, Justin, if you will only be kind to me again."

She was sobbing and crying so hysterically that he took her in his arms, and and petted her like the child she seemed.

"There, there! Come. Daisy, this won't do. I was too harsh!"

He drew her towards the fire, placed her in a chair, dried her wet eyes with his own pocket handkerchief, finishing the operation with his mustache; and kneeling on one knee beside her, drew her golden head on to his shoulder.

"Now, my darling," he said, tenderly, "tell me what this is all about?"

"I saw you with that woman in your arms—the model," she whispered.

"How dare—no, no, I won't be angry! but, Daisy, look at me. Have I ever given you any reason to think so basely of me?"

"Justin," she owned.

"Well, what you did see I can't think. The model never came that day; I had a message to say she was ill, and she has not been since. Why, can it be possible—look here!"

He started up and drew back a lay figure, life size dressed in the costume of the lady in his picture.

"I had some difficulty in giving it the exact droop forward I wanted. You must have seen me trying to bend its stiff joints," he said, not even smiling at the absurdity of the situation, but turning his eyes, full of grave reproach, on his wife.

"I never thought of that!" said Daisy, humbly. Oh, Justin, can you ever forgive me?"

"On one condition."

"What is it?"

"That in the future you will always tell me when you mean to run away. I have never had anything fit to eat since you went away."—[Young Ladies' Journal.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough of cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

FORTY BILLION GERMS.

A Wonderful Theory that Concerns the Welfare, Happiness and Life of Everyone.

In his quiet and cosily library at the close of a busy day sat a gentleman and his wife, he absorbed in a new book and she in a newspaper. Quickly glancing at her husband, she asked, at a cetain point of an article.

"John, what is the germ theory?"

"The germ theory—well—yes; just look in the encyclopedia under 'Germ;' that will explain it so much better than I can."

Accordingly his wife opened the book at the word named and read: Germ theory of Disease—A theory advanced by the ablest and best investigators and scientists of the times. It supposes the surface of the earth, the air and water to be inhabited to a greater or less extent with a peculiar growth of the lowest form of fungi—commonly termed bacteria, whose power of reproduction, under favorable conditions, is so great that a single germ will increase to fifteen million in twenty-four hours' time, and unchecked in its increase would grow to a mass of eight hundred tons, in three days' time, if space and food be furnished. There is no condition under which it can be said to be absent, unless it be from fire or air filtered through cotton-batting in numerous layers. A single drop of water containing a germ, put into water boiled, filtered and thus freed from bacteria, will grow murky in a day or two from the development of new germs. When it is considered that it requires about forty billion to weigh one grain, some remote idea can be had of the capacity of germ reproduction. Professor John Tyndall, in a late work, elaborately treats of the influence of germs in the propagation of disease and charges upon this cause, the inception and development of very many of the ailments most injurious to man. Professor Pasteur, an eminent French savant, has carried his original and beautiful experiments so far, and from them deduced such practical results as very greatly to diminish the number of cases of anthrax among sheep and chicken cholera among fowls,—proving his theory that these are essentially and actually germ diseases. These germs are carried into the system through the lungs, the stomach and possibly the skin, but through the lungs chiefly. Once in the system, they begin to develop, poisoning the blood, invading the nerve centers, disturbing the functional activity of the great organs of the body and inducing a general impairment of the vital processes. They are the cause of fevers, rheumatism, Bright's disease of the kidneys, pneumonia' blood poisoning, liver disease, diphteria and many other ailments. Lately Professor Koch, a famous German physician, has proved that consumption of the lungs is due to this cause—the presence of a peculiar germ.

When the circulation is bounding, the nerves elastic and the system all aglow with life and energy, the germs seem to develop poorly, if at all. But with weakened nerves, poor digestion or malassimilation of food or a lowering of vitality from any cause, a change ensues, and in this impoverished and weakened fluid the germ finds a genial home and develops until symptoms of disease are distinctly manifested. This is seen in the everyday experience of all. The healthy man resists the influences around him and does not take cold, while those whose systems have become weak from any cause readily contract colds. This is on the same principle as the germ theory. The germs attack any weakened spot of the body, and fixing themselves upon it, begin their propagation. It is plain therefor that it is only by fortifying the weak portions of the body that the germs of disease can be resisted and driven from the system. But this has proved almost an imposibility heretofore, and it has been the study of physicians for years how best to accomplish it. Within the past few years, however, a preparation has been attracting great attention, not only throughout the entire land, but among the medical profession and scientists generally, which is based upon this theory, and it may safely be said, no remedy has ever been found which can so successfully place the system in a condition to resist the germs of disease as Warner's Safe Cure. This article is unquestionably the best and most efficient that has ever been discovered for this purpose, and—

"John, say, John! does the encyclopedia advertise Warner's Safe Cure?"

"I should not wonder, dear, it's a grand remedy, and that pamphlet we received the other day stated that Dr. Gunn, of the United states Medical College endorsed it. At all events the wonderful cures it is accomplishing entitle it to be honorbly noted among the great discoveries of the present century."

However the facts above stated may be, the truth remains, that the germ theory of disease is the correct one and that the great remedy mentioned is the only one which has ever been found that can put the system in a condition to kill these germs before they obtain a hold upon the body, and undermine the life.

THE women suffragists held a convention in Brooklyn last week.

THE one hundred and twenty-third call for the redemption of bonds of the three per cent. loan of 1882 has been issued.

J. T. M. DAVIES, surrogate of Cayuga county and Republican candidate for County Judge, was stricken with paralysis last week and died from the effects of the stroke. Deceased lived at Auburn.

THE New York Sun facetiously remarks that "seventeen months of good stealing remain before the final departure of the grand old party. The managers will make the most of their last opportunities."

THE notorious Mrs. Langtry arrived in New York from Europe Sunday morning and her adorer, "Freddie" Gebhard hired a steamboat and steamed down New York Bay at 8 o'clock in the morning to meet her.

THE leading lights of the Democracy held a love-feast at Albany last Friday evening and some of them became so excited over the result in Ohio that it was wildly predicted that New York would go Democratic by 100,000 majority this fall.

AT the election in Ohio last Tuesday, the constitutional amendment giving the Legislature power to regulate the traffic in intoxicating liquors and to levy taxes and assessments thereon was carried, while the Prohibition amendment was defeated.

THE Buffalo News remarks that "the telegram Tilden sent to Hoadly, "I congratulate you on your brilliant victory," rather silences the story that the Sage of Gramercy is not interested in politics. When Samuel does not chuckle over a Democratic victory he will be under six feet of earth."

GOV. BEN BUTLER is again making a warm canvass for the Massachusetts gubernatorial chair. The Republicans are savagely attacking Butler personally and are making vain attempts to defend the corruptions of the Tewksbury almshouse which Butler so thoroughly exposed. In a speech the other evening Butler boldly asserted that he had his eye fixed on the Democratic nomination for President in 1884. The depth of Butler's insatiable greed for office has never been fathomed.

THE Syracuse Sunday Herald has been printing some very interesting and timely letters from Oswego of late. The writer of them is well informed and his predictions are usually accurate. Here is one of the latest: "The impression exists here that Mr. Avery will be elected County Judge. The Democrats assert that they have a knowledge of certain pension cases in which Mr. Wright is alleged to have been interested to such an extent that he sent Mr. Nutting of Parish, brother of Representative Nutting, to Washington to stop proceedings. The Democrats allege that these cases will not bear inspection, and when the time comes they will be shown up. Mr. Avery will receive a large vote in Volney and Granby from the supporters of H. C. Howe."

THE Senatorial question is still the agitating theme among the politicians of this section, although there are indications of a partial settlement by the withdrawal of Mannister Worts. Chairman Warren was in Oswego again last week after his visit to Watertown, and "threw himself," so to speak, upon the magnanimity of Manister and his friends telling them what a dreadful thing it would be for a Democrat to be elected to the State Senate from this district, resulting, it might be, in a loss of a United States Senator, and so on through a whole category of direful things that were sure to happen if he did not withdraw. It is said that Mannister and his friends were visibly affected by this pathetic appeal and it is thought probable that he will withdraw. After this happens there is just one thing more for the Oswego Stalwarts to do and that is to find a convenient knot-hole, crawl into it and pull it in after them.

AT the second district convention of Onondaga county held in Syracuse about three weeks ago Francis Hendricks was nominated for member of Assembly. There was a warm preliminary canvass for the nomination between Hendricks and ex-Sheriff Davis Cowitt of Onondaga, one of the most prominent Republicans in the county. Cowitt was beaten, it was alleged, by an underhand [illegible]

[illegible] the claimed the [illegible] so [illegible] by the Republicans [illegible] that they were certain that victory would perch upon their banners. Hence it is with a deep feeling of disappointment and chagrin that they now witness the rejoicing of their opponents.

The victory of the Democracy of the Buckeye State would seem to foreshadow a similar result in New York. Republicans had hoped that there would be a revulsion in their favor from the political tidal wave which swept the country last year, but if Ohio was included in their calculations their hopes do not seem to have been realized.

What effect the Democratic victory in Ohio will have upon the Presidential issue of next year remains to be seen, as much depend upon what use the Democrats make of the advantage they have gained. If a President were to be elected in 1883 instead of 1884 there is no question but the Democrats would carry the country by storm. But 1884 is not yet here and in the meantime there is abundant opportunity for a radical change in public sentiment.

OUT OF TOWN.

South Granby.

SOUTH GRANBY, Oct 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Pardee Barras of St. Johns, Mich., have been visiting here.

The past two weeks have been lively ones in the tobacco traffic in this vicinity, a good many crops having changed hands at prices ranging from 17 to 21 cents, Mrs. Whitcomb and F. W. Palmer receiving 21 cents for their crops.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Palmer celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary last Saturday. A large number of invited friends were present and many valuable and beautiful presents were made to the young couple. F.

SOUTH GRANBY, Oct. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Fuller celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary last Friday evening at ther residence in this place. About sixty invited guests were present and a large number of beautiful and valuable presents were bestowed. A bountiful repast was served which all appeared to enjoy and to which ample justice was done.

Thomas West is erecting a house on his farm at this place. Henry Harwood is the builder.

No sales of tobacco were reported in this place during the past week. There is a good deal of unsold tobacco here that is very nice. It is curing very slowly, but is of excellent color.

A young daughter has made her appearance at the home of Delos Davis. Weight 15 pounds.

Michael Otis, our station master, is a happy man. It is a bouncing boy of 14 pounds. F.

Granby Centre.

GRANBY CENTRE, Oct. 12.—Several of the people in this place made a bee and built a nice board fence in front of the cemetery. The fence is painted and several hitching posts are set in front of it.

At the school meeting this week L. W. Austin was elected trustee, by a majority of one vote, I. F. Pierce, clerk, E. Smith collector, and B. Wyborn librarian. Mr. Austin has secured the services of David Clark of Dexterville for teacher of the winter school. R. K. S.

Caughdenoy.

Rev. G. G. Dains, of Hamilton, N. Y., will deliver a lecture at the M. E. church at Caughdenoy, Wednesday evening, Oct. 17th, at 7:30 p. m. All are cordially invited to attend; proceeds to apply on organ fund.—[Phœnix Register.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

There was a small attendance at the Syracuse Dairymen's Board of Trade Monday and only 645 boxes of cheese were offered.

AT UTICA.

Many of the factorymen claim that there had been a large shrinkage of milk since October 1. One large factory has shrunk from twenty cheese a day down to fifteen, and others are off in the same proportion. It is evident that the October make is going to be much less than it was last year. On the other hand, buyers have had a hard road to travel for two weeks past, and meant to get their stock at prices which would make them moderately safe. They secured 6 lots, 600 boxes, at 10⅞c; 8,42 lots, 918 boxes at 11c; 9 lots, 776 boxes at 11⅛c; and 4 lots, [illegible] boxes, at private terms. Sales 5,786 boxes; commissions 857; total 6,643 boxes. Ruling price 11c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The cheese market was unusually dull on Monday and transactions were the lightest known for many a week. Buyers would not offer over 11¼ and 11⅜c, and factorymen preferred to hold their stocks in most cases rather than accept these figures. Following are the transactions:

Twenty factories were represented at [illegible]

[illegible] The people have [illegible] registered their decree that the Republican party must go.—[N. Y. Sun.

HAS DEPRESSED REPUBLICANS.

The result of the Ohio election has had a depressing effect upon the Republican politicians at the capital. They foresee the defeat of their party in the Presidential campaign of the coming year.—[Buffalo Courier.

A POINT GAINED.

The Ohio Democrats have therefore now gained for the first time the prestige of electing their Governor, on the eve of a Presidential election and the advantage arising from the possession of the State government during the coming national campaign.—[N. Y. Herald.

LIKE A CLAP OF THUNDER.

Now comes Ohio like a clap of thunder out of a clear sky and smites Republicanism, because its success would inure to Stalwartism in the nation, and the nation is bent on exterminating Stalwartism and entrusting the reform Democracy with power.—[Albany Argus.

A TRIUMPH OF REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT.

Such a victory is truly a triumph of Republican government over the power of patronage, of prejudice and of corporate wealth. It proves that when the people's rights and liberties are threatened their patriotism can manifest itself as effectively through their ballots as through their bayonets.—[N. Y. World.

HALSTEAD'S BENEDICTION.

There are indications of Foraker's election by a little under 10,000 majority. The German Republicans have stood by us wonderfully. God bless them.—[Murat Halstead at 1:15 a. m. Oct. 10.

THE INITIAL PERFORMANCE.

It is the initial performance of the work of throwing the Republican party out of power in the United States and turning over of the books to the Democracy for examination. It means a general change.—[John R. McLean.

SHERMAN'S HOPEFUL VIEW.

The election will have no other effect in Ohio than to make the struggle next year on national issues more determined on the part of the Republicans. While Ohio will be classed as a doubtful State it will not really be so in a Presidential election.—[John Sherman.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO DEMOCRATS.

A Democratic victory in Ohio, which now looks as if it must be conceded, cannot influence the Presidential contest except indirectly—save as it gives renewed courage to the New York Democracy. That it will prove a great encouragement to the Democrats Truth has no doubt. It should be equally an incentive to Republicans to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat.—[N. Y. Truth.

THE TRIBUNE'S HYPOCRISY.

The New York Tribune in one of its labored explanations of the Republican defeat in Ohio, sneers at the "Democratic grimy paw." It is sure that the workingmen, whose hands are toil-soiled, turned the tide against the Republicans, and perhaps the Tribune in its anxiety to maintain "the largest circulation among the best people" wishes to alienate from itself and the Republican party every voter whose hand is "grimy' with labor. If it would take equal pains to break friendship with men whose hands are stained with moral filth, it would enjoy a larger measure of respect among people who honor real worth and despise hypocrisy.—[Syracuse Herald.

HOPEFUL REPUBLICAN VIEW.

Apart from the location and extent of majorities, the Ohio Republicans have won a substantial victory. If in an "off year" campaign, amid peculiarly adverse local conditions, they can muster such a vote as they led to the polls on Tuesday, their ability to sweep the State next year with any respectable candidate is brought very near the line of absolute certainty.—[Syracuse Standard.

GOOD FOR THE REPUBLICANS.

Now you want to know, assuming that Hoadly is elected, what the result will be as to the Presidential election? With a Democratic Legislature to wrestle with the liquor law, added to a Democratic House of Representatives, and Judge Hoadly the foremost candidate for the Presidency, and a man of just those sparkling qualities that are unsafe, the Republicans will have a booming prospect in Ohio in the Presidential year; and when the people are jammed right up to the question whether the Democratic party shall be trusted with the general government they will say "no" again.—[M. Halstead.

What His Opinion is Worth.

The Utica Herald of to-day says Mr. Worts the Republican candidate for Senator has received an opinion from Attorney General Russell that he is ineligible. Mr. Worts has not asked and has not received an opinion from Mr. Russell. The situation is this: Fred Lansing went to Albany a few days since. Lansing and Russell are warm personal friends and Russell is very anxious for Lansing's success. Just after Lansing's visit to Albany, Russell wrote an opinion to one J. B. Alexander (a private citizen who has a deep personal interest in the election of Lansing) that Mr. Worts is ineligible. If Mr. Worts shall be elected and if the question of his eligibility shall arise—[illegible]

SETH GREEN.

What the Great Fish Culturist Says:

Last winter I went to Florida and while there contracted Malaria in a very severe form. When I returned home I went to bed and remained there until spring. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of Malaria can appreciate my condition. As I failed to get any better I determined to try a remedy made by a gentleman in whom I had the greatest confidence. I am happy to say it affected permanent relief and that I am well to-day through the influence of Warner's SAFE Cure. After such an experience I can most heartily recommend it to all sufferers.

ALLCOCK'S.

PHILA., 308 NORTH THIRD ST., February 1, 1883.

I have been using ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTESS for a number of years and always with marked benefit. I have been much troubled with muscular Rheumatism; have been treated by five of our best physicians without receiving any relief whatever. I then used Allcock's Plaster on the parts affected and I can assure you the pain has almost entirely left me. I can recommend them to every one as the best plaster made. I have tried other kinds but found them worthless. B. F. GALLAGHER.

I have been greatly troubled with Rheumatism and Weak Kidneys. I was advised to try ALDCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS (had used two other kinds of so-called Porous Plasters, which did me no good), but one of yours has worked like a charm, giving me complete relief, and I have not been troubled with Rheumatism and Kiddey Complaint since using them, and I consider myself cured.

[illegible] Stephens Comes to the Rescue.

It will be remembered that in the Dodgeson suit against the village of Fulton tried in Oswego week before last that the coroner's minutes relating to the inquest over the remains of John Sharp Dodgeson were missing from the County Clerk's office and were not produced at the trial of the suit. Whatever has become of these minutes, the minutes of H. E. Nichols, who was then clerk of the village, are still in existence and were produced at the trial, but they were not available, as Mr. Nichols was absent in Dakota and could not testify as to their accuracy.

The Oswego Palladium prints a letter J. J. Lamoree, one of the attorney's for the plaintiff, in which he claims that though he borrowed these important papers from the County Clerk's office he returned them again to the same office. In reference to them he says: "The loss I am sure, is not an injury to defendant, but the paper was of importance to the plaintiff, in that it contained the finding of the coroner's jury at the inquest, severely censuring the village of Fulton for having left the fatal trap exposed, wherein Dodgson lost his life."

Mr. W. C. Stephens, attorney of the village of Fulton, was seen in reference to the matter and while he did not think it proper to go into print during the pendency of a case in court he spoke as follows in relation to the matter:

"Mr. Lamoree must have forgotten that in the opening of the case by the plaintiff's attorney he referred to the coroner's jury's findings, but upon interruption by the defendant's attorney the court held that it was not a proper subject of reference and was not material in the trial of the case."

The Palladium in its report of the trial printed the following statements from S. A. Webb, the associate counsel for the prosecution.

"Mr. S. A. Webb, one of the attorneys for the plaintiff in the case stated this morning that the charge of perjury preferred against Townsend is a trumped up affair, and brought for the purpose of preventing Townsend from recovering damages for his horse and carriage which were lost at the time Dodgeson lost his life."

Upon being questioned by a representative of THE TIMES in reference to this subject Mr. Stephens put in the following vigorous rejoinder:

"It is now three years and four months since this injury occurred and no suit has yet been commenced by Townsend. Any cause of action that he might have had is barred by the statute of limitation. Furthermore the village is willing and anxious that Townsend should commence a suit of this kind. The prosecution of Townsend for perjury had no relation to any cause of action that Townsend had against the village, but solely to convict him and punish him for the crime of perjury committed at the recent trial."

CHESTER S. LORD.

A Fulton Boy's Brilliant Journalistic Career.

Of the men who passed their boyhood in Fulton probably none has ever attained so high a position, in journalistic ranks at least, as has Chester S. Lord, son of Rev. E. Lord, who was for a number of years pastor of the Fulton Presbyterian church and subsequently chaplain of the One Hundred and Tenth Regiment.

Concerning Chester S. Lord the following highly complimentary notice is found in the New York letter of the Syracuse Sunday Herald:

"Napoleon at twenty-six was in command of the army of Italy, and by his genius won victories where defeat seemed inevitable. This must have been about the age of Chester S. Lord when he took charge of the Syracuse Standard and made it for a few weeks the brightest morning paper Syracuse has ever seen. To command the army of Italy in 1796 and the editing of the Standard in 1877 may seem somewhat ludicrous, but to-day Mr. Lord is in charge of the New York Sun. I cannot do better in this respect than quote from the Brooklyn Eagle when it says:

"The first prize in newspaperdom has been won by a man only thirty-three years of age. He is envied by every journalist in New York. When John Swinton left the Sun to start a journal of his own, the paper was left without a manager. Chester S. Lord has been appointed to the position. He is in absolute charge of the whole paper. This means more on the Sun than on any of the New York journals, because Mr. Charles A. Dana spends only a few hours in the middle of the day at his office. Mr. Lord is, therefore, virtually the editor of a great New York daily. The appointment is eminently satisfactory, because the man has come up from the ranks. Mr. Lord walked into the Sun office eleven years ago and applied for a position as reporter. He worked his way up. He can go no higher now, unless he becomes the owner of the paper."

To-Night's Entertainment.

The Beebe Sisters comic opera company will give an entertainment at the Stephen's Opera House this evening. The company has a full brass band and orchestra of their own. In the cast of characters is included a child violinist, Miss Josie Burt, who renders with ease the most difficult triple-tongued solos of Levy, Arbuckle, Emerson and others. John McCarthy, Street Commissioner of Oswego Falls, lost the poll tax list and warrant of that village a few days ago. It has been returned to him by John Parker, who received it from a party who did not desire to have his identity known.

The school at upper Oswego Falls opened Monday with Misses Minnie Moore, Ida Baldwin, Sh[illegible] Merriam as teachers. The enlargement which has been made to the school building during the past vacation has considerably increased the facilities of the school.

It has been learned that it was Alexander Culver of Lysander who ran over Miss Anna Brown on a crosswalk on Broadway in Oswego Falls on one of the days during the fair. Culver has settled the matter by paying Miss Brown's doctor's bill, besides giving her the sum of $10.

At the State shoot at Bay View last Wednesday between a Buffalo and an Oswego military rifle team the Buffalo team were victorious by a score of 184 against 169. The combined scores at 200 and 500 yards of the Fulton members of the Oswego team were: C. F. Campbell, 31; E. M. DeRusha, 33; W. P. Hillick, 33.

The musicale of the Zion Church Organ Guild held at the residence of W. S. Nelson last Wednesday evening was a decided success in every particular. The treasury of the guild was more largely replenished than by any previously held. The program as published was carried out and the rendition of the music was very much enjoyed by the guests.

The Pulaski Democrat compliments Francis Earl Bryant after this fashion: "A Fulton lady, young and attractive looking, wears a man's coat, vest, collar and hat. She is not a Mary Walker stripe, nor a woman's right's zealot, but simply a womanly woman who knows what is comfortable, seasonable and sensible in wearing apparel, and withal, with pluck enough to quietly carry out her ideas, regardless of fashion or its votaries."

A farmer named William Appleton, residing in Granby, came to Herrick & Emerick's mill yesterday morning with a horse and lumber wagon to get a load of shavings. While backing his horse near the raceway the animal became frightened and suddenly backed off into the water. By the vigorous assistance of a number of men and boys together with the employes of the mill, the animal was cut loose from the wagon and rescued. Later the wagon was pulled out.

OUR LITERARY SOCIETIES.

INSTRUCTION AND ENTERTAINMENT COMBINED.

Three Flourishing Organizations which Promise to add pleasure to the Long Winter Evenings.

The first meeting for the present season of the M. E. Literary Society was held at the residence of W. F. Markham last Wednesday evening. Selections were read by Miss Maria Highriter and Mrs. L. H. Patterson, while Mrs. E. R. Redhead, Miss Susie Porter and Miss Gertie Wheeler very acceptably rendered some choice selections of music. Discussion was had concerning the adoption of a portion of the Chautauqua literary course. Some timely remarks were made upon the subject by Rev. W. F. Markham and the Society decided to take up a part of the course. In pursuance of this policy a large number of subscriptions were taken for the Chautauquan. The next meeting of the Society will be held at the residence of Dr. G. V. Emens, Wednesday evening, October 31, when American Literature will be treated in a paper by E. R. Redhead, while "Air" will be G. F. Schenck's topic and a poem will be read by Miss Fannie Lake.

The C. L. S. C.

The C. L. S. C. met at the residence of Mrs. George M. Case last Friday evening, Mrs. S. N. Dada, the vice president presiding. Mrs. Case presented a review on "American Literature," Miss Delia Matson read an essay upon "Physical Science," and Mrs. G. H. Salmon questioned the circle upon Greek history. Seven or eight new names were received, increasing the membership to about forty. The meetings are varied in their character, the roll call being accompanied by quotations from various authors. Next Wednesday evening the circle will meet with Mrs. G. H. Salmon.

The Fulton Reading Circle.

The Fulton Reading Circle held its session at the residence of Mrs. B. J. Dyer again Monday evening. Miss Carrie Gardner read a selection entitled "Abelard and Eloise," a selection by Miss Ellen Emerick dealt with Charlemagne, while Miss Sarah French also favored the circle with a choice selection. During the present season Mrs. C. M. Lee is President and Miss Ellen Emerick is Secretary.

A Display Worth Witnessing.

Francis E. Bacon never does things by halves. Personally, he is a wholesouled, genial gentleman and when he announced that his fall opening would occur last Thursday his many friends knew he would have a display worth seeing and hosts of them improved the opportunity of witnessing a first-class free show and of being entertained by the polite attentions of his salespeople. From early dawn till dewy eve the amiable proprietor himself was the presiding genius who seemed everywhere present, flitting about among his patrons and friends. Dropping a pleasant word here and there, cracking a joke or proffering timely advice to some prospective customer he succeeded in adding new evidence to the current belief that F. E. Bacon is one of the most polite and affable business men in town.

And he had a display worth seeing, even had it been exhibited with less accomplished tact. In one front window on First street, were bell pompadour fischus, with woven brocade velvets, set off with silks and gloves and buttons to match. The other front window was filled with furniture and window trimmings. Going inside and passing rapidly by displays of hosiery, handkerchiefs, linens, ruchings and "stars" and labeled "This is a flag," we ran afoul of the cloak department and anchored for an inspection of several minutes. After this we saw quantities of ottoman cloths, broadcloths, embroidery materials, Jersey cloths, eider down cloaking, seal plushes, a well stocked millinery department and in fact a large store full of first-class goods.

[illegible] Congregational church.

A meeting of the Congregational church and society will be held at 8 o'clock this evening at Howe's hall to take action in the matter of raising funds to procure carpets, cushions, etc., for the new church which is to be dedicated in the course of two or three weeks. The electric wires and lamps will be put in this week and the other finishing touches will be made as rapidly as possible. Rev. Dr. Newman of New York, whose church is attended by A. D. Juilliard will probably preach the dedicatory sermon. It is desirous that there should be a large attendance at the meeting this evening as important business will be transacted.

Mr. Lathrop's Success.

The new building of G. C. Lathrop is being pushed rapidly forward and will be completed at an early day.

Last week Mr. Lathrop removed his goods from the old building which he has occupied since 1861 and which must give way to the new one. Mr. Lathrop himself is now well advanced in years, having been born in 1811. He started life with a small candy stand at the canal bridge crossing at Oneida and First streets. At that time a line of packet boats ran through the Oswego canal and Mr. Lathrop did a thriving business. Later he occupied a store near the present store of Miller & Whitaker. Here he was burned out in the big fire of 1850, which destroyed a large part of the business portion of Fulton. Having no insurance he was obliged to begin life anew at the corner by the canal bridge until he was able to stock a store again. He occupied successively two stores in the Lewis House block and in in the fall of 1852 removed to the store he has just vacated. Mr. Lathiop is now well-to-do, as is indicated by his enterprise in erecting what promises to be the handsomest business block in town.

The Fair of this and Other Years.

Secretary Rice reports that the total receipts of the late fair amount to $4,150, while last year they were $4,750, in 1881, $4,800 and in 1880, $5,000. Last year less money was expended for special attractions than was used for that purpose this year, over $100 being given for bicycle races, while G. S. Hosmer of Syracuse was induced at considerable expense to come here and exhibit his horses. In 1881 there was a balloon ascension and Courtney and Riley were here, while the year before a new building which had been erected was the attraction. "The latter," remarked Secretary Rice, "will draw a larger crowd than anything we can get from abroad. Everybody will come to see a new building." The deficit this year is owing to the shortage in the ground rents. The number of tickets sold this year was: large, 2,017, small, 5,730, total, 7,747; in 1882—large, 1,911, small, 6,026, total, 7,937; 1881—large, small, 6,856, total, 9,137; 1880—large, 1,854, small, 6,475, total, 8,329; 1879—large, 1,865, small, 5,927, total, 7,792; 1878—large, 2,015, small, 5,880, total, 7,895. "Large" indicates the dollar tickets and "small" the 25 cent tickets.

Taken Suddenly Sick.

Mrs. Richard Butler of New York and child, who have been the guests of Mrs. Swits Conde of Oswego for sometime past, came to Fulton Sunday afternoon to visit Mrs. A. C. Tucker and other friends. Shortly after arriving at Mrs. Tucker's she was taken suddenly ill. A physician was called and it was ascertained that her side was completely paralyzed. The doctor considered her condition very critical. Her husband was immediately summoned. He arrived Monday evening. Since Sunday the sufferer has rapidly failed and it is not expected that she will survive through the day.

Mrs. Butler passed her girlhood in Fulton, where she has many friends by whom she is highly esteemed and who will be pained to learn of her serious illness. Her maiden name was Loiana Clough, and she is the daughter of Hamilton Clough who was engaged in business in Fulton some thirty years ago in company with C. P. Tucker.

Election of School Officers.

At the election of school officers last Wednesday R. E. Philiips, H. S. Gardner and W. G. Gage were again chosen members of the Board of Education

In District No. 1 there were two candidates in the field for trustee, R. R. Dodge being re-elected over Dr. W. L. Woodbury. J. Francis was re-elected clerk and Clark Smith was again chosen collector.

At the school election in the district at upper Oswego Fall the choice of officers resulted in the election of W. D. Edgerton for trustee, C. E. Carpenter for clerk and John Crahan for collector.

A meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening at the store of R. E. Philliys, Amos Youmans was reappointed clerk and E. V. Lathrop collestor for the ensuing year.

Post Schenck Camp Fire.

Post Schenck, G. A. R., held a pleasant camp fire in their room last evening. The entertainment presented for the amusement of the guests consisted of a song "The Sword of Bunker Hill," by J. F. How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

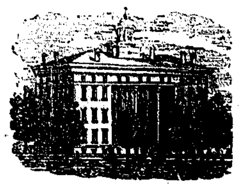
FALLEY SEMINARY.



Fulton,

OSWEGO, CO., N. Y.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

Complimentary Notice.

It gives us great pleasure to call the attention of our readers to the series of the advertisements of the James Boss Gold Watch cases now appearing in our columns. This watch case has been on the market for nearly thirty years and has attained a reputation which is second to none, it now being generally conceded to be the standard. The James Boss Gold watch cases are made of two plates of solid fourteen karat gold soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickle composition metal. These plates of gold are thick enough to admit of engraving, chasing, etc, and supply all the gold needed for practical purposes, while the composition plate furnishes all the strength and solidity needed in every watchcase, and yet lacking in those made of solid gold. Although these cases are as good and in some points better than a solid gold case the cost is only about one half as much. Many of the James Boss Gold Cases have been in use for twenty-five years without wearing through the gold. The manufacturers furnish a guarantee with each case, warranting it to wear twenty years, and this guarantee means just what it says, for unlike other guarantees furnished so often with watch cases, this is signed by the manufacturers of the James Boss Gold watch cases. Purchasers should avoid any watch case unless the guarantee is signed, as otherwise it is not only worthless but is intended so to be, and the absence of a reliable signature is a fair indication that the manufacturer lacks faith in his claims or in his goods.

It is a certain cure for dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria, weakness, kidney, lung and heart affections. THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparallel success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when external application is demanded. This being composed of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF

StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a hitch and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and [illegible] E. W. [illegible]"

The roof [illegible] should be steep, and if of wood the surface either painted or dipped in lime water to make them more durable. Snow and dirt collect under flat-roofed shingles and cause rapid decay.

A fruit grower who has tried the use of a solution of Paris Green for killing rose bugs on grapes states that it put an end to the depredation of insects but ruined the grape blossom, grape and leaf.

In setting out young trees the holes should be wide, in order to allow of the use of a liberal supply of well rotted compost, and also for the reason that the roots will become thick and strong somewhat sooner than by using a narrow, deep hole.

Keep the sheep on the fields that have been cleaned off in order that they may utilize the waste, but do not confine them on such locations after they have eaten up everything. They should be changed from one pasture to another frequently.

Many mistakes have been made in supposing that the principal hinderance to egg production is the effect of cold. The trouble is usually due to dampness. Fowls do not suffer as much during the time of extreme cold in winter as they do in the latter part of the spring.

When horses eat their oats too rapidly the evil may be checked by placing some clean copple stones in the box. The horse will then be compelled to pick his oats slowly, masticate them more thoroughly, and they will do him much more good than if hurriedly eaten in the ordinary way.

Mr. John Ridwell, South Richland, N. Y., says: "I tried Brown's Iron Bitters for weakness and general ill-health and received much benefit."

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

"Cyclone the saloon," is the cry of a stump orator for temperance in Iowa.

Chicago uses 80,000,000 gallons of water a day. A very considerable portion of this, it is said, goes into the retail whisky dens.

The anti-liquor-selling people in Washington are making an aggressive fight against the saloon keepers, with the object of preventing the issuing of licenses for the coming year to as great an extent as possible.

It is estimated that there are 10,000 liquor shops in Philadelphia, one-third of them not licensed. A proper license of $500 for the privilege of selling whisky, and $250 for a beer-selling license, would yield a revenue of one and one half million dollars and cut down the number of shops and saloons to three or four thousand.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union at Cleveland, O., rented stores, rooms and in some cases entire dwellings, in close proximity to the voting places in every ward in the city for headquarters at the election last Tuesday. These places were decorated with flowers, banners and mottoes. Hot coffee and cakes were served. Men were employed to distribute tickets with the affirmative second amendment to the constitution. The ladies did the same and electioneered for the amendment. The most earnest and shrewd work of the campaign was done by and for the Women's Christian Temperance Union in favor of the second or prohibition amendment.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

In pursuance of an order of Hon. [illegible], Surrogate of Oswego county, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against [illegible] N. Baker, late of the town of Volney, in said county, deceased, to present their accounts with the vouchers thereof, to the undersigned, at the office of Giles S. Piper in Fulton, N. Y., on or before the 20th day of October, 1883, or they will lose the benefit of the statute in such case made and provided.

[illegible], Executrix,
VIRGIL HOWARD, Executor.

Dated April 18, 1883.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the State of New York, whereby the power to sell had become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 9th day of February, 1869, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego, at Oswego, N.Y., on the 19th day of Feb. 1869, at 1:30 o'clock p. m. in liber 89 of mortgages page 114 was given by Susannah E. Ballinger mortgagor to Charles R. Clark, Henry M. Clark, Stephen L. Clark, Sullivan L. Clark, Almon C. Clark and Lucina Collins, mortgagees and the name of each assignee of said mortgage is as follows: First assignee Erastus G. Jones, 2d assignee and present holder, Mary L. Wheeler. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is four hundred seventy-four dollars and fifty-nine cents, which is the whole amount secured by said mortgage. The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in the said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the town of Volney known as a part of lot No. thirty-eight in the fifteenth township of Scriba's Patent and described as follows: Commencing at the south-west corner of lot No. thirty-eight; thence running north along the west line of said lot whence a line drawn in an easterly direction parallel with the south line of said lot thirty-eight and extending to the eastern boundary of said lot, which shall contain twenty-seven and three-fourths acres. Pursuant to the power of sale therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof, at public auction, at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 22d day of December, 1883, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day. Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 20th day of September 1883.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

OSWEGO, CO., N. Y.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."

Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."

Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

Complimentary Notice.

It gives us great pleasure to call the attention of our readers to the series of the advertisements of the James Boss Gold Watch cases now appearing in our columns. This watch case has been on the market for nearly thirty years and has attained a reputation which is second to none, it now being generally conceded to be the standard. The James Boss Gold watch cases are made of two plates of solid fourteen karat gold soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickle composition metal. These plates of gold are thick enough to admit of engraving, chasing, etc, and supply all the gold needed for practical purposes, while the composition plate furnishes all the strength and solidity needed in every watchcase, and yet lacking in those made of solid gold. Although these cases are as good and in some points better than a solid gold case the cost is only about one half as much. Many of the James Boss Gold Cases have been in use for twenty-five years without wearing through the gold. The manufacturers furnish a guarantee with each case, warranting it to wear twenty years, and this guarantee means just what it says, for unlike other guarantees furnished so often with watch cases, this is signed by the manufacturers of the James Boss Gold watch cases. Purchasers should avoid any watch case unless the guarantee is signed, as otherwise it is not only worthless but is intended so to be, and the absence of a reliable signature is a fair indication that the manufacturer lacks faith in his claims or in his goods.

It is a certain cure for dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria, weakness, kidney, lung and heart affections. Try it if you desire to be healthy, robust and strong and experience its remarkable curative qualities.

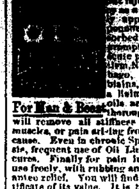
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



For Man & Beast.

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being composed of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn, and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claimed for it, and recommend it to all railroad employees. [illegible]"

The root [illegible] should be [illegible] and if of wood the surface either painted or dipped in lime water to make them more durable. Straw and dirt collect under flat-roofed shingles and cause rapid decay.

A fruit grower who has tried the use of a solution of Paris Green for killing rose bugs on grapes states that it put an end to the depredation of insects but ruined the grape blossom, grape and leaf.

In setting out young trees the holes should be wide, in order to allow of the use of a liberal supply of well rotted compost, and also for the reason that the roots will become thick and strong somewhat sooner than by using a narrow, deep hole.

Keep the sheep on the fields that have been cleaned off in order that they may utilize the waste, but do not confine them on such locations after they have eaten up everything. They should be changed from one pasture to another frequently.

Many mistakes have been made in supposing that the principal hinderance to egg production is the effect of cold. The trouble is usually due to dampness. Fowls do not suffer as much during the time of extreme cold in winter as they do in the latter part of the spring.

When horses eat their oats too rapidly the evil may be checked by placing some clean copple stones in the box. The horse will then be compelled to pick his oats slowly, masticate them more thoroughly, and they will do him much more good than if hurriedly eaten in the ordinary way.

Mr. John Ridwell, South Richland, N. Y., says: "I tried Brown's Iron Bitters for weakness and general ill-health and received much benefit."

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

"Cyclone the saloon," is the cry of a stump orator for temperance in Iowa.

Chicago uses 80,000,000 gallons of water a day. A very considerable portion of this, it is said, goes into the retail whisky dens.

The anti-liquor-selling people in Washington are making an aggressive fight against the saloon keepers, with the object of preventing the issuing of licenses for the coming year to as great an extent as possible.

It is estimated that there are 10,000 liquor shops in Philadelphia, one-third of them not licensed. A proper license of $500 for the privilege of selling whisky, and $250 for a beer-selling license, would yield a reveaue of one and one half million dollars and cut down the number of shops and saloons to three or four thousand.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union at Cleveland, O., rented stores, rooms and in some cases entire dwellings, in close proximity to the voting places in every ward in the city for headquarters at the election last Tuesday. These places were decorated with flowers, banners and mottoes. Hot coffee and cakes were served. Men were employed to distribute tickets with the affirmative second amendment to the constitution. The ladies did the same and electioneered for the amendment. The most earnest and shrewd work of the campaign was done by and for the Women's Christian Temperance Union in favor of the second or prohibition amendment.

Nathan Knapp says:

Gents—I have been troubled with rheumatism for several years to such a degree that I found it impossible to attend to my business, which is that of foundryman, and have been confined to the house and to my bed much of the time. Have tried all sorts of remedies, and have been treated by several doctors, all to no purpose, until I finally heard of your Rheumatic Syrup, and was induced to try it, and I am very happy to say, after the use of a few bottles, I am as strong and well as ever, and never feel a symptom of anything like rheumatism any more. I can cheerfully recommend your Rheumatic Syrup to all who are afflicted with rheumatism, for it is certainly a valuable remedy and [illegible]

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

THE CHURCH ROAD.

On the road once more, with Lebanon fading away in the distance, the fat passenger drumming idly on the window-pane, the cross passenger sound asleep, and the tall, thin passenger reading "General Grant's Tour around the World," and wondering why "Green's August Flower" should be printed above the doors of "A Buddist Temple at Benares." To me comes a brakeman, and, seating himself on the arm of the seat says:

"I went to church yesterday."

"Yes," I said with that interested inflection that asks for more. And what church did you attend?"

"Which do you guess [illegible]"

"Some union mission church," I hazarded.

"Now," he said, "I don't like to run on these branch roads very much. I don't often go to church, and when I do I want to run on the main line, where your run is regular and you go on schedule time, and don't have to wait on connections. I don't like to run on a branch; good enough, but I don't like it."

"Episcopal?" I guessed.

"Limited express," he said; "all palace cars and two dollars extra for a seat: fast time and only stop at the big stations; nice line, but too expensive for a brakeman. All train men in uniform, conductor's punch and lantern silver-plated, and no train boys allowed. Then, the passengers are allowed to talk back at the conductor, and it makes them too free and easy. No, I couldn't stand the palace cars. Rich road, though. Don't often hear of a receiver being appointed for that line. Some mighty nice people travel on it, too."

"Universalist?" I suggested.

"Broad gauge," said the brakeman; "does too much complimentary business. Everybody travels on a pass. Conductor doesn't get a fare once in fifty miles. Stops at all the flag stations and won't run into anything but a union depot. No smoking-car on the train. Train orders are rather vague, though, and the train men don't get along well with the passengers. No, I didn't go to the Universalist, though I know some awfully good men who run on that road."

"Presbyterian?" I asked.

"Narrow gauge, eh!" said the brakeman; "pretty track, straight as a rule; tunnel right through a mountain rather than go around it; spirit level grade; passengers have to show their tickets before they get on the train; mighty strict road, but the cars are a little narrow; have to sit one in a seat and no room in the aisle to dance. Then there's no stop-over tickets allowed—got to go straight through to the station you're ticketed for, or you can't get on at all. When the car's full, no extra coaches; cars built at the shops to hold so many, and nobody else allowed on. But you don't often hear of an accident on that road. It's run right up to the rules."

"Maybe you joined the Free Thinkers?"

"Scrub road," said the brakeman; [illegible] no [illegible] All traffic [illegible] makes his [illegible] Smoke if [illegible]

[illegible] time and [illegible] carry a pound of steam, and don't you forget it; steam-gauge shows a hundred and enough all the time. Lively road; when the conductor shouts 'All aboard!' you can hear him to the next station. Every train-lamp shines like a headlight. Stop-over checks given on all through tickets; passenger can drop off the train as often as he likes, do the station two or three days, and hop on the next revival train that comes thundering along. Good, whole-souled, companionable conductors; aint a road in the country where the passengers feel more at home; no passes; every passenger pays full traffic rates for his ticket. Wesleyan air-brake on all trains, too; pretty safe road, but I didn't ride over it yesterday."

"Maybe you went to the Congregational church?" I said.

"Popular road," said the brakeman; "an old road, too—one of the very oldest in this country; good road-bed and comfortable cars; well-managed road, too; directors don't interfere with division superintendents and train orders; road's mighty popular, but it's pretty independent, too. See! didn't one of the division superintendents down East discontinue one of the oldest stations on the line two or three years ago? But it's a mighty pleasant road to travel on; always has such a splendid class of passengers!"

"Perhaps you tried the Baptist?" I guessed once more.

"Aha!" said the brakeman, "she's a daisy, isn't she? River-road; beautiful curves; sweep around anything to keep close to the river, but it's all steel rail and rock ballast, single track all the way, and not a side track from the round-house to the terminus. Takes a heap of water to run it, though; double tanks at every station, and there isn't an engine in the shop that can pull a pound or run a mile with less than two gauges. But it runs through a lovely country—these river roads always do; river on one side and hills on the other, and it's a steady climb up the grade all the way, till the run ends where the fountain-head of the river begins. Yes, sir, I'll take the river road every time for a lovely trip; sure connections and good time, and no prairie dust blowing in at the windows. And yesterday, when the conductor came around for the tickets with a little basket punch, I didn't ask him to pass me, but I paid my fare like a man—twenty-five cents for an hour's ride and a little concert by the passengers throwed in. I tell you, Pilgrim, you take the river road when you want"—

But just here the long whistle from the engine announced a station, and the brakeman hurried to the door shouting,—

"Zionsville! This train makes no stops between here and Indianapolis!" —[B. J. Burdette

A New Drink.

"Boys, I won't drink with you unless you take what I do," said old Josh Spillit, in reply to an invitation. He was a toper of long standing and abundant capacity, and the boys looked at him in astonishment.

"The idea," one of them replied, "that you should prescribe conditions is laughable. Perhaps you want to force one of your abominable mixtures on us. You are chief of the mixed drinkers and I wont agree to your conditions."

"He wants us to run in on castor oil and brandy," said the Judge who would willingly have taken the castor oil to get the brandy.

"No, I'm square," replied Spillet. "Take my drink and I'm with you."

The boys agreed and every one stood along the bar. Every one turned to Spillet and regarded him with interest.

"Mr. Bartender," said Spillet, "give me a glass of water."

"What! water?" the boys exclaimed.

"Yes, water. It is a new drink to me, I admit, and I expect it is a scarce article. Lemme tell you how I came to take it. Several days ago, as a passel of us went fishing, we took a fine chance of whiskey along and had a heap of fun. 'Long toward evenin' I got powerful drunk, an' crawled under a tree an' went to sleep. The boys drank up all the whiskey and cum back to town. They thought it a good joke 'cause they left me out thar drunk, an' told it aroun' town with a mighty bluster. My son got a hold of the report and took it home. Well, I laid under that tree all night, an' when I woke up in the mornin' thar sot my wife right thar by me. She didn't say a word when I woke up, but she sorter turned away. I got up and looked at her. She still didn't say nothin', but I could see that she was chokin'. Tailor-made bodices [illegible] in request for [illegible]

Newmarket mantles are rather long than short.

Terra cotta color is still popular on the other side.

Blue shades, especially gray blues, are very popular.

White China is again in favor for dinner and tea sets.

Furriers say that sable is revived as a fashionable fur.

Redingotes for winter wear have short shoulder capes.

Grey felt is the rage of the moment for hats and bonnets.

Sometimes a fresh trimming suffices to transform a dress.

Tiny checks are fashionable in both silk and woolen fabrics.

Combinations of stuffs are popular for cloaks and for dresses.

Combination of brocade and shot glace are very fashionable.

Dots, macaroons and stars are popular designs in wool broches.

Bisque figures, unless they are very fine, are excessively vulgar.

The blouse redingote will be the favorite with tall and slender women.

A singular English fancy is to combine ashes of roses with gold color.

Velveteen is the favorite fabric for retrimming old woolen dresses.

Checks and brocaded fabrics are prettily combined with plain stuffs.

Imported hats and bonnets are noticeably larger than last fall.

Dark Russian furs—black fox, hare, otter and sable—will be much worn.

The mania for Jerseys is at its height. So is the mania for Jersey applejack.

Nickle-plated shingle nails for fastening busted suspenders are now in vogue.

Capes or large collars are worn on tight walking jackets by young ladies.

New shoulder capes are cut to produce a full epaulette effect on the shoulders.

Moss green, reseda, sage green, and all shades of dark green are very fashionable.

Hats have high crowns and small brims or else moderate crowns and broad brims.

Ladies spend their change for fine glass ornaments this fall instead of bisque.

Many new hats are high crowned with narrow brims and the trimmings all on one side.

A new fall bonnet makes a smiling face on one side of the house and a long one on the other.

The combination of velvets or velveteens with woolen fabrics grows in favor as the season advances.

Egyptian red is the most lasting of all the æsthetic colors; it will be as popular as ever this winter.

Pigeon hole hats for business men who carry documents around in their head gear are a new invention.

Pointed waists are to be in style for dinners, to be followed by pointed remarks from the envious ones.

Large bonnets are worn to excess on the other side, but American women women will not give up the fanchon.

Velvet epaulettes mounted on stiff muslin and wire appear on many handsome imported dinner costumes.

There is a tendency toward the revival of colored wraps for occasions of high ceremony and for carriage wear.

Wide worsted braids are much used in trimming fall suits. Sometimes a line of gold soutache edges the wide brim, but this is only for house wear.

Parisian hair dressers are becoming enraged at the simplicity now displayed in hair dressing, and are about to introduce complicated fashions, a la rati nest.

It is claimed that the coming season will be a velvet one, as far as fashion is concerned. In some places it will; in others it will be a kind of a blue jeans and coffee sack, corduroy season.

There is a new shade called the biscuit color. It runs all the way from a light cream tint to the coal tar appearance of biscuit when the cook takes a notion to flirt with the milkman.

Dainty blouse bodices, caught in at the waist are worn between the ages of ten and twelve. Dainty blouse bodices worn by girls between the ages of sixteen and eighteen are, also, caught in at the waist between the hours of ten and twelve p. m.

[illegible] as a Lawyer.

[illegible]

[illegible] hath not [illegible] melody which she wrings from the keyboard with a frantic energy that awakens new thoughts in the mind of the weary traveler, who has plodded his way to the hotel, and is trying to sleep in a 7x9 room overhead?

Ah! Methinks we see her now, and hear her, too, as she digs down deeper among the ivories for gay music, and flings the brilliant, glittering particles of chopped melody around the room like a Houdan hen scratching up a radish bed.

Isn't she a daisy.

She is.

And doesn't the young man, so gently bending o'er her, with a pane of glass in his left optic, fairly worship her?

He does.

The dulcet strains of the music remind him of the past—the halcyon days of youth when he worked in a nail factory. She is playing "Somebody's Coming when the Dude drops Fall," and the young man is visibly agitated. So are the hotel guests, huddling together for protection in the other part of the room.

She notes the effect of her talents, and she smiles a cold, bitter, heartless, kiln-dried smile.

Why does the young man look so sick? Is she going to play some more?

She is.

Thus the fair tyrant lacerates his heart,
And thus remorselessly she acts her part,
So, Nero once, with harp in hand, surveyed
His flaming Rome, and as it burned he played.

The tune shifts. The dear, patient creature is now working on the "Dead March in Saul," and the guests, all but the young man, march out of the parlor and go to their rooms and stuff the hotel pillows in their ears. This is not a cruel reflection on their ears. It is a grim sarcasm on the hotel pillows. She knocks Saul out in three rounds, tackles the "Mosquito Waltz," and makes everything hum. The poor youth's collar commences to melt and run down the back of his neck. For a brief moment he toys with the six shooter in his pistol pocket, he finally relinquishes the idea of killing her. If he had a can of lard oil he would pour it all through the works of the machine and modulate the tone.

Suddenly a brilliant idea strikes him. It hits him hard.

Heaven be praised.

As the discordant melody runs down into a minor key, the youth yells something into her ears. The piano is closed with a bang. The maiden is on her feet, her eyes flash, and her cheeks are covered with a rich, warm, expectant glow. She has caught the faint murmur of his accents above the roar and rush and din and rattle of the music.

Has he spoken of love?

He has not.

He has simply said "Ice cream."—[Siftings.

"Turn the rascals out," looks pretty in print, though not quite so much so as the girl in the calico dress. When the light of reduction is turned on it, however, it reads like the ejaculation of a crank. It means that the reformatory measures against rascality should be squelched, the old bribery plan restored, and a new set of rascals set at dancing on the grave of civil service reform. It will not do for a Democratic defeat. The American people are intelligent and have their eyes open.—[Siftings.

The civil service reformers are always busy, but there are no results visible to the naked eye. They remind us of the fellow turning the handle of the peanut roaster. A granger with music in his soul, who had been looking on for half an hour, finally became impatient and bawled out: "Hello! you fellow, why don't you play something?"—[Siftings.

The telephone is in the Sandwich Islands, and as "hello" in the native dialect is "kalakahoikahh oihaukoi" they must have a pretty tough time of it at the central office.

The estimated value of the peanut crop of the United States is $3,000,000. And yet the dress circle aristocracy sneer at its use by the democratic "gods" in the gallery.

Advice is well enough, but too much of it brings it [illegible] into contempt. A little hoss radish am mighty good, but too much of it will make y er sneeze.

Summer's here rather queer,
Weather neither warm nor clear,
But croquet I display,
For the skies will mend some day.

See my fishing tackle case,
Full of flies for killing bass,
Pike or prout or speckled trout
All you can pull out.

Rods and lines, fragrant pines,
Bananas from the tropic climes,
Rockers new, wagons too,
With iron ex. I'll sell to you.

THE DIFFERENT TICKETS.

THE TIMES publishes at the head of its editorial columns this week a complete list the men who are candidates for the suffrages of the people of Oswego County at the election occurring on the 6th day of next month. Thus the voter is enabled to have before him not only the candidates of his own party, but of all other parties, Republican, Democrat, Greenbacker and Prohibitionist are set forth alike. The last two named [illegible] no [illegible]

[illegible] the Republican Convention [illegible] day for the nomination of Member of Assembly. He was supported for the first four ballots by the Volney and Granby delegations.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, proprietor of the New York Herald, and J. W. Mackey, the bonanza millionaire, announce that they are soon to lay two new cables across the ocean and promise the public cheap cable facilities.

TWENTY-SIX of the thirty-eight States now have Democratic Governors, Eleven States have Republican Governors, and Virginia has a Readjuster Governor. Two years ago the Republicans had the Governors in twenty-two States, therefore they have during the time lost control of eleven states.

NEAL DOW, the great Maine temperance oracle, is of the opinion that "The Republican party in this State (Maine) as in Ohio, New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Rhode Island, and other States, occupies the position—openly, confessedly—of protection to the grogshops, and must go."

IN chatting about his summer vacation in the North Woods, Rev. J. B. Shaw, the veteran pastor of Rochester, said to his people the other day: "Now in closing I wish to thank you for the cordial reception tendered me upon my return, and for all your kindness. I think you are deceived in your pastor, but I derive so great pleasure, and am able to work so much better for you that I shall not attempt to change your opinion. One thing is certain, if I am not the best and most faithful pastor in the world I ought to be."

ATTORNEY GENERAL RUSSELL volunteered his opinion that George B. Wright, Democratic candidate for Justice of Sessions, was ineligible. The question was submitted to N. W. Nutting and Cyrus Whitney, and they rendered a verdict that "a careful reading and construction of the statute unavoidably brings the mind to the conclusion that Mr. Wright is perfectly eligible, and that the attorney-general is wrong in his conclusion to the contrary." On the 6th of next month the people of the State of New York will have an opportunity to express their opinion of the eligibility of Attorney-General Russell and it is more than probable that he will be returned to the wilds of St. Lawrence.

IT will be remembered that during the memorable Senatorial contest in Albany in 1881 Assemblymen Bradley of of Cattaraugus county rose in his place in the House and charged that Senator Sessions had attempted to bribe him to vote for Depew and stated that he handed over to the Speaker the money, $2,000 he had received. Before the Legislature adjourned Sessions was indicted by the grand jury of Albany county, but the trial was postponed until about ten days ago, when it commenced in the capital and ended last Thursday with a verdict of "not guilty." This is as it should be. There was never any good reason to suppose that so shrewd a man as Sessions would resort to so thin a disguise to accomplish his end, or that he would offer $2,000 for one man's vote unless it was needed to complete the required number to elect Depew which was not the case.

LAST April the body of Edwin R. Harmon, who had been a wealthy resident of Camillus, was stolen a few days after burial. It was found in the Syracuse medical college on the following day. The Grand Jury indicted Dr. F. Slocum and Ralph Watkins of Camillus and Henry F. Thompson of Syracuse. They were arrested and held to bail. Thompson, whose father is a clergyman, was recently surrendered by his bondsmen and is now in the penitentiary. Carl Hanchell, a student at the medical college at the time of the robbery, was indicted more recently, and has been arrested in Chicago. He has made a statement implicating Slocum, Watkins and Thompson, but denying that he bore any part in the crime, although he admitted that he received the rope with which Harmon's body was hauled out of the grave. The persons implicated are young men of previous good standing.

FOR MEMBER OF ASSEMBLY.

The Republicans held their Assembly convention at Oswego last Thursday and nominated Dewitt C. Littlejohn. [illegible]

[illegible]—[Palladium.

Col. [illegible], a veteran of 1812, died last Wednesday at [illegible] county, aged 91. He participated in all the battles on the northern frontier. He was one of the first Abolitionists in the State, and the first candidate of that party for the Assembly in the southern district of Jefferson county, and was a great friend of Gerrit Smith, and assisted in hiding negroes escaping to Canada.

A Caughdenoy correspondent to the Utica Herald says: "Rev. G. G. Dains, of Hamilton, Madison county, lectured before the Young People's association of this place Wednesday evening. Subject: "Know Thyself." The lecture was one of the finest ever delivered in this place. As a former pastor of this church, he met with a warm reception. Every one was glad to see and welcome him. Long will the name of Rev. G. G. Dains be remembered in this locality."

State Engineer Seymour in a conversation, Wednesday, regarding the condition of the Oswego canal, which, he has just inspected, said: "The examination of the Oswego canal revealed the fact that it was in even better condition than the Erie canal. The whole distance has plenty of water; the tow path is in good condition and boats are running regularly in both directions, although there are not as many as I would like to see at this season of the year. In some places the side walls and docking have become somewhat undermined, although not to such an extent as to interfere with or obstruct navigation, and repairs can only be made after the water is taken out. The assertion that the towpath is rutted in places is not true. The boatmen are doing Mr. Shannahan a great injustice in making the charges they are against him. I have reason to believe that he is doing everything to facilitate navigation and keep the boats' passage unobstructed, and that he will make all needful repairs when the water is drawn off. I don't see any cause for complaint."

A Batavia, N. Y., dispatch to the New York Sun says: "Not a little excitement has been occasioned in this village by the death, in the State Institution for the Blind, of Howard Parsons, a boy 18 years of age, whose home was in Palermo, N. Y. On Thursday morning the boy ran against another pupil about his own age, in one of the halls of the institution receiving the force of the collision on his head. As a result he was thrown into convulsions, with which he suffered all Thursday night and until Friday morning. The attending physician, Dr. D. L. McNamara, prescribed for him. On Friday afternoon, after recovering from the convulsions, the boy complained of sore throat, and the physician was again summoned, and prescribed the usual remedies, but when he visited the patient for the third time, on Saturday morning, he found the boy suffering from diphtheria in its most malignant form. Several out-of-town physicians were summoned in consultation, and at noon yesterday the boy died. The body was buried the same day in the Batavia Cemetery, a permit for its removal to Palermo having been refused. Two other pupils are suffering from the same disease, but in a milder form. Great care is being exercised to prevent its spread in the institution."

What Mrs. Grundy Says:

That in matters of dress Dunkers and dudes are not far apart. The former have recently decided that the men must attire themselves in the broad-brimed hat and closely buttoned coat. They will wear their hair long and parted in the middle. But men of sense will continue to buy the latest styles in clothing ready-made at Kent & Miller's, 18 and 20 South Salina street.

That a baker having inherited a fortune and desiring an appropriate coat of arms was advised by a friend to adopt the design, "a loafer couchant, armed cap a pie." Less ambitious and more sensible men are satisfied with the coats [of arms] made so well and sold so cheaply by Kent & Miller, 18 and 20 South Salina street.

That she has observed that one reason why women cannot succeed so well as man in the walks of life is because when she is on the walks one hand is usually employed in holding up her dress. Another reason is that she does not have Kent & Miller to make her clothes as the men do. The saving thus effected by purchasing ready-made clothing at Kent and Miller's 18 and 20 South Salina street, assures success in any line of business.

South Scriba.

SOUTH SCRIBA, Oct. 17—Daniel Congdon, a life long resident of this place, died last Friday of consumption, aged fifty-six years. The funeral was held from his late residence Monday, Oct. 15, Rev. Ensign of the Scriba M. E. church officiating. Mr. Congdon was a devoted Christian and respected by all who knew him.

SOUTH SCRIBA, Oct. 22.—Master Willie and Miss Frankie Foster are attending school at Fulton.

Bills are posted in this vicinity to the effect that Prof. Boothby of Fulton will lecture at the Mt. Pleasant church Friday for the benefit of the Ladies Aid Society.

About two weeks since Frankie, daughter of Harvey DuBois, dropped a pan of hot water and so scalded her feet that she has been a great sufferer and is not able to stand on them even now.

South Granby.

SOUTH GRANBY, Oct. 22.—A barn belonging to Henry Mount in the town of Lysander was consumed by fire last Saturday evening between 9 or 10 o'clock, with all its contents, including some 200 bushels of wheat. We learn there is no insurance. It is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

The measles is quite prevailent around here. The old as well as young are down with this disease and some are quite sick.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

The total offerings of ten factories were 788 boxes.

AT UTICA.

The cheese market was strong. There was a good demand for fine cheese. Four hundred and seventy boxes sold at 11⅜c.; 5,000 at 11½ cents; 350 at 11⅝; 1,700 at 11¾; 266 at 11⅞; 500 at private terms, and 1,000 boxes were consigned.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The Little Falls market was strong and active, 8,794 boxes of extra factory selling at 11½ and 12 cents. The bulk sold at 11¾ cents. There were 1,096 boxes of farm dairy sold at 11¼ and 12, the bulk going at the latter figure. One hundred and sixty-three packages of butter were sold at 22 and 26 cents the bulk bringing 24 cents.

AT FULTON.

The cheese market was dull at Fulton Monday evening, although the offerings were large. Buyers did not care to pay more than 11c. except for very fine lots, for which 11½c. was offered. The offerings were 2,563 boxes from 23 factories.

The price at a corresponding date last year was 12c.; 1881, 12c.; 1880, 12½c.; 1879, 13c.

The Great American Free Luncher

President Arthur lunched with August Belmont at Newport, R. I. recently.—[Political Exchange.

This is about as important news as we ever hear from the present incumbent of the Presidential chair. He has either just lunched or gone fishing, like a baby or a school boy. Thousands of dollars are weekly expended for wire reports about Arthur's last lunch or string of fish. What does this nation care how many times the President eats between meals or how many suckers he pulls out of a mill pond? Read the history of the United States, and you will find no word of any lunching by Washington, except when he lunched off the British soldiery at the expense of Lord Cornwallis. Jefferson was rather more renowned for statecraft than lunches. The Adamses did not appear to have lunched all through the dull season preceding a political campaign. Abe Lincoln had his hands so full of business that he was satisfied to snatch a cold bite anywhere he could get it without reference to the fact in the newspapers. It was Grant who set the horrible example of lunching to the click of the telegraphic keyboard, and Arthur has lunched his way from Washington to the Yellowstone and back, and is now fishing and lunching up and down the whole Atlantic coast. And the Great American Free Luncher is a candidate for another term! Turn the lunchers out!—[[illegible]

The end of the world is expected by Moslems on Nov. 8, which marks the completion of the thirteenth century of their religion.

A Young Danish Count traveling through India has become so much impressed with the need of religious work that he has become a missionary himself.

Protestant services with the celebration of the Lord's Supper, have been recently held at Friendland in Bohemia, the land of Huss, for the first time in 300 years.

The Roman Catholics of Germany are to pray for a nullification and triumph of the Church on Nov. 10, the day to be observed by the Protestants as the 400th anniversary of Luther's birth.

Two hundred and thirty-one missionaries to China, representing all the missionary boards and societies of this country and Great Britain, have sent a strong petition to the British House of Commons against the opium traffic.

The records of the ten lost tribes of Israel are now about to be searched for in the Hill of Tara, Ireland, a company having been organized in England to search there for the deeds given to the prophet Jeremiah when he bought Palestine.

FREAKS OF LIGHTNING.

At Higginsville, Mo., lightning struck the hen house of J. P. Fulkerson, and of its sixty inmates not a whole hen could afterwards be found.

The poodle of Mrs. Walter Reynolds of Orange Mass., was killed by lightning as it lay in bed with her, while the lady herself was not harmed.

The eighteen-months old child of Mrs. John Tucker of Salem, Ga., was at its mother's breast nursing when lightning killed both mother and child.

An apple tree was perfectly portrayed on the window pane of the house of Col. Armstrong, near Atlanta, Ga., before which it stood when lightning struck it.

Eugene E. Brown of Katonah was cradling oats when lightning killed him. Not a scar was on the body, yet his hat with the rim ripped off was twelve feet away.

The nursing infant of Mrs. Mary Satawhite of Winford, Ga., was taken from her breast and thrown across the room without injury but the mother dropped dead.

Lightning struck directly in front of a team at Pascoad R. I., killing one of the horses while the other turned from a mahogany bay to a jet black.

Thirteen head of yearling cattle were killed by lightning at Oregon, Wis., while standing in the shelter of some trees that were not evenly touched by the fatal bolt.

In Whitefield, Me., Charles Ware, his wife and child, were in bed together Only Mr. Ware was killed, and the others were not injured. A girl in an upper chamber had her hair set on fire, but sustained no other injury.

It was Miss Willis' first day at home from her school at Wilmington, and she was watching a storm from the back porch when a thunderbolt struck her dead. She was the twelve-year-old daughter of of Frank Willis of Queen Anne's, Md.

While a citizen of Rugby, Tenn., was trundling a wheelbarrow loaded with brush, there was a flash of lightning, and when the man returned to consciousness there was nothing to be found of the barrow but the tire of the wheel.

At the house of George Bushby of Fidelity, Ill., lightning drew the nail upon which his coat hung against the wall, and shoved a part of the coat sleeve into the hole where the nail had been, so that the garment did not fall to the floor.

John McFadden, a teamster of Omaha was on a load of lumber when struck by lightning. It burned his hair, whiskers and eyelashes off and marked his breast and stomach with hundreds of small burned spots, tore off one leg of his trousers, and one shoe, and stocking. He was dead when found.

E. G. Hubbard is in Cazenovia engaged in renovating feather beds.

Dr. J. A. Barringer will be at the Lewis house Fulton, again Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Dr. C. J. Bacon and wife of Williamstown are the guests of Mr. Bacon's parents.

Rev. E. C. Bruce is supplying the pulpit of the Furman street Methodist church, Syracuse.

Mrs. F. E. Goodjon has been visiting in Auburn and other places for the past two or three weeks.

A. Bristol and daughter left for New York last evening where they will remain for several days.

Miss Hattie Battume of Lyons has been the guest of her sister Mrs. C. D. Hubbard for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Redhead attended the session of the Central New York Conference for several days last week.

Rev. J. S. Riggs is entertaining his mother, Mrs. Edward Riggs and his aunt Mrs. Gertrude Stephenson, both of New York.

Rev. C. H. Lung, Secretary of the Babtist Publication Society, will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist Church next Sunday morning.

There is no improvement in the condition of W. E. Williams. His physician believes that there is little, if any, chance of his recovery.

Last Friday Oliver Pullen was sentenced by Police Justice Piper to pay a fine of $4 or suffer imprisonment in the Penitentiary for six months.

"What has Christianity Done for the World?" will be the subject of the Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien's discourse at Zion Church next Sunday evening.

Rev. Charles Olmstead of Walton, Delaware Co., preached in Howe's hall to the Congregationalists last Sunday. He will preach again next Sunday.

Rev. Theron Cooper, formerly pastor of the Fulton M. E. church, is the presiding elder of the Auburn district of the Central New York Conference.

A new store on the bazaar plan, called the "Bonanza," will occupy the store No. 3, Stephens Opera House block next week. E. L. C. Beeles is the proprietor.

Sunday, November 11, is the 400th centenary of the birth of Martin Luther. On that evening the Rev. J. S. Riggs will speak upon Luther and the results of the Reformation.

Last Friday Sumner Osgood and wife of Holland Patent were found dead in their bed, having been smothered by coal gas. The deceased gentleman was a brother of C. S. Osgood and their funeral, which occurred yesterday, was attended by Misses Jennie and Libbie Osgood.

A welcome will soon be tendered to the Rev. B. R. Dow by the Baptist church and congregation. The event will probably occur next Wednesday evening at the residence of A. Emerick, but the time and place will be definitely decided upon by the ladies of the church this afternoon.

H. S. Carr[illegible]—I shall vote for the regular nominee, Lansing.

George M. Coop—I shall vote for Lansing.

H. H. Merriam—Lansing is my man.

H. E. Nichols—I shall vote for Lansing.

J. D. Lasher—I shall vote for the regular Republican candidate. I do not so consider Mr. Worts.

N. H. Gilbert—I consider Worts the regular nominee and I shall support him.

H. C. Howe—I shall vote for the Republican nominee, Fred Lansing.

Orin Henderson—I haven't decided.

J. F. Herrick—I shall probably vote for Mr. Lansing.

J. P. Streeter—I shall support Mannister Worts, because he is a good temperance man and I believe him to be the regular Republican candidate.

William Waugh—I haven't decided, you may say, however, that I shall vote the Republican ticket.

H. B. Rorke—I will support the regular nominee of the Republican party, Mannister Worts,

J. S. Palmer—I don't like the way Jefferson county has treated our people and if Mr. Worts stays in the field I shall vote for him.

Bennett Bros.—We shall vote for whoever the Republican county committee decide to be regular.

C. R. Nichols—I have not given sufficient attention to politics this year to know who is the regular nominee of the Republican party.

Jefferson Bailey—Mr. Lansing.

Dr. W. A. Hall—Declined to express any opinion and did not wish to state who he would vote for.

Charles Whitaker, one of the leading oracles of the Greenback party in Fulton was questioned and said that as the Greenbackers did not have a candidate of their own in the field that they would support Worts as he was neither a banker or a lawyer but the laboring man's friend.

For Malicious Prosecution.

A civil suit instituted by Frank W. Titus against Tobias Burden for malicious prosecution was tried in Oswego last week before Judge Churchill and a jury. Burden had sued Titus in justice' court three times for a bill of $6 57 he claimed to be due him for freight, and he had each time withdrawn the suit. After withdrawing it the third time Titus sued Burden in the Supreme Court for malicious prosecution. The suit terminated in a verdict for the plaintiff of a judgement of $52.50, with costs of about $85 to be paid by the defendant. Messrs. G. S. Piper and S. B. Mead were attorneys for the plaintiff.

Haverly's Minstrels.

But little need be said in regard to Haverly's productions in the minstrel line, because he was never known to put a poor troupe upon the boards, and he has managed a great many troupes, sometimes two or three in one season and they are invariably the best in the country. Fultonians have often laughed till their sides ached at the excellent fun produced by his troupes, but always in a Syracuse or out-of-town theatre. To-morrow evening Haverly's Minstrels give an entertainment in the Stephens Opera House and they will be at our very doors. We have witnessed the performance by Haverly's troupes a number of times and were always pleasantly impressed with the absence of all coarse and vulgar jokes.

Labor Troubles at Oswego.

Trouble has arisen at Oswego between the 'Longshoremens' Union and Messrs. Rathbun & Co., lumber dealers. A week ago Rathbun & Co. brought a large number of laborers from Canada. Several foremen were appointed special policemen. Saturday one of the specials was struck by a stone and Sunday night shots were fired and stones thrown at the building in which the Canadians are housed. The Canadians returned the fire, but no one was injured. Monday morning 269 'longshoremen appealed to the Canadians to quit work. The Canadians refused. Subsequently a large number of Canadians left for their homes. Sheriff Huntington called out the militia and W. P. Hillick, W. J. Watson, C. F. Campbell, Eli DeRnaha, and Frank Sears, Fulton members of the Thirty-eighth separate company were obliged to go. It is thought that the difficulty will be amicably adjusted.

Have you been to see Skaden's large assortment of Chamber Sets, it is immense, and so cheap. He is taking the lead as ever. 29w2

Andrew Rich, residing on Second street, lost an eleven year old daughter last week.

Mrs. Marcus Schenck returned Sunday morning from an extended sojourn among friends in southern Ohio.

Marvin Cox and wife of Williamstown, are in town for a few days and are the guests of Mrs. Cox's brother David Case.

Mr. Halpin is now the leader of the choir in the Presbyterian church, Arvin Rice having resigned from that position.

Miss Amanda Easton goes to Philadelphia this week and will be the guest of the family of H. H. Haynes for some time.

Barnum Bassett of Granby Centre, who has exhibited symptoms of insanity, has become so deranged that his friends will soon take him to the insane asylum.

The "Peaks Family," a local dramatic organization gave a very pleasant entertainment in Howe's Hall last Friday evening. A large audience was present and witnessed a performance that would have been creditable to a more pretentious troupe.

Sunday evening at the Baptist church three persons, Gaylord Rice, Mrs. Howe and Miss Jennie Andrews were baptized by the Rev. B. R. Dow. It was the first time Mr. Dow had ever administered this sacred rite and he did so without a flaw to mar the beauty and solemnity of the service.

Last week Mrs. L. E. Worden returned from a four weeks' visit with friends at Medina and on Wednesday, in company with friends started for Holstein Mills Va., where she will make her future home with her son Mr. E. Worden, who is largely interested in manufacturing and other business interests.

The team of D. B. Wright, living on the river road two or three miles north of Fulton, ran away Monday forenoon. They started from Mr. Wright's home and came to Fulton where they crossed the river bridge and were finally stopped in the vicinity of Mrs. Martin Osborne's. A wagon attached to the team was badly wrecked. No one was in the wagon when the team started.

A Big Temperance Conclave in Fulton—Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance.

The annual session of the Grand Division of Sons of Temperance of Western New York was held with Fulton Division in this village, yesterday. On the arrival of the morning trains the delegates began to come and before the session was ended a large number were in attendance. The meeting was called to order by G. P., Rev. Hick, Jersey City, and the usual routine of business was done in a brisk and satisfactory manner. The following were installed as

OFFICERS FOR THE YEAR:

G. W. P.—Rev. M. E. Dunham, D. D., Whitestown.

G. W. A.—C. Holzworth, of Buffalo.

G. W. S.—J. G. Jenkins, of Oswego.

G. W. T.—Wm. Wayman, of Lockport.

G. W. C.—Rev. C. H. Mead, of Hornellsville.

G. W. CON.—Chas. West, of Rome.

G. W. SENT.—Jas. McMichael, of Auburn.

P. G. W. P.—Rev. G. H. Hick, of Jersey City, N. J.

Reports were received from a number of Divisions showing a prosperous and rapid growth of the order both in this and other localities. A friendly and harmonious feeling prevailed throughout the session. The next annual session will be held at Rome on the third Tuesday in October, 1884.

At the M. E. church in the evening a large meeting was addressed by Revs. G. H. Hick, C. H. Mead, and M. E. Dunham, who gave excellent addresses. The choir also gave very fine music and after the meeting a general good time was enjoyed in the Division room.

His Labors Appreciated.

For the past two years the Rev. J. P. Simmons of Fulton has preached regularly during the summer season at Pennelville, occupying the pulpit of the Pennelville church. There is no church organization there, but the Christian people of that vicinity of various denominational leanings feel that they must have preaching service nearer their doors than they would if they were obliged to go to neighboring villages to attend divine worship. Consequently they have united during the past two seasons upon Mr. Simmons, who avers that they have been exceedingly kind to him. As an evidence of their appreciation of his services a pound party for his benefit was held last Friday evening at the residence of R. P. Parker in that village. The house was filled with a large and pleasant company, including a number of friends from Fulton. Mr. Simmons was the beneficiary of a great many "pounds" of valuable and useful articles which would grace the larder of any household and which will cause Mr. Simmons to hold the givers in grateful remembrance for a long time to come. Mr. Simmons will preach at Pennelville next Sunday for the last time this season.

Another Notable Wedding.

At 2.30 this afternoon at the residence of M. A. Stewart, Miss C. Alice Jennison, a niece of Mrs. M. A. Stewart, will be united in marriage to Ward E. Dowd, a young man of high social standing of New Haven, Oswego County. Miss Jennison has resided in Fulton about four years and is well and favorably known in society circles. She is the daughter of an ex-confederate officer of prominence who resides at Mobile. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. J. S. Riggs and the wedding will be a very quiet affair, only relatives having received the cards of invitation. The newly married couple will visit Niagara Falls and other points and will then take up their residence at New Haven. Already a large number of valuable presents have been received.

An Interesting Literary Meeting.

The Fulton Reading Circle met Monday evening at the residence of Mrs. B. J. Dyer. A very interesting paper upon French literature was read by Mrs. I. C. Curtis, while Miss Esterbrook contributed an able original article treating of French history. A poem read by Miss Mary Lawrence and a selection from the Continent, read by Mrs. C. M. Lee, were attentively listened to. The Secretary's reports of the circle have always been one of its most interesting features, and Miss Emerick's report on Monday evening was especially noteworthy. Miss Mary Lawrence was chosen critic of the circle for the ensuing season.

Mrs. Eddie Dixon presented her husband with a ten pound Friday morning.

John Robinson is receiving congratulations. It is a ten-pound boy and arrived Sunday night.

Mrs. Clark Smith, who was attacked with paralysis some time ago, has nearly recovered her usual health.

Miss Frances Earl Bryant, who has been sojourning in Oswego Falls for some time past, has gone to Amsterdam.

It is announced that Miss Lucy Ramsden will be united in marriage to Lieut. Eldridge of the United States Navy in December.

Fred Kenyon, the blind boy, has returned from the Institute of the Blind at Batavia, diphtheria having broken out in that school.

Charles E. Cromley, formerly of Fulton, was a delegate from Niagara county to the recent Republican State convention at Richfield Springs.

Subscriptions were taken for five purposes at the Methodist church Sunday, namely: church extension, freedman's aid, Sunday school union, Bible society and tract society.

F. J. VanValkenburg has sold his restaurant and saloon to Joseph Tasker and Henry Kendall of Syracuse. The latter gentleman will be in charge and will open the place on Saturday.

Last Friday Miss Hattie T. Royce exhibited to her history class at the Union Graded School a punch bowl taken from Burgoyne's tent when he surrendered. The bowl is the property of a member of the class.

Mrs. Richard Butler, whose sudden illness was recorded last week, died Thursday morning. Her remains were removed to Brooklyn and interred in Greenwood cemetery. The deceased lady was about 52 years of age.

George E. Williams, founder of THE FULTON TIMES, and for many years its proprietor, arrived in town last Friday evening from St. Louis, Mo., his present home. He was called hither by the serious illness of his son, W. E. Williams.

The Union Thanksgiving services this year will probably be held in the Presbyterian church. It is the Rev. J. S. Riggs' turn to preach the Thanksgiving sermon, and we are informed by that gentleman that he will probably speak upon some national or State topic.

It was announced last week that the C. L. S. C. would meet this Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. G. H. Salmon, and that the M. E. Literary Society would meet next Wednesday evening at the residence of Dr. G. V. Emens. Instead it has been decided by the mutual agreement of both societies that the latter meet this Wednesday evening and the former next Wednesday evening at the same places as hitherto announced.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

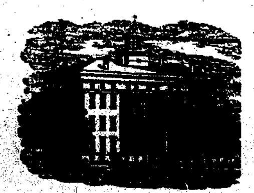
FALLEY SEMINARY.



Fulton,
OSWEGO, CO., N. Y.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English, Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. SCROFULA [illegible] are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

BUTLER, N. Y., Feb. 25, '83.
Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—I wish to express my appreciation of your wonderful remedy for the cure of rheumatism, dyspepsia and general debility. I have been a great sufferer from that terrible disease—rheumatism—for more than a year, and could get no rest or relief day or night for the whole time. Like every body else similarly afflicted, I tried many different remedies, and consulted a number of physicians. But getting only temporary relief from any of these sources, I almost despaired of ever again being restored to my normal condition, and once more free from pain. At this time, hearing so many recommend your Rheumatic Syrup as an infallible cure for rheumatism, and knowing that they had been troubled the same as myself and were now permanently cured by the use of your remedy, I was inspired by their unbounded faith in its healing powers, and resolved to test its efficacy in my own case; and the result of it all is that after taking four bottles my rheumatism had all disappeared, and now, thanks to your Rheumatic Syrup, I feel like a new man, and cheerfully recommend the Rheumatic Syrup to all who are suffering with rheumatism.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

If her skin is fair, and her hair lies in curves and ripples of light brown against the creamy white, she will not put straw color in her hat; if she is ruddy and warm and dark, she will not frame herself in waxen blue or the tender shades of pink."

HALL'S
Vegetable Sicilian
HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

[illegible] and Future Judgment.

[illegible] with my conscience,
[illegible] time had ceased,
[illegible] of my former living
[illegible] the years increased.
[illegible] I should have to answer
[illegible] put to me,
[illegible] answer and question
[illegible] eternity.
The ghosts of forgotten actions
Came floating before my sight,
And the things that I thought were dead things
Were alive with a terrible might.
And the vision of all my past life
Was an awful thing to face,—
Alone with my conscience sitting
In that solemnly silent place.
And I thought of a far-away warning,
Of a sorrow that was to be mine,
In a land that was then the future,
But now is the present time.
And I thought of my former thinking
Of the judgment day to be.
But sitting alone with my conscience
Seemed judgment enough for me.
And wondered if there was a future
To this land beyond the grave;
But no one gave me an answer,
And no one came to save.
Then I felt that the future was present,
And the present would never go by,
For it was but the thought of my past life
Grown into eternity.
Then I woke from my timely dreaming,
And the vision passed away,
And I knew the far-away warning
Was a warning of yesterday,—
And I pray that I may not forget it,
In this land before the grave,
That I may not cry in the future,
And no one come to save.
And so I have learn'd a lesson
Which I had ought have learned before,
And which, though I learned it dreaming
I hope to forget no more.
So I sit alone with my conscience
In the place where the years increase,
And I try to remember the future
In the land where time will cease.
And I know of the future judgment,
How dreadful soe'er it be,
That to sit alone with my conscience
Will be judgment enough for me.

TWO HEARTS SO TRUE.

"Little Blossom, you make it so hard for me to say good-bye to you?"

"When?"

The innocent, surprised, inquiring face—renunciating was indeed difficult for John Burrows. He touched a dimple in her cheek, and then a curl of her hair, as he might have touched flowers on a grave, perhaps. She shook back the silly wrinkles impatiently. "When, John?"

"Nelly, sit down here for a moment. Nelly, you know I love you."

"Yes," with a blush, for he had never said it before.

"And I am very sorry."

"Why?" after a pause of bewilderment.

"Because you are a delicate little flower, needing care and nursing to keep your bloom bright and I am going to a hard, rough life, among privation, fever and malaria, which will try even my powerful constitution, and where you must not go."

"You are going to the far west?"

"Yes. My mother must have a home in her old age. She is strong now, but time is telling on her. You know all that she has been to me?"

"Yes, she has been a good mother. But you shall take me too, John?"

She won her way into his arms against his will. "You will take me, too?"

"No. Did I not tell you that you made it so hard for me to say good-bye to you?"

"John, what could I do without you?"

"Don't make me weak, Nelly. Do you think that it is nothing to me to leave my little violet—the only woman I ever loved—for a hard, cold life and unceasing toil?" I cannot marry for ten years yet, Nelly."

"And then I shall be thirty years old."

"Yes, married and with little children, seeing at last that your old lover, John Burrows, was right."

He rose to his feet.

"John!" in terror.

"Yes, I am going, Nelly. Little one—you look so much like a woman now, with your steadfast eyes—hear me. I did not foresee that you would love me—that I should love you. I came here to see Gregory, not you. I could not help loving you; but did not think until to-night you cared so much for me, Nelly. But, child, you will forget me."

He went on: "Nelly, I shall hunger for you day and night, more and more, as time goes on and I get older, lonelier, more weary. But I shall never hope to see you again. Now give me your hand."

She gave him both. He raised them to his lips, but before she could speak again he was gone. Shivering violently, she went to the fire and stood there trying to warm herself. She understood it all now—his strangely elaborate arrangements for a trip to New York.

It was getting late—she was so cold—she had better go to bed. She would not go into the parlor to bid her father and aunt and Gregory good night; so she went slowly up to her own room. When she got there grief sprang upon her like a hidden monster who had [illegible] all night. Her misery [illegible] her. Why should she not [illegible]? Should she ever rise from [illegible]

[illegible] she sprang [illegible] and went down [illegible]

[illegible] over her face, when Miss Golding came back, bringing a box of old mahogany, black and glossy with time.

"There"—setting it on the bed.

With a wintry little smile of thanks she lifted the cover. The old mahogany box contained strange things. Last was a tiny octagon portrait of an old man, done in chalk upon a kind of vellum and inclosed in a frame of tarnished brass.

"Who is this that is so ugly, Aunt Mary?"

"That, that is my great grandfather Nelly."

"He is uncommonly ugly, isn't he?" said Nelly, wearily.

As she spoke the little case fell apart in her hands. A yellow, folded paper was revealed. She opened it and saw that it was written upon.

"Why, bless my soul, what have you there?" exclaimed Miss Golding, rising up in a strange alarm. She snatched it from Nelly's hand. "It can't be the will!" she cried.

Nelly looked on in dumb surprise. Aunt Mary read a few words, and then rushed away in wild agitation to the library where her father was sitting. By and by they waited upon her in a body.

"Nelly," said her father, sitting down upon the foot of the bed, you are an heiress."

"This is old Grandfather Golding's will!" exclaimed Aunt Mary, flourishing the bit of paper.

"It seems to me he was very eccentric," Gregory condescended to explain. "He was very rich and had some hard sons and some grandsons who promised to be harder, and he fell out with the whole set, who were waiting for him to die. He declared that no money of his should encourage the young people's excesses; a little poverty would help the family, and the fourth generation would appreciate his money and probably make good use of it."

"When he died no will could be found, and though there was a famous struggle for the property it went into the hands of trustees, through the oath of the lawyer who drew up the will, and there it has been, descending from one person to another, and accumulating in value until you and I, Nellie, are as rich as Crœsus. Hurrah for grandfather Golding!"

"Is this true, father?"

"Yes, my dear. The property is chiefly in Leeds, England. It is in safe hands, and our claim is indisputable."

Nelly buried her face in the pillows and murmured under her breath; "Oh, John! Oh, dear, dear John!" Three months proved that Nelly Golding was the mistress of gold untold, almost. And then a little note went to Kansas, saying:

Dear John:—I am waiting for you with a fortune. Will you come for me now?

Nelly.

And he came instantly; and though some might have sneered at his readiness, the heart of the wife was always at peace.

She knew that John Burrows loved her truly. Grandfather Golding's money built up a commodious western town, and Nelly finally lived "out west."

Senator Cullom of Illinois warns young men to keep out of politics. He having suffered the pangs of being elected to Congress, to the Governorship of the State, and the United States Senate, visible illustrates the anxiety of these old gray headed, political humorists to keep competition off the track. It is a cold day when a young political war steeds get the start of one of trick horses of the governmental circus.—[Siftings.

The New York Herald profoundly announces in its personal columns that Lord Coleridge passed the day quietly. The inference is that Lord Coloridge is in the habit of passing most of his days in a wild, hilarious jamboree, smashing up the furniture, tearing things up by the roots and scattering them over the broad British possessions—upon which the sun never sets.—[Siftings.

The Galveston News says that "every town in Texas having a newspaper is the best cotton market in the State." That all right. He is an ungrateful editor who will not lie about his own town. That's just what the citezens keep him there for.—[Siftings.

The New Orleans Picayune says: "The man who cannot change his mind makes no progress. He doesn't? You just look at a tramp going over a garden wall as advance agent of a bull dog. He doesn't change his mind. His mind changes him.—[Siftings.

Ah, lovely girl,

An angle to adore;
Its golden strands
Fall o'er her hands—
She bought it in a store.

RELIGIOUS READING.

Sincerity is the way to Heaven. To think how to be sincere is the way of man.—[Mencius.

Purity, sincerity, obedience and self surrender are the marble steps that lead to the spiritual temple.—[Bradford.

Infidelity reproves nothing that is bad. It only ridicules and denounces all that is good. It tears down—it never constructs; it destroys—it never imparts life; it attacks religion but offers no adequate substitute.—[J. R. Paxton.

The New York Observer records a case of conversion of a Columbus (O.) man at the Fulton street prayer meeting. If so, Cincinnatians ought not to be without hope. Address Fulton street Prayer meeting, No. 113 Fulton street, New York.

Sometimes "the heaviest wheat of all" may spring up from seeds dropped in an incidental way. What a motive to the maintenences of a personal holiness! The incidental is a shadow of the intentional. Influence is the exhalation of character.

Pope Leo XIII, with a view of having a little correct history written by some body, has decreed that the inestimable and jealously guarded library of the Vatican shall be thrown open to scholars of all sects and nations, subject only to such restrictions as prevails in all valuable libraries.

This prayer was found in the late Dr. Bethune's Bible at the time of his death: "Lord, pardon what I have been, sanctify what I am, and order what I shall be, that Thine may be the glory and mine the eternal salvation." These words, from one of the ancient sermons," Dr. Bethune wrote underneath, "are proper for any believing sinner, in life or in death."

The true conception of preaching is that it is the unfoldment of God's thought. It is exegesis, getting out of God's thought; eisegesis, putting in man's wish. The man who goes to the ends of the earth for his topics is a sad commentary of a Scripture, which says that the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth. Such a man is to be profoundly pitied.—[R. S. MacArthur.

The statistics of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, Northern, show 600,695 communicants, and 5,858 churches; contributions for foreign missions over half a million dollars, and $500,000 for home missions. The curious fact is that the foreign missions report an increase in numbers, especially in China, while at home the number, or rather the ratio of increase is diminished.

The Methodist church of Canada, numbering 582,998, the Methodist Episcopal, 103,272, the Bible Christian, 27,236, and the Primitive Methodist, 25,680, have united, making a total of of 739,151. The Presbyterians number 629,280, and the Church of England 574,818. As a curious coincidence, the union of the Methodists occurred at Belleville, where the First Methodist Church in Canada was built on the day John Wesley died.

The stoutest timber stands on Norwegian rocks, where tempests rage, and long, hard winters reign. The muscles are seen most fully developed in the brawny arm that plies the blacksmith's hammer. Even so, the most vigorous and healthy piety is that which has difficulties to battle with, which has its hands full of good works, which has neither time nor room for evil, but, aiming for great things both for God and man, promptly and summarily dismiss temptation with Nehemiah's answer, "I have a great work to do, therefore I cannot come down."—[Exchange.

So your husband is a critic? Now tell me does he always say what he thinks about a play?" "Oh, dear, no! It wouldn't do. His paper goes into the best families, and profanity is out of the question."—[Boston Transcript.

FASHION NOTES.

Imported Jerseys have [illegible].

Fur-top boots are stylish for little girls and boys.

Polonaises are cut very long, both at the back and front.

Forget-me-nots are the favorite flowers for corsage bouquets.

Cat-tail chenille fringe is used for trimming dresses, bonnets and wraps.

Seal sacques are made to fit the figure closely.

A new lace pin is in the form of a small green worm.

Veils of plain Brussels net are more fashionable than the dotted ones.

Four buttoned kid gloves, heavily stitched on the back, are worn again.

The Brighton is the name of the new short jacket designed for young ladies.

Friz nets and nets for the back of the hair are studded with iridescent beads.

Highland kilts for small boys are made in velvet and plush as well as plaids.

Dog collars of solid silver, of various patterns, are again the height of fashion.

Flat, crossway folds hanging like tucks on the skirt is one of the novelties from abroad.

The favorite hair-pins are gem studded daggers or ornaments showing devices of heraldry.

Chenille capes for evening wear, reach to the waist and are to be seen in all the new shades.

Pigeon gray, sapphire blue, and all colors of red are the favorite colors for children's dresses.

White and cream-colored Jerseys, braided with gold or silver braid, are worn with evening costumes.

Velvet is much used as a trimming for wool dresses, and may be of the same shade as the dress material or contrasting color.

Jeweled headed pins, with very long points, are called Jersey pins, and are used in place of brooches or lace pins to fasten the collar and lace jabots.

Half sashes are made of wide velvet ribbon or of narrow satin ribbon of two shades, sewed in the seams on the side of the corsage and tied in a point in front.

Bangs are not as fashionable as formerly. Fluffy curls on the forehead are more worn. The Grecian knot is gradually ascending and the bang retroceding.

Fine broadcloths, with closely woven surfaces, London cloths in herring-bone patterns, and irregular twilled cloths are used for the popular tailor-made costumes.

Dark velvet bodices are worn with skirts of all possible materials and colors. The addition of lace trimmings to these corsages considerably lightens their effect.

The fur cape now has a lighter substitute in the shape of plush. made in all colors to match the costume. It has the military collar, and in a few cases the high-shouldered arm-pieces.

White brocaded satins for wedding dresses show new designs of lilac blossoms, pond lillies, and tinted stems, humming-birds, fern fronds, primroses and sheaves in white silk. Some of the most expensive patterns are outlined with cut crystals and pearl beads.

Evening gloves are shown in dressed and undressed kid, in long mousquetaire style, to reach to the edge of the elbow sleeves, or far above the elbow where no sleeve is worn. Pale maize and straw tints, with light pink and delicate lavender and pearl gray shades, are also chosen for evening wear.

In a tornado in Mississippi, a turtle weighing sixty pounds was blown out of Pearl River, and landed in a distant cotton field.

While a marriage ceremony was being performed in a house in Bryan, Texas, thieves stole the wedding feast from the dining room.

LITTLEJOHN'S BAD MEMORY.

At the Republican meeting at Nichols hall Monday evening D. C. Littlejohn declared emphatically several times that he was nominated for Congress while he was Colonel of the 110th Regiment without his seeking, knowledge or consent.

It is not probable that Littlejohn would have dared to have made such a statement if A. C. Mattoon of Oswego had been present at the meeting.

The Oswego Palladium is our authority for a colloquy which occurred at the First District Republican convention between Messrs. Littlejohn and Mattoon. Mr. Littlejohn asserted that he was elected a member of Congress without having sought it."

A Connecticut manufacturing [illegible] will employ no man addicted to the use of liquor.

L. E. Myers, the athlete, ran a mile at New York recently in [illegible] minutes and 31 4-5 seconds, beating all records.

Charles W. Avery has made an able and competent County Judge and there is no good reason why he should be retired.

A St. Louis Judge has decided that poker is a game of chance and comes within the law making gambling a felony.

The President and governor have issued the usual Thanksgiving proclamations, appointing Thursday, November 29, as the day to be observed.

Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and and Virginia hold elections next Tuesday.

John B. Edwards of Oswego has refused to accept the nomination for County Judge which was tendered to him by the Prohibition County convention.

There is every reason to believe that Frank David, if elected, will make an excellent Surrogate. He should receive the solid support of southern Oswego county.

Judge Kelley, who has just returned from Europe, says that the condition of the laboring classes in England is wretched and he further avers that he is a stronger protectionist than ever.

At the recent session of the conference of the Wesleyan Methodists in Syracuse it was decided that no minister should be ordained in that denomination who is addicted to the use of tobacco.

The Evangelical alliance of the United States has issued a call asking all the people of the country to join in celebrating the 400th anniversary of Martin Luther's birthday, on Saturday, November 10.

D. C. Littlejohn sought the Republican nomination for Member of Assembly while the Democratic nomination for the same office sought F. M. Baker. It is an old political axiom that the office should seek the man and not the man the office.

The "bald eagle of Westchester," James Husted, has been nominated for member of Assembly again. It remains to be seen whether the electors of Westchester feel any more kindly toward him than did the people of the State at large when he ran for State Treasurer two years ago and was completely buried out of sight.

The union printers employed in the book and weekly newspaper offices of New York struck last week for a scale of prices which had been adopted by Typographical Union No. 6. With very few exceptions the offices promptly acceded to the demands of the men and but few were forced to seek other positions. No man is permitted to accept less than $18 as weekly wages.

The question of whether contract labor shall be continued in our State prisons will be voted upon next Tuesday. No friend of the laboring man should vote to continue the present system which puts the labor of honest tradesmen in competition with that of the convict. Even though it cost the State a little more to provide prisoners with suitable employment it cannot afford to jeopardise the interests of the laboring classes.

John C. Wells of Granby often gives his Republican friends some good advice. He was present at the recent Republican conference at Oswego and certain Republicans in this vicinity are not a little amused at some of the plain language he used in reference to Mr. Littlejohn's candidacy. Said he, according to the Syracuse Sunday Herald: "Mr. Littlejohn will get some votes in our town, for (addressing Mr. L.) you never built a railroad there but your principal loss will result from your war record, and in Hannibal you will suffer from the same cause; so; would advise you to keep at work."

A conference of the Republicans of this Senatorial District was held at Sandy Creek last week and after concessions by both factions had been made, Mannister Worts withdrew in favor of Frederick Lansing. While this action does not render Mr. Lansing's election sure it places him in a position where he may receive his full party strength. At the conference an understanding was reached that hereafter Oswego county should have eighteen delegates in the Senatorial convention while Jefferson county is to have sixteen. It is rather late in the day to make this all-important change, as the state will probably be reapportioned after one more Senatorial election and it is possible that Oswego and Jefferson may not then form parts of the same district.

First-class journals devoting their entire attention to special topics are scarce and this is particularly the case in the line of temperance reform. But a journal has come to our table, [illegible]

The matter of establishing a G. A. R post in this vicinity has been under consideration for some time, and the requisite number of names has been secured and the charter sent for. About two weeks ago Charles Allen and Ella Vincent eloped from Clyde. They were overtaken in Utica where Allen was arrested for abduction, the girl being under age. On being taken to Clyde, Allen admitted that he had a wife in Boston. Miss Vincent's father confented to withdraw the warrant if Allen would leave town and never return. To this he agreed, and quitted the place immediately. Miss Vincent is missing again, and it is ascertained that she met Allen in Waterloo, and is supposed to have gone with him.

Edward C. Chapin, general agent of the Oswego Starch Company, died in Auburn on Friday. He left his office at 146 Duane street, New York, on Tuesday morning of last week in the best of health, to go to Auburn to meet the directors of the company. At Syracuse he was seized with an apoplectic fit, from which he never recovered. Mr. Chapin was born in Hartford, Conn., and was about 70 years old. All his life a merchant, He had been connected with the Oswego Starch Company twenty-one years.

THE MARKETS.

CHEESE.

There was not a very large attendance at the meeting of the Syracuse Dairymen's Board of Trade Monday afternoon, owing to the dullness of the cheese market in New York. The offerings were therefore light. The bulk was sold at the ruling prices in Utica.

On the Utica market Monday, factorymen did not think of holding because the price was a little lower. There was not a full representation present, but it could not be learned that any one refused to sell. Cheese is getting to be fairly cleaned up in that part of the country, the sales of Monday taking off a week of October make, and in some instances ten or twelve days. As the season draws near its close there is always more or less indifference manifested, salesmen being anxious to close out the late made cheese and shut up for the season. Sales for the day comprised 6 lots, 700 boxes, at 11c.; 4 lots, 450 boxes, at 11⅛c; 37 lots, 3,913 boxes, at 11¼c.; 2 lots, 300 boxes. at 11⅜c.: 15 lots. 1,316 boxes, at 11½c.; 5 lots, partly small cheese, 639 boxes, at 11⅝c.; and 100 boxes p. t. Sales, 7,118 boxes; commissions, 1,207; total, 8,325 boxes. Ruling price 11¼c.

The Little Falls market declined about one quarter of a cent, on the average, the bulk last Monday going at 11¾c. and Monday at 11½c. Early in the day it was generally supposed that 11½c. would be the top price, but near the close sales began to be known at 11¾c. and at the last the number at this price footed up quite a large amount.

Lots	Boxes	Price
6	523	11¼
43	4124	11¼
3	320	11⅝
25	21,458	11½
1	125	p. t.
6	362	Com.
84	7,917
Farm Dairy	644
Total	8,561

At Fulton Monday night twenty-three factories offered 2,115 boxes on this market, and buyers offered 11¼c., but factorymen would not accept this price, and but little cheese was sold.

BUTTER.

There were 96 packages of butter sold at Little Falls at 22 and 25c., most at the latter price, one creamery lot refused 26c.

HOPS.

Probably a thousand bales have been bought by Utica dealers during the last week, many of them inferior in quality, but some of them the very best. Prices have ranged from 13c. to 25c. Choice hops have brought 24 and 25c., and the others have graded all the way down, real red ones selling at 13c. to 15c.

TOBACCO.

For fifty years they have been used by the American public, and their constantly increasing sales show how they are appreciated.

A Perfect Remedy in 20 Diseases.

[illegible]

[illegible] called upon the [illegible] of Vice Presidents, while [illegible] and D. D. Metcalf were the secretaries. Messrs. Getty and Cole made addresses each occupying about a half hour and both were entirely devoid of interest. Mr. Littlejohn then took the platform and succeeded in partially awakening the audience from the lethargy into which it had fallen. His entire address, however, was little else than a defense of his record and a glorification of his career, both public and private. He spoke of his work in the Legislature in securing the enlargment of the Oswego canal and told of his efforts to benefit the people in the building of the Midland railroad. Then he spoke of his war record and denied ever having been cognizant of his nomination for Congress while he was acting as Colonel of the 110th Regiment. But little enthusiasm was manifested at any time during the meeting.

Oswego Falls Literary Society.

The West Side Reading Union met last evening at the residence of Mrs. Amos Langdon of lower Oswego Falls to reorganize and to elect officers for the coming season.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. W. J. Graham. The following persons were elected for the ensuing year: President—C. B. Bradt, Vice-president—O. J. Jennings.

Then followed a discussion on the propriety of taking up the Chautauqua course, which was left to be argued at the next meeting. A selection was read by Mrs. Amos Langdon followed by an instrumental solo by Gussie Wood.

The meeting was adjourned to meet at the residence of Mrs. Burns Case next Monday evening, Nov. 5th.

Malicious Mischief.

For the past few weeks the people of lower Oswego Falls have been greatly annoyed by a gang of boys who have been prowling about the different streets with tin horns, pans, kettles, &c., for the purpose of disturbing the peace and quiet of the neighborhood.

A great many of the boys who belong to the gang are known and if this annoyance is not stopped immediately the people will take the matter in hand and they will be severely dealt with. Some of the boys belong to good and respectable families and it is supposed that they would have more respect for themselves and their neighbors than to engage in such a ridiculous amusement as they term it.

OUT OF TOWN.

Parish.

Parish, Oct. 25.—Farmers have nearly finished digging potatoes. In general it is a poor crop.

The Colosse Baptist church edifice will be re-dedicated the 7th day of November next. A sermon will be preached on the occasion by Rev. D. McFarland of Hannibal, one of its former pastors. It was first dedicated in 1827. It is the oldest church edifice in Oswego county. During the meeting which will be held more than one day, a history of the church will be given. The first organization was in 1807.

Politics are quiet here, once in a while an office seeker passes through the town. The proposition in regard to convict labor in our prisons will be voted down. We are opposed to contract labor in our prisons. We think the following persons will get majorities in our town: C. W. Avery, for County Judge, Frank David, for Surrogate, and James A. Clark for Senator.

South Scriba.

South Scriba, Oct. 30.—Last Wednesday night Dr. Phelps sent Charles Johnson to Capt. Sweet's on an errand on horseback. As he did not return as soon as expected fears were entertained that something had happened to him and a search was instituted. The horse was found in the yard at home, and Johnson was found about half way up the hill west of Capt. Sweet's lying unconscious by the roadside. He was taken to the doctor's house and upon an examination of his injuries it was found that he was badly bruised about the head and shoulders. He was unconscious all night, but is improving and will probably recover.

James L. Parker of Fulton spent Sunday with friends here.

The corn crop is a total failure in this vicinity.

On Thirty Days' Trial.

The Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltanic Belts and Electric Appliance on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and make manly vigor. Address as above—N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed. 35y1

A MUCH MARRIED WOMAN

Mrs. Fowler, of this city, was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem, five of them died exactly two years from their marriage day. Her present husband has been sick for the last four months with chronic jaundice and was given up by four of our best physicians; and at last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had saved his life, smilingly saying that he guesfed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a second better half for some time to come.—Exchange. 24t2

Strength to vigorously push a business, strength to study for a profession, strength to regulate a household, strength to do a day's labor without physical pain. Do you desire strength? If you are broken down, have no energy, feel as if life was hardly worth living, you can be relieved and restored to robust health and strength by taking Brown's Iron Bitters, a sure cure for dyspepsia, malaria, weakness and all diseases requiring a true, reliable, non-alcoholic tonic. It acts on the blood, nerves and muscles and regulates every part of the system.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

Messrs. J. C. Ayer & Co., Gentlemen: Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good. Yours respectfully, Z. P. Wilds."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

Rev. C. H. [illegible] who [illegible] of the [illegible] of the Sons of Temperance [illegible] remained in town over Sunday, and Sunday morning occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church.

In the evening a union temperance meeting was held in the Presbyterian church, the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist congregations uniting in the service. Six ministers, Revs. J. S. Riggs, W. F. Markham, B. R. Dow, C. H. Lang and Charles Olmstead, participated in the services, the address of the evening being delivered by Rev. Hick, who presented the claims of the American Temperance Society. He thought that the present great need in the direction of temperance reform was the further enlightenment of the people upon the subject and to accomplish this result he said he believed that the American Temperance Society was doing a great work and especially was this true in the south among the colored people where the society was sending missionaries and was distributing their literature broadcast. The speaker was earnest and vigorous in style and kept the undivided attention of a large audience throughout his discourse. Music was furnished by the united Methodist and Presbyterian choirs.

Waiting to Hear the Cuckoo Call.

An accident which might have been serious in its results, but which can only be considered as a first-class joke, happened at 1 o'clock Monday in front of J. C. Highriter's store, on Oneida street. W. R. Hamilton occupies one part of the store with his watch and clock repairing shop. On the west wall near the front window is a large "cuckoo" clock and a crowd composed of men and boys, had collected on the platform in front of the store to witness the hourly pilgrimage of the "Cuckoo" from the inside of the clock to announce the "time o' day." It was about a half a minute before 1 o'clock and the motly group was breathlessly waiting the appearance of the unique little visitor when with a snap and a crash the rotten supports of the platform gave way and men and boys to the number of a score or more, together with the timbers were precipitated to the cellar beneath in a miscellaneous heap. Nobody was hurt, but the "Cuckoo" made his appearance just as the spectators had made their debut in the cellar. One by one they scrambled out and slunk sheepishly onward to their various occupations.

A Runaway Boy.

Joe Levi, aged 19, has disappeared from his home on Riverside avenue, Oswego Falls. He was employed in D. E. Mason's mill and received 75 cents per day. On Saturday he put on four or five shirts, two pair of pants and considerable other clothing. This was noted by one of his sisters who suggested to his mother that he was probably making preparations to run away, but she thought not and gave him $3 in money to pay a bill. She has not seen him since he left home Saturday afternoon. Monday she learned that a ticket was sold him for Central Square at the New York Ontario and Western depot in this village. She thinks he has gone to Sandy Creek, and will take measures to induce him to return. Before going Levi drew two weeks' pay which was due him. This is the second time he has run away. He certainly adopted a very novel way of carrying his baggage.

Mrs. Livermore's Lecture.

The course of lectures and entertainments for the coming season will be opened by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore at the Opera House Tuesday evening, December 4. Two subjects have been suggested by Mrs. Livermore for that evening namely: "What Shall We Do With Our Daughters?" and "Has the Night of Death No Morning?" Any preference which ticket holders may indicate within the next two weeks will be regarded in making a selection of the subject. Mrs. Livermore writes that while the former is more favorably received by the average audience, the latter is a discourse upon which she has spent more time and thought and which she considers decidedly superior to the first named.

Fulton Reading Circle.

The Fulton reading circle met at the residence of Mrs. L. E. Loomis on Monday evening and after a spicy and interesting Secretary's report by Miss Ellen Emerick, Miss Mary Loomis presented a carefully prepared paper upon French literature, her subject being "Jean Marot, Clement Marot, Bonaventure Desperriers and Margarite, Queen of Navarre." Mrs. D. W. Gardner presented the historical paper, her subject being "Blanche of Castile and Louis the Ninth, or St. Louis," an able and scholarly sketch, which gave evidence of deep historical research by its author. Miss Ellen Emerick read a selection in a very pleasing style. The circle will meet again next Monday evening at the residence of Mrs. L. E. Loomis and a paper upon French literature will be presented by C. S. Eggleston.

Two Entertainments This Week.

On Friday and Saturday evenings of this week the Seymour Stratton Theatre Company will occupy the boards at the Stephens Opera House, on Friday evening presenting the world-renowned drama "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and [illegible]

All the goods at the Bonanza are new.

Several Halloween parties in Fulton and Oswego Falls are announced for this evening.

The C. L. S. C. meets this evening at the residence of Mrs. G. H. Salmon. All honorary members are invited to attend.

"The Resurrection" will be the subject of Rev. B. R. Dow's discourse next Sunday evening.

Walter J. Mosher's confectionary and cigar store in Oswego Falls, which was closed by the Sheriff last week, was sold out Monday.

The Board of Trustees of Oswego Falls met Monday evening. With the exception of the auditing of bills no business of importance was transacted.

M. N. Clark, proprietor of the Cornell House, will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of his married life next Wednesday evening, November 7, when he will entertain about 75 invited guests.

The Fulton Lawn Tennis Club will celebrate Halloween this evening at the residence of O. J. Jennings in Granby and will be entertained by Mr. Jennings' amiable daughter, Miss Carrie Jennings.

We consider Hill's Manual an interesting and useful work adopted to the interests of all and should occupy a place in every family. Fulton is being canvassed for the work.

The Congregational church at Oswego Falls has entered upon negotiations with Daniel F. Beatty looking toward the purchase of a new organ.

It is probable that it will be some time before the electric lights can be adjusted in the new Congregational church at Oswego Falls, owing to the backwardness of New York parties to fill the order for the apparatus.

The rooms of Hiram Masonic Lodge in the Townsend block have been thoroughly renovated, varnished and decorated, all of which has added greatly to their appearance. The work of the order will be resumed on the first regular nights of meeting.

F. E. Bacon, the dry goods man, will branch out into new territory the coming spring by absorbing the corner now occupied by M. V. Connell as a boot and shoe store. Mr. Connell will go across the street into the store now occupied by Messrs. Rosenbloom as a cutting establishment.

The lawn tennis grounds at the south end of the park are undergoing improvements. The sod has all been taken up, the ground is to be leveled and the sod relaid in readiness for another season. Room will be made for two courts instead of one as at present. The expense of the improvements is being borne by the Lawn Tennis Club.

William Pruner, Murtaugh Murphy, Walter Foster, Ed. Hardy, and James McDonald were brought before Justice Piper Monday morning charged with creating a disturbance on the "Flats" last Friday night. They pleaded guilty and Hardy and McDonald were fined $5 each while the other three were fined $10 each.

Police Justice Piper desires us to state that any destruction of property this evening, resulting from the hilarious celebration of Halloween will be visited with sure and stern justice upon the offenders, if caught. The police have been instructed to be on the lookout, but no one will be interfered with as long as they keep within the bounds of propriety.

The L. U. B. W. is the name of a new literary society which has just been organized in Oswego Falls. Its officers are as follows: President—William Taylor; Vice-President—Mrs. E. F. Marsh; Secretary—Miss Allie VanCamp; Recording Secretary—Miss Della Batchelor; Treasurer—Miss Anna Howe. The society will hold a dairy maid's festival in Howe's hall one week from next Friday night.

ZION CHURCH.

BRANCHING OUT INTO NEW FIELDS OF LABOR.

A New Mission to be Known as St. Paul's to be Established in Oswego Falls—Other Church News.

At a recent meeting of the Vestry of Zion church, it was unanimously resolved to establish a mission at Oswego Falls to be called St. Paul's Mission. This mission is under the auspices of the Vestry of Zion church and forms a part of Zion parish. At the last meeting of the Vestry a communication was read from the Thespian society donating the proceeds of its former entertainments, $80, to the new mission. Geo. Johnston has donated the use of the upper story of his new brick block at Oswego Falls for the use of the mission and services will begin as soon as the building is completed which will be very soon. St. Paul's mission will thus start off under the most favorable conditions and will soon form a numerous and strong portion of Zion church parish. The vestry are under obligations to those who have so generously aided it in its new work. The services for the present will consist of a Sunday School at 3 p. m. A new organ and a library will be purchased at once.

Twenty-Fourth Sunday after Trinity.

Services at Zion church as follows, viz: Litany Service and Holy Communion at 10:30 a. m. with short sermon; Children's church at 3 p. m. with Baptismal service and an address by the Rector; evening prayer at 7:30 p. m. with sermon, subject: "The Perfect Gift." Free seats in the afternoon and evening.

All Saints Day.

Thursday, November 1st being All Saints Day, services will be held at Zion church as follows, viz: at 10:30 a. m. communion services and at 7:30 p. m. evening prayer with sermon by the rector Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien.

Rice—Chesebro.

A wedding occurred at the residence of F. M. Baker in Oswego last evening in which Fulton parties were the principal actors. Rev. J. S. Riggs performed the ceremony and Fred Rice, the Fulton agent of the D. L. & W. railroad was the groom and Miss Louise Chesebro, a highly esteemed young lady of this village, was the bride. The wedding was a very quiet affair only the near relatives of the participants being invited. Mr. Rice has been the agent of the D. L. & W. railroad at this place since April 26, 1881, and has been in the employ of the company for nearly seven years. Miss Chesebro was a member of the family of F. M. Baker when that gentleman resided in this village and since his removal to Oswego she has lived in the family of R. P. Hall. For the present the newly married couple will board with Mrs. Abial Loomis.

A Close Call.

Last Saturday night at about half-past nine o'clock a boy returning home from down town found a lad of about fifteen years of age helplessly drunk and lying across the N. Y. & W. railroad track, his head on the rail for a pillow. The boy dragged him to the sidewalk and five minutes later the train from the south passed. Soon after some Englishmen who knew the boy happened along and assisted him to his home.

"Hill's Manual is one of the most beautiful and useful books ever published. It is a book for everybody, man, woman and child. No one can fail to find much in it that is both entertaining and instructive, and can be applied to practical use. It is an eminently useful book for public or private libraries, and a most valuable book for study and reference by every man in every possible business. No book on this continent was ever gotten up with such exquisite taste in its mechanical execution, and certainly none that will be of greater value to the masses of men and women—old and young. Whoever purchases the book will have in it alone a valuable library at a very small cost."

Last Saturday at 4:30 p. m. Miss Jennie E. Adams, who has resided in Fulton for about one year, was united in marriage by the Rev. J. S. Riggs to Dr. William C. Borden of Washington. The wedding occurred at the residence of Mrs. George Safford and was a very quiet affair. The groom is a surgeon in the United States Army.

Last Wednesday evening Dr. G. V. Emens very pleasantly entertained the M. E. Literary society which met at his residence. The program was varied. Misses Gertie Ottman, Mattie Parkhouse and Cora Foster rendered some entertaining music and Miss Parkhouse also read a poem. The greater part of the evening was taken up by a discussion on "Air" by G. F. Schenck.

Haverly's Minstrels gave an entertainment in Stephen's Opera House last Wednesday evening and were greeted by a large audience, who manifested their appreciation of the show by abundant applause. The entertainment was devoid of the coarse vulgarities which often characterize minstrel performances and this we suppose was the reason why one of our Oswego contemporaries so severely criticized a performance it was unable to appreciate.

This evening the following program will be rendered under the auspices of the Zion church Organ Guild at the residence of D. Ramsden: Chorus, "Spring's Delights," Muller—Neahtawanta Musical Union; Vocal Solo, "When the heart is young," Dudley Buck—Miss Laura McCordy; Cornet Solo, "O, what Joy," from Fra Diavolo—Mr. John Pickles; Vocal Trio. I left Minneapolis [illegible] the morning [illegible] Our course for the first 135 miles was nearly north to the city of Brainerd. Here we strike the Northern Pacific proper, the road just travelled being but a branch. This city contains ten thousand inhabitants (western measurement) but anyone passing through would naturally wonder where the people hid themselves. The railroad company is building a hospital here for the care of its employees when sick or maimed. It will contain sixty wards when finished, with five surgeons in attendance. Every employee of the road is taxed toward the expense of the laudable enterprise.

From Brainard we go directly west and arrive at Fargo at 7:20 p. m. Here we cross the Red River of the North, the dividing line between Minnesota and Dakota. We are now in the land of the Dacotahs, having traveled 374 miles from St. Paul and by choice came through by daylight. When we return we shall choose to pass this with others in total darkness. Fargo is another western city of 10,000 inhabitants or more. It has two good hotels, electric lights, fire department, ten policeman, and a sufficient number of saloons to keep up the reputation of being a live city. As we were about to register our name we heard it pronounced and found an acquaintance, a young man from old St. Lawrence county, who is the gentlemanly clerk of the Sherman House, Fargo, D. T. After a good night's rest and a passable breakfast, we take the train at 8:30 a. m. which left St. Paul the previous evening. Our course is directly west to Mandan, the terminus of the division from Fargo, a distance of two hundred miles. About twelve miles from Fargo we pass through the celebrated Dalrymple farm, of which so much has been said and written. Twenty-seven reapers are required to cut the wheat grown by this prince of farmers. As we pass through, the ground on each side was literally covered with wheat as far as the eye could see, while to the left and right could be seen in the distance three steam threshers doing their part of the harvest work. Last year it cost this gentleman just fifty-four cents per bushel to place his wheat on the Chicago market, and it sold for $1.13 per bushel. As he can load forty cars per day for a number of days, you can get some idea of the magnitude of the Dalrymple farm.

A stop is made at Jamestown for dinner, ninety-four miles from Fargo. This place is called "Jimtown" by its inhabitants, and is quite lively with a population of about 1,500. I took no dinner but spent the time alotted in taking notes. All along the line we noticed many evidences of the Villard celebration. This place was no exception. Here we found quite an elaborate display of western products, artistically arranged upon arches, temporarily erected on every available spot—house, barn and fence. In the centre of a small park, between the train and opposite street, stands a pavilion filled with vegetables of a mammoth size, and the western grains beautifully arranged. As I entered the pavillion I introduced myself to the gentleman in charge; who received me warmly, he being from Camillus formerly, but later from Avon south of Rochester. His name is H. L. Bryan and he came west for his health which he has completely regained. Having had some experience east in decorative art, and being somewhat of a genius in this direction, he was well fitted to fill the place he occupied. He had arranged large heads of wheat, oats, barley and millet into a Catalpha—named after a tree that grows on the banks of some of the western rivers, with beautiful blossoms. The tree rested on a mat of sage, trimmed here and there with light gray ribbon; and all the colors of different grains were so nicely blended that the effect was pleasing indeed. Such a one as is here imperfectly described was presented to Mr. Villard. Mr. Bryan told me that the British minister had ordered a similar one for the Queen. But I am reminded that my half hour had expired and bidding good bye to my Central New York friends, I take my place in the car. Just before starting a gentleman came in, having heard that I was aboard, and I had the pleasure of a moment's chat with Mr. John Moore from my own native town in Vermont. As the train moves out I notice a new but familiar face from Fulton, N. Y.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

Sarsaparilla

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

When a friend has got your idea through his head, make sure that he doesn't mean that it has gone into one ear and out at the other.—[Boston Transcript.

Archibald Forbes the famous war correspondent, is going to marry a Washington belle. This is the first and only engagement Forbes has figured in without writing it up.—[Pittsburg Telegraph.

A common brick if very dry will absorb a quart of water. The perfect brick of the human variety, however, although he is always very dry, would not absorb a quart of water in a year's drinking. Herein is seen the superiority of mind over matter.

"Accused," said the President of the Tribunal, "you have heard the report of the medical experts that the body contained a quantity of arsenic sufficient to kill eight persons; what have you to say to it?" "That my poor husband was a great glutton."—[City of Mexico Monitor.

"Where are you taking me to?" asked a criminal addressing a detective who had just arrested him. "I'm taking you to the office of the Superintendent of Police," was the reply. "I wish to observe in this case then," said the culprit; "that it is the office seeks the man, and not the man the office."—[Somerville Journal.

A race between a pigeon and a pony in England was won by the bird. This isn't considered much of an exploit in this country, where a common American swallow will take in all the ponies a barkeeper will trot out.—[Boston Courier.

A health journal says: "Too thick underclothing causes unnatural redness in the face and nose." We never heard it called that name before. Perhaps if the editor of the health journal was to dilute his "underclothing" with a little water before swallowing it, the unnatural color would not manifest itself so prominently.

"What will become of the dude when the chill winds begin to blow?' asks a new York paper. It is a mighty mean city that will prepare warm winter quarters for the monkeys in the zoological garden, and refuse to make provision for their half brothers.—[Norristown Herald.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should attend to it while it is in the germ, [illegible]

SETH GREEN.

What the Great Fish Culturist Says:

Last winter I went to Florida and while there contracted Malaria in a very severe form. When I returned home I went to bed and remained there until spring. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of Malaria can appreciate my condition. As I failed to get any better I determined to try a remedy made by a gentleman in whom I had the greatest confidence. I am happy to say it affected permanent relief and that I am well to-day through the influence of Warner's SAFE Cure. After such an experience I can most heartily recommend it to all sufferers.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

For Man & Beast.

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificate of cure prove it to be an unparallel success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

Old meadows are apt to become weedy. Such as are not eaten down by stock should be cut with the mower before they mature their seed.

Keep the horse collars clean. The dust and dirt which adheres to collars when they are wet with sweat works into lumps and ridges and sore shoulders are the result.

Lard should never be used on a wagon wheel, for it will penetrate the hub and work its way out around the tenons of the spokes, thus spoiling the wheel. Tallow is the best lubricator for wooden axletrees.

After dairy vessels have been in use for any considerable time they become greasy, and it is difficult for inexperienced persons to cleanse them with hot water, as is generally attempted. Lye, or ashes and water, will generally prove effective in removing the grease, and lime water will neutralize all acidity.

Corn will shrink from the time it is husked from the field or shock, in the autumn, in well protected cribs, from twenty to thirty per cent. by spring. That is, one hundred bushels would shrink to seventy or eighty, according to how dry it was when gathered. Sound corn will shrink twenty per cent. so that forty cents per bushel as it comes from the field is as good as fifty cents in the spring.

ANOTHER CASE OF KIDNEY DISEASE CURED BY RHEUMATIC SYRUP.

FURNACE VILLAGE, Wayne Co., March 3.

Gents—Fifteen years ago I had a very severe attack of rheumatism, which settled in my back and hips, and much of the time for the last five years I have been unable to attend to my business; for weeks and weeks at a time I have been unable to turn in my bed or to feed myself. I have tried many remedies, and two years ago I consulted one of the most celebrated physicians in the State, who pronounced it kidney disease, but I grew worse all of the time during his treatment. I heard your Rheumatic Syrup highly recommended, and I tried it, and before I had used two bottles all pain had left me, and to-day I can get about and able to attend to my business and am improving rapidly every day. I am confident that the Rheumatic Syrup if taken as directed, will cure any case of rheumatism or kidney disease. I am most respectfully yours,

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Dakota ous The Bad Lands.

Phoenix Register.]

s, Idaho, Sept. 29, 1883.—The e referred to in my last be Mr. Conger of Fulton, who has y living in your village. He has of about 1,560 acres near the at Steele, where we are to part any. The place is fifty-eight miles Jimtown," so we have over two of each other's society. The time passes for we have much to say the east and friends left behind. Conger has some good land, and I he has made a good financial in ment; but why a man of his age possessions, should leave civiliza n, and submit to the privations and ships of a new country is a problem not solve.

kota seems to be one vast plain, here and there ranges of low butts ills. You look in vain, for a grove, stream, or a neat eastern village to k the monotony. The eye becomes d at this everlasting sameness and ness. The territory contains 160,000 are miles, not half of which is arable. railroad generally traverses the est part of the country and Dakota ew, but I felt as I passed through vast territory of good and "bad s" that I would as soon be left in middle of the great sea as to stop in vicinity. There was an occasional f, however, in the small ponds of ter visible from each side of the road we passed along; but many of these ds were filled with alkali that the face presented an appearance of shell calm and undisturbed, though there s quite a breeze. In some of these all lakes, very small, the water look quite clear, and its surface was al st completely covered with wild ks.

We parted company at Steele, Bro. ger fearful that he should find his ks of hay on fire, and I tired of this rlasting prairie and western brag. re are many good things in the west; prairie is well calculated for the emigrant, who can live on nothing endure semi-barbarism for a few rs; a good home comparatively aking will come to him. The men d man of the east can also invest h a fair prospect of gain for the gov ment land is so low that it must in ase in value whenever settled, but erally speaking the man who spends ew dollars here starts a "boom," a y appears (on the map), the newspa s are filled with sensational stories paragraphs, and the people of the t are misled and misinformed.

From Steele to Mandan, a distance of ty-eight miles, there is no change in geography of the country until we ch the Missouri river. Here, situated the east bank, is the city of Bismark, capital of Dakota. The city num s over three thousand inhabitants and rowing fast. Quite recently the cor stone of the new capitol building s laid with imposing ceremonies, ting Bull participating. The train ps here only a few moments and we s on towards the river, this is soon ched and we behold for the first time Missouri. The water is very low, traces of high water are plainly vis s. It was pleasant to see once more iver, with trees clothed in green grow on its banks. The sight was of short ration for we are going west. As we ed over the bridge we noticed quite number of steamers moored to the er's bank. This river is navigable for housand miles further up; but when n understand that many of these amers can almost run on the prairie en there is a heavy dew, you can lize that they do not require any at depth of water. With reluctance passed on and soon stopped at Man n, the end of this division, four hun d and seventy-four miles west from Paul. Here we are served with sup r and as it is only decent meal we on the road, we wish to record our proval. The company had taken off dining cars to accommodate their d head visitors, and the result was t we who paid full fare must go ngry or fare worse.

A. U. HUTCHINS.

ewiston, Idaho, Oct. 2, 1883.—I left I think in my last at Mandan, re I was enjoying a delightful meal. steaks of beef and venison were de s, but the trout were beyond de tion. There is only one place equal on the whole route for a 'square' and that is Cleveland, Ohio. The left on time at 7 p. m., and our now is due west for 216 miles to the terminus of the division. is made in the night, but as the ery bright and there is not [illegible]

[illegible] we stood on the car platform about 9:00 a. m. which he said was at our left and quite perfect, but I failed to perceive his canine majesty; yet one might imagine most any shape, however inexplicable, for the resources are inexhaustible. The Indian tradition of the "bad lands," is as follows: The Great Spirit was once pursued by the evil spirit and the race lasted for some time; (on the principal that a stern chase is a long one) until the Great Spirit, with a supreme effort, threw up the obstacles of locomotion in the "bad lands," and the evil spirit was more than distanced. Now this agrees exactly in principal with the war in Heaven so graphically described in Milton's Paradise Lost.

I find it cold in the night air and so I enter the comfortable car and meditate on the wonders of the great west. The car is about half full of sleepy passengers, and the different attitudes now on exhibition, as both men and women unconsciously seek a restful position, would startle a modest man and excite the admiration of Praxiteles himself. I felt that I had a tolerable conception of this part of Dakota, and as one can get an idea of a barrel of pippins by eating half a dozen, so a half hour's observation of the "bad lands" will be amply sufficient for any reasonable man. We soon cross the Little Missouri, and the rest of the journey to Glendive, where we arrive at 6:40 a. m. is made in comparative silence, with the exception of some unfortunate brother (the ladies never snore) found on the train, who, to use a down east expression, "turns his yoke," and at regular intervals sends forth a trumpet sound. I had flattered myself that I knew something of the capacity of man in that direction. I had traveled much in the east and at night I have lain awake many a night at our conferences and conventions when kindly permitted to share the bed with a snoring brother, and I can assure you that I have seen some very fine exhibitions of what it is possible for a man to accomplish in the east under the most favorable circumstances, but never did I see a man do his level best until I travelled west, and as everything here is on a grand scale, it would be expected that this western sleeper was no exception to the general rule, and he was not. May his tribe never increase. We are now in Montana, on the banks of the famous Yellowstone, but let me defer a brief description of my ride across this large territory until my next.

A. U. HUTCHINS.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Mr. John J. Jewitt, of New York city, the original publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in a recent interview with a correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean, was asked:

"How did you come to be the publisher of "Uncle Tom's Cabin?"

"I suspect," he replied, "it was principally because I was a rabid anti-slavery man, although the fact that I had previously been the publisher of a book by Rev. Henry Ward Beecher may have had something to do with it. After a careful examination I concluded that the story would not only repay the cost of publication in book form, but would yield some profit. Possibly I was helped to that conclusion by my firm conviction that the document would prove a strong anti-slavery document. At all events, I expressed a willingness to publish it, and the next thing was to arrange the terms. Professor Stowe was in favor of selling the manuscript for a sum down. "I tell my wife," said he to me, "that if she can get a good black silk dress or $50 in money for the story, she had better take it."

"Do you believe you could have purchased the story for $50?"

"I believe I could have bought it for $25."

"So large were the orders for the book that from the day that I first began to print it the eight presses never stopped, day or night, save Sundays, for six months, and, even then there were complaints that the volumes did not appear fast enough. In a little while I was able to inform Professor and Mrs. Stowe that their percentage already amounted to $80,000, although my contract with them required me to give a note only. I would pay them that sum in cash."

"How did they receive your information?"

"They seemed a little dazed by the news. The sum was so vastly beyond anything they expected or had heretofore possessed, that it appeared to them like a great fortune. When they called at my office I handed Professor Stowe my check for $10,000, payable to his order. Neither the Professor nor Mrs. Stowe had ever before received a check, they told me, and they did not know what to do with it or how to get the money it represented. I explained it to the Professor that he must endorse the check and present it for payment. I advised him to deposit the money in the same bank. We went thither together. I introduced him to the President and the Professor opened an account. After cautioning him how to keep his check-book and so on, and cautioning him and his wife never to go about with more [illegible] their pockets, I bade them [illegible]

The Eclectic laces grow in favor.

Olive and tan shades are exceedingly popular.

The newest jockey hats are made of sealskin.

Amber neck-laces and combs are again in fashion.

The hair is coiled higher in the head than last winter.

Alligator skin shoes for ladies and children are colored black.

Dog collars of velvet, silver, pearl and jet are again in high vogue.

Gold-dotted tulle makes pretty lace for filling in square-cut bodices.

Black Russian lamb skins will be much used this winter for trimming jackets.

Scarlet flannel underclothing will be worn this winter by ladies in preference to white.

Dark Egyptian red Babet jackets heavily beaded are the favorite autumn wraps for little girls.

Short ostrich and smooth feathers of every kind are preferred this season to the sweeping plumes so long worn.

Fans entirely of ostrich feathers are all the rage with those who can afford them. Fine feathers make fine birds.

Ottoman silk bodices made to fit like Jersey waists of silk stockenette are worn with skirts of silk, satin and velvet.

Very handsome and expensive belts, called Anne of Austria girdles, are imported from Boucheron, the great manufacturer of Parisian jewelry. These belts are formed entirely of semi-precious stones arranged in a continuous spray of tiny flowers and buds, which reaches around the waist and fastens in front underneath a large blossom set amid a number of brilliant-hued leaves formed of gorgeous and glittering gems.

Among fall novelties in neck-wear are ottoman silk scarfs, woven in odd antique patterns throwing an artistic intermingling of scarlet, green, bronze, and bright gold. These scarfs are to be fastened up close in the throat outside the street jacket, and are tied in the same manner as the steenkirk of white lace, worn two years ago—a style of neck-dressing closely imitating that worn by noblemen and gentlemen in the reign of Charles II.

Short of Newspapers.

The world, taken as a whole, is short of newspapers. A foreign paper has the following to say on this subject: it is astonishing to contemplate the enormous number of people in the world to whom a newspaper must be as rare as a diamond. Recently published statistics show that while the circulation of newspapers throughout the world aggregates the great number of 10,000,000,000, only averages six and a half copies per year to each inhabitant of the globe. This is assuming that only one paper goes to each inhabitant of the globe. This is assuming that only one paper goes to each purchaser; but since it is no uncommon thing for one man to buy several, the proportion of those who never buy one is greatly increased. Europe publishes 10,537, while the wonderful section of the world classed as "North America" in the statistics follows with 12,400. The whole of Asia can only show 775, a contrast the more striking beside the benighted South America, which runs close upon that vast continent, with 699. Africa lags behind with only 182, the modern settlements of Australasia in its limited area owning 661. Dividing them into languages there are 16,500 printed in the English language, 7,360 in German, 3,850 in French, and 1,600 in Spanish. The annual aggregate circulation in the United States is 3,000,000,000 as compared with 2,260,000,000 in Great Britain and Ireland, giving the United States the position of being the most voracious devourers of newspaper literature in the world.

Sunset's Setback.

Sometimes the speaker to a miscellaneous crowd receives a retort as unexpected as it is unwelcome. I recall one I received in the rink at Newark, N. J., in 1876. My party had carried Indiana in October and were jubilant in November. There were 5,000 people present full of enthusiasm. Senator Bayard had just addressed them, and there was a storm of applause. With wild eyes and outstretched arms I solicited silence, and my first words—of defiance and exultation—were: "We've got 'em!" Before the echo of the enthusiastic audience came back to me some fellow in the remote corner of the rink, with a voice like a fife, cried out: "You've got 'em bad: what's your liquor?" Roars of laughter followed. It was a settler, and but for the recuperative energy of the speaker without remedy.

Great is he who enjoys his earthen ware as if it were plate, and not less great is the man to whom all his plate is no more than earthenware.—[Leighton.

To restore a common place truth to its first uncommon lustre you need only to translate it into action. But to do this, you must have reflected on its truth.—[Coleridge.

Aristotle being asked for decisive proof of the acquirement of a good habit involves no self denial of predominant force among the faculties."

The little bird has chosen its shelter, and is about to go to sleep in tranquility; it has no disquietude, neither does it consider where it shall rest to-morrow night; but sits in peace upon that slender branch, leaving to God to provide for it.—[Luther.

These are really good things. You have before you the work of men of very fair talents, who have learned something and have acquired no little taste and art. Still something is wanting in all these pictures—the Manly. Take note of the word, and underscore it. The pictures lack a certain urgent power, which, in former ages, was generally expressed, but in which the present age is deficient; and that with respect not only to painting, but to all the other arts.—[Goethe.

Mrs. Josie Beeman, Bath, N. Y. says: "I was a great sufferer from general female weakness. Brown's Iron Bitters has given me great relief."

The Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch says of the Hon. Samuel S. Cox, who was in 1853-54 an editorial writer for the Columbus Statesman: "It was late in the afternoon, and the sun was just dipping below the horrizon. Suddenly Cox rushed into the room. 'Boys' he said, 'did you see that sunset?' It's the most beautiful thing I ever saw.' And, seizing some paper from the proof press and leaning over the imposing stone, he wrote the famous pen picture that gave him the life-long sobriquet of 'Sunset Cox.' The article was taken by the compositors and put in type piece by piece, in that evening's number of the paper."

The modern drawing-room to be acceptable, should be made to represent "fashionable confusion" in all its elegance and sumptuousness.

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE."

284 ADELPHI ST., BROOKLYN, N. Y.
March 29, 1881.

No family should be without ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficacy far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and known them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint bronchitus, neuralgia, lumbago, inflamation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weaknesses, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with BRANDRETH'S universal life-giving and life-healing PILLS, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good sound health. MRS. E. TOMPKINS.

ONE TRIAL.

If you have been using other Plasters one trial of Allcock's Porous will convince you of their wonderful superiority. Take no other so-called porous plasters that claim to be better, they are all frauds gotten up to sell on the world-wide reputation of the genuine article.

Dr. Lawrence's Cough Balsam

Is Warranted to Cure COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, SORE THROAT, and all Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

We do not claim to cure consumption when thoroughly seated, but we do claim that thousands of lives might be saved every year by the timely use of Dr. Lawrence's Cough Balsam. Many people imagine they have consumption, when in reality they have only a bad cold, which can easily be cured by proper care and the right kind of medicine. We could fill columns with testimonials but we do not believe in that way of advertising, our idea is to let everybody that is afflicted with a cough try for themselves, and if not perfectly satisfied, return the empty bottle to the dealer of whom it was bought and receive their money back.

OSWEGO COUNTY.

[Special Dispatch to THE FULTON TIMES.]

OSWEGO, Nov. 7—2:30 p. m.—The indications at present are that Littlejohn is elected by 19 plurality over Baker. There is a dispute over the vote in the Fifth ward of this city. The republicans concede the ward to Baker by 48 majority, while some of Baker's friends claim it for him by 68 majority, which would give him 1 plurality in the district.

Avery is elected County Judge by 55 majority.

David is elected Surrogate by 359 majority. Oswego County gives Clark 1,366 majority for State Senator. Lansing's majority in the district is 1,500.

The majority of Carr for Secretary of State is about 1.800.

VOLNEY AND GRANBY'S VOTE.

[illegible] majority of 10,000 to 15,000. [illegible] but it is probable that the other candidates on the Republican ticket are elected by a small majority.

The democratic majority in New York city, on the state ticket is estimated at 40,000, with the exception of Carr, who runs 10,000 or more ahead of his ticket. The senate will be republican by 4 to 6 majority, and the assembly by about 20 majority.

RESULT IN OTHER STATES.

Massachusetts elects Robinson, Rep. Governor over Butler, Dem. by from 10,000 to 30,000 majority.

Pennsylvania is claimed by the Republicans by 20,000 majority.

Mississippi has gone Democratic by a large majority.

In Connecticut the Republicans have carried the Legislature by 40 majority on joint ballot. The Republicans made large gains throughout the State.

Virginia was carried by the Democrats by about 3,000 majority.

In New Jersey the result is doubtful, but the indications are that the State elects a Democratic Governor by a small majority.

The Republicans were successful in Kansas.

A Central Square correspondent says: Rev. H. Skeel, so well and favorably known in Oswego county, lectured at Coughdenoy, Tuesday evening of this week on "Lake Ontario, Ancient and Modern." Mr. S. has quite a well supported theory that lake Ontario was much larger than now and emptied its waters through what is now the Mohawk Valley and then the Niagara was at Little Falls. Of course Oswego county was then under the flood and perhaps a part of Lewis county might have been an island, while all the rivers are of modern origin.—[Oswego Palladium.

THE MARKETS.

CHEESE.

New Railroad Facilities.

Last week arrangements were made between the N. Y. O. & W. and the West Shore railroads, which are practically under the same management, by which through tickets are sold at the stations of the N. Y. O. & W. railroad to all points in the East on the line of the West Shore, connections being made in the Union depot at Oneida Castle, thus insuring a cheaper and more convenient route than has heretofore existed.

The regular passenger coaches of the N. Y. O. & W. road are almost palatial in their appointments and the Pullman buffet sleepers of this line are among the most elegant and attractive to be found on any road in the country. EXCURSION INCIDENTS.

How a Body of Politicians Were Revived and Discovered Something Valuable.

The Tammany excursion to the late State convention at Buffalo were surprised on their return trip last Friday by the introduction into their midst of two attractive looking cases marked in a bold running hand, "Tippecanoe.' This laconic inscription somewhat troubled the placid breasts of some of the leading district leaders, who were on the alert to capture the scalps of lagging county delegates, in retaliation for their appropriating Tammany's thunder.

As the train steamed out of the Rochester depot, a young man gently touched the the shoulder of Hon John Kelly, and gesticulated in the direction of the cases aforesaid. Mr. Kelly at once took in the situation, and, linking the arm of the young man, went forth to investigate the secret of the mysterious boxes.

"Tippecanoe!" exclaimed the well-known leader. "why I knew him and Tyler, too."

"Yes," ejaculated delegate Plunkett, "we were bosom friends. 'Tip' was a good old soul, and so was Tyler, too."

These bursts of extempore wit had the effect of bringing the different delegates to their feet, and one and all let loose their fund of pungency upon the "Tippecanoe cases."

"Let's open them?" suggested a delegate; and in the space of 57 and 1-3 seconds the contents of the cases were undergoing critical analysis, when it was found that "Tippecanoe" was a preparation far superior to any bitters now, or ever known to the public. As the delegates slaked their assimulated thirsts, they one and all praised "Tippecanoe" while complimentary remarks were made by such adepts as the Hon. John Kelly, George W. Plunkett, William H. Mulligan, Senator Treanor, and many others. It was generally conceded that "Tippecanoe" had the effect of infusing new life and energy in the ranks of the assembled warriors and clearing their intellect after the very severe physical and mental strain incident to the convention, so that while it was considered at first simply a palatable drink, it proved to be a preparation which not only refreshed, but was unquestionably the best remedy known for dyspepsia, mal-assimulation of food, stomach disorders, general functional derangements, constipation, tired feelings, malaria, blood disorders, skin eruptions, loss of energy, feeble appetite, bilious headache, etc. The combination of a delicious drink with a wonderfully efficient remedy is as gratfying as it is rare.

The above truthful incident, regarding the new preparation which is being introduced to the public, and it is certain to supercede all "bitters," is taken from the New York Standard of a recent issue. "Tippecanoe" prepared by Mr. H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y. who is known to every man, woman and child in the land as proprietor of Warner's Safe cure, better known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. In addition also to "Tippecanoe," Mr. War. is introducing a Safe Rheumatic Cure which he personally guarantees to Cure ninety-five per cent. of all rheumatic affections. The popularity of the Safe Cure, together with the high personal standing of Mr. Warner, make this the most complete and responsible guarantee possible. The peculiar name of "Tippecanoe" is, as we learn adopted to prevent the fraudulent imitations which always follow meritorious articles. Its principal ingredients were used by the Harrison family in those early days and became famous for efficency at that time. The terrible revolutions made by modern health statistics indicate that something must be done to check the ravages of disease and stop untimely deaths. Thousands of persons are dying annually from no other cause than thoughtless neglect. The slight symptoms of uneasiness, headache, constipation, stomach derangements, mal-assimulation of food and other similar troubles are often considered of too little importance to require attention or treatment. They are therefore permitted to continue until the health is broken, the constitution wrecked and the life exhausted, when by a timely use of the right remedy health might be secured and life prolonged.

Pronounced the Best.

The farmers throughout this section of the country devote a great deal of their atteneion to dairying and consequently are interested in the subject of Butter Colors, and desirous of ascertaining which of the many in the market is the best and cheapest. It is a noticeable fact that, at the agricultural fairs in New York and the New England states, The Improved Butter Color, made by Wells, Richardson & Co., of Burlington, Vt., has taken first premiums wherever exhibited, triumphing over all competitors. Its superiority over all others is marked by the following properties. It never turns rancid as so many of the oil colors do. It gives a natural, bright color which is just what is desired, a result which is often promised but seldom if ever obtained by others. It is far the strongest and therefore the cheapest butter color made. It gives universal satisfaction, and dairymen who have once used it will have no other. It will not color the buttermilk.

The verdict pronounced by the country fairs is of the utmost importance and carries great weight from the fact that the judges are practical men, farmers and dairymen, who know [illegible] what is needed [illegible]

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

A South Scriba Woman Cuts Her Throat with a Razor.

SOUTH SCRIBA, Nov. 5.—Our usually quiet town was excited last night over the attempted suicide of Mrs. Angeline Eva Bartlett, daughter of Morris Coe, deceased, and Electa Coe. Mrs. Bartlett is about 57 years of age and was married to a man named Bartlett about 35 years ago. He left the country soon after and since his desertion his wife has lived with her parents. She has been in feeble health for some time and finally became insane.

Between 2 and 6 o'clock last night her mother who is over 80 years of age went to the wood house and when she returned found Angeline in the bed room with the door locked. She went and looked in at the window and saw Angeline on the bed with her head hanging off with her throat cut and bleeding. Mrs. Coe screamed and her cries were heard by the neighbors who burst open the door, and stanched the flow of blood from the wound. A physician dressed the wound and it is thought that the woman will recover. Q.

To Our Subscribers.

It is with considerable delicacy that we ever have anything to say in reference to subscriptions, finding as a rule that our subscribers set so high a value upon THE TIMES that they pay promptly appreciating the fact that our paper is actually worth double the price we ask for it and endeavoring to render us the assistance that ready money always gives the publisher who honestly strives to keep his paper up to the highest possible journalist merit.

We would, however, in this connection like to call the attention of a number of our friends to the fact that they have—doubtless unintentionally—allowed themselves to get considerably in arrears.

It is drawing toward the close of the year and we would like to strike a balance with all our subscribers before the 1st of January and start out on a new year with a clean ledger.

We have no doubt they will act upon our suggestion and we leave the matter to their generous consideration.

[illegible] Death—The Funeral.

Wilton Edward Williams died at the residence of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Sabin, in this village, on Friday, Nov. 2, at half past 12 o'clock p. m.

Inasmuch as Mr. Williams was intimately associated with THE FULTON TIMES from its establishment until he went West with his parents and family about three years ago, his death naturally becomes an incident of interest to its large circle of readers. It is probable, also, notwithstanding the fact that he grew up in this community, and was not only to some extent shaped by it, but in turn himself somewhat helped to shape it, that very few are familiar with the peculiar circumstances which now seem to have determined him to adopt the career of journalist. That he had a natural adaptation for the profession we think no one who knew him will question, but when and how he "caught on" to it—to use a common and expressive phrase—comparatively few are aware.

He was born in this village August 17, 1854, and was consequently at the time of his death a little more than 29 years of age. In his boyhood, which was unusually buoyant and active, he attended the public school, and participated in its various exercises of recitation, declamation, &c., apparently more as a diversion than a task, for, while he was always well up with his classes in the various studies he pursued, it seemed never a serious or laborious undertaking for him to prepare to acquit himself creditably in the various lessons and recitations imposed by the regulations of the school.

In the early spring of 1868, while he was between 13 and 14, word came from his teacher to his father—who was then taking the first steps for the issue of the first number of THE FULTON TIMES—that Edward was a truant from school. His father immediately set out, and after a diligent search found him, early in the afternoon, in the company of a couple of other boys of his own age who were at work in W. S. Nelson & Co's. stave factory. On a quiet invitation he accompanied his father, and on reaching the office he was told to sit down and wait until tea-time; and that when they should go home at that time they would have a consultation with mother as to the best method of assuring his faithful attendance at school.

He made no reply, but seemed to be silently reflecting for a few minutes—perhaps half an hour. In this brief time his resolution seemed to have been taken; and it solved the problem that had previously been reserved for discussion at tea-time. He arose, placed an empty type box bottom up in front of an unoccupied case, stepped upon it, picked up a composing stick, and went to work upon a piece of printed copy that lay before him.

He had committed and recited his last formal lesson; he had—at that early age—closed his text book forever; he had responded to the last call and obeyed the last dictate of teacher or tutor. Henceforth his instructor was to be the printing office, the editorial room and—the world.

When it was noticed that he was industriously inclined, offers were made to assist him, but he quietly spurned them all, and became in a few months an expert compositor solely upon the resources of his own ingenuity and observation. Later he undertook job composition and press-work under the same conditions and with the same success, and applied himself to them with cheerful assiduity until his taste and ambition in that direction were satisfied; and all his subsequent movements in the direction of the art or profession were practically without dictation other than that which he found within himself.

Going into the office of THE TIMES one morning—perhaps three years after it was started—and when he had, as yet, never prepared an article for its columns, nor appeared to be interested in an item published in the paper—he pushed an unoccupied table into a vacant corner of the editorial room and equipped it with writing materials, saying, as he did so, "I guess I will edit the Local Department of this paper." As with all the changes he had hitherto made, this one was inaugurated by him without consultation, without suggestion, without preparation—except such as might have been silently going on in his own mind; and on his father's part it was simply concurred in; neither assented to nor prohibited in terms; as other changes and innovations had been.

From that day whatever of increased interest was added to this department of the paper—and there certainly was much—the credit of it belongs to him. Whatever of reputation it gained for raciness, originality, humor or pathos, was peculiarly his own. He seized salient points with unerring intuition, and treated them apparently without the intervention of system or method, or calculation—guided solely by an impulse which he implicitly confided in, and which never failed him. He was vivacious, didactic, pathetic, philosophic—rarely sarcastic—but never harsh and exasperating—according to the demands of time and topic. At intervals he published a number of brief poems, several of which received the gratifying approval of wide reproduction in the best newspapers of this country. These were [illegible] under a [illegible] [illegible] with the country, and never [illegible] regard that section as his home. As a consequence of this feeling he embraced an early opportunity to return east by forming a connection with the reportorial staff of the Syracuse Evening Herald. This occurred in May of this year and continued to the time of his death.

Mr. Williams' prostration dates from the 30th of September. After a week of illness—though not of suspension from labor—he had come to this village to attend the funeral of Mrs. Carrie Monk, a cousin by marriage. Following the completion of the services at the church he complained of increasing suffering, and early in the evening retired. Very early the next morning a physician was summoned, who found him suffering under a fearfully severe attack of brain fever, which continued with varying degrees of virulence, but with unrelenting pertinacity to the very hour of his death. The progress of the disease was very violent, and correspondingly destructive, for more than three weeks, and then, when it seemed the entire brain and nervous system had been paralyzed by the shock and strain, the patient settled into a semi-comatose state, disturbed only by occasional and brief periods of restlessness; and so continued until his life went out. During the last twenty-four hours the fever raged in the wasted form with still unremitting, if not renewed violence, refusing to loosen its hold, or even modify its severity, except at the behest of the monarch whose edict no mortal may defy. But the release of the spirit from that terrible and protracted struggle—which resisted the resources of medical skill as well as of the most zealous, affectionate and patient care and watchfulness—was as calm and serene as the falling to sleep of an infant upon its mother's breast. Not a motion of muscle, not a vibration of nerve, not a contortion of visage, not the customary death-rattle, not a gasp, nor a groan, nor a moan—nothing but the quiet and almost imperceptible suspension of respiration marked the moment of dissolution.

The father of the deceased, Geo. E. Williams, now of St. Louis, Mo., was with him during the last two weeks of his illness, his mother being compelled by infirm health and a share in the care of an infant to remain at home.

On March 17, 1878, W. E. Williams was united in marriage with Miss Eva C. Sabin, of this village, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Sabin, the Rev. H. M. Danforth officiating. This faithful companion survives him. They were just preparing for housekeeping by themselves, for the first time in their married life, when disease prostrated him.

Funeral services were held on Sunday at 2 p. m., at the house, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Riggs of the Presbyterian church, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Markham of the M. E. church; and a quartet composed of N. H. Gilbert, F. A. Gage, Miss Gertrude Stephens and Mrs. J. T. Pratt, with Mrs. C. K. Howe as pianist sang "He's gone," "Waiting and Watching," and "The Sweet Bye and Bye" in the order named, at intervals during the services.

The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful, conveying in a delicate and touching manner assurances of sympathy and affection felt by many warm and true friends. We may be permitted to mention one, which was contributed by the staff of the Syracuse Evening Herald. It was a pillow about two and a half feet long by a little more than half that width. The groundwork was a solid mass of pure white natural blossoms, and this was bordered and intersected lengthwise by 3 wreaths of tube roses interspersed with bursting buds. In the space above and below the intersecting wreath, wrought in letters of green immortelles, were the words—"Our Associate." A deputation of four, consisting of Manager Jenkins and three of his staff, Messrs. O'Hara, Miller and Sullivan, drove down from Syracuse Sunday morning, bearing this testimonial and testifying unmistakably their devotion to and love for the one of their number who had gone on before.

The remains were escorted to Mt. Adnah cemetery by Fire Steamer Company No. 1,—with which the deceased had been connected while a resident here, accompanied by a large number of sorrowing and sympathizing friends.

Will Morton, W. P. Hillick, Ed. Waugh, Fred Keeler, T. A. Thayer and Jeff Bailey acted as bearers.

Index Expurgators.

In every well regulated printing office there is an Index Expurgatorius or list of words and phrases which have become so trite that their use is prohibited. For instance, such terms as the following: Sickening thud. The happy pair. Wee sma' hours. Launched into eternity. The immediate vicinity. The extreme penalty of the law. A revolting spectacle. The sight was shocking in the extreme. The perpetrators of the dastardly crime. Devotees of Terpsichore tripped the light fantastic toe. The tables groaned under the weight of a bountiful repast, etc. So also in a well regulated Clothing House like Kent & Miller's 18 and 20 South Salina street, certain kinds of clothing are utterly tabooed; such as are [illegible] [illegible] shoddy, badly cut, ill-fitting, [illegible] made, [illegible] etc. [illegible] only the best [illegible]

RENOVATED BEAUTIFUL.

THE ROOMS OF HIRAM LODGE, F. and A. M.

They Now Rank Among the Largest and Handsomest Rooms of the State—Labors of the Lodge Resumed.

At considerable expense the rooms of Hiram Lodge, No. 144, F. and A. M., have been handsomely frescoed and decorated and improved by a coat of paint and varnish, together with a thorough renovation. The lodge room proper is one of the largest in the State and is now one of the handsomest. The recently completed frescoing is certainly an elaborate piece of artistic work.

In the ceiling in the south-east corner are the Holy Bible, square and compasses, representing the lodge; in the north-east corner is the keystone, representing the chapter—in the north-west corner are a cross and crown, representing the commandery, and these three represent the York right of the masonic order. In the north-west corner is a double headed eagle surmounted by a crown, representing the A. and A. Scottish rite.

Directly in the east on the ceiling is a representation of the rising sun, and in the west the setting sun, with an ark floating on the waters, while in the south is a representation of Jacob's ladder and in the north the place of darkness, masonically speaking being a representation of a coffin, an open grave and a sprig of cassia.

The stations of the first three officers are indicated by caves under an arch and between columns, in which are suspended representations of the jewels of their offices.

The Lodge and Chapter will resume labor during the present month, the lodge having already met on Monday evening. The lodge meets on the first and third Monday evenings of each month and the chapter on the second and fourth Tuesday evenings.

A Valuable Book.

We are often annoyed by the importunities of persevering and persecuting book agents, both male and female, who seek to urge wares upon us which are of little or no valve and it is with pleasure that we are able occasionally to speak in complimentary terms of a meritorious work. This we can conscientiously do in referring to Hill's Manuel of Business and Social forms," which is now being brought to the notice of our people by a lady solicitor. Its matter is new, covering a wide range of subjects; educational, social, commercial, legal and political. It is a standard work of reference upon any subject; embracing instruction in penmanship, forms for all kinds of business documents or social letters, invitations, regrets, etc., etc.

It also contains thousands of synonyms, and in fact is more valuable than an Encyclopedia in a thousand particulars. We ask every person to whom this work is presented, to look at it, and if they are able to buy, we are sure that the money could be invested in no way in the line of books which would yield a greater equivalent. A great many publications similar to "Hill's Manuel" are in circulation, but it is superior to any work of its kind we have ever seen and we have examined a great many.

Any one who is desirous of a first class work of this kind can do no better than improve the opportunity which is now offered.

"Trial By Jury."

On Wednesday evening, November 21, in the Stephen's Opera House the Thespian society will reproduce Sullivan's favorite operetta "Trial by Jury," which they presented so successfully last season. The evening's entertainment will be further enhanced by a laughable farce "I've Written to Brown." In presenting "Trial by Jury" the society will be assisted by a full choir of trained voices which will insure an even more successful production than that which so pleased our citizens a few months ago. The proceeds will be devoted to the Organ Guild fund of Zion church. The entertainment will be looked forward to with pleasurable anticipation and THE TIMES bespeaks for it a crowded house.

New Telephonic Communication.

The Empire State Telephone Company will immediately commence to build a telephone line between Fulton and Mexico and will have wires in operation in about ten days.

AUCTION SALE.

On Thursday, November 15, John Church will sell at public auction 20 cows, 3 horses, dairy utensils, hay, straw, oats, corn and a large quantity of other farm produce, wagon, democrat wagon, buggy, 2 mowing machines, hay rakes, 30 empty casks and a hay fork.

This evening a reception and welcome will be tendered to the Rev. B. B. Dow by the Baptist church and congregation at the residence of A. Emerick.

Cornelius Davitt, of Sryacuse, a brakeman on the D. L. & W. railroad had his arm nearly crushed off above the elbow while coupling cars at the depot Monday afternoon. He was brouggt to Dr. Hall's office, where his arm was amputated by Drs. Hall and Marsh.

The L. U. B. W. Society will hold a Dairymaids festival at Howe's Hall on Friday evening and anticipate having a very enjoyable time. The hall will be handsomely trimmed and every effort will be made to render the evening a pleasant one to all who attend.

A very pleasant surprise party was held at the home of Mrs. Burns Case in lower Oswego Falls last Wednesday evening to celebrate her fiftieth birthday. The evening passed off pleasantly, refreshments being served at an early hour to the satisfaction of all present.

The Stratton-Seymour Theatre Company presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Stephens Opera House last Friday evening and Saturday evening a version of "Oliver Twist" was presented. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on Friday evening drew one of the largest audiences that has ever assembled in Fulton for many months. A generous applause greeted both audiences.

The C. L. S. C. held its regular meeting at the residence of G. H. Salmon last Wednesday evening and a goodly number of members were present as well as several visitors. Greek history was discussed by several members in a conversational way, while the characteristics of a number of the leading lights of American literature were also presented as well as a review of German history, the latter being given by Miss Nellie Wise. This was followed by some interesting questions from letters in Art. Four new members were received. The next regular meeting will occur one week from next Friday evening at the residence of M. V. Connell.

On Friday evening the C. L. S. C. met at the residence of Dr. W. L. Woodbury to celebrate the birthday of one of America's favorite bards, William Cullen Bryant, which was accomplished in a most delightful manner. A lengthy and interesting sketch of Bryant's life and works was read by Dr. W. L. Woodbury, which was followed by quotations by nearly all present from Bryant's writings and as they did so they stepped to the mantel and deposited a sprig of evergreen beneath a fine steel engraving of the famous poet. "Thanatopsis" was read by Mrs. E. H. French, "The Forest Hymn," by Miss Eva Case, the "Planting of the Apple Tree," by Mrs. W. R. Hamilton, the "Flood of Years," by Miss Maria Highriter, and a letter from Bryant written shortly before his death to Dr. Vincent commending the Chautauqua course was also read. The company which numbered about twenty persons were entertained with some excellent music Prof. F. K. Jones.

Eleven persons were received into the Oswego Falls Congregational church Sunday. The services were largely attended. A collection of $30 for the new organ was taken Sunday evening.

The measles has made its way into our schools. The Board of Education suggests that parents whose children show signs of the disease should take extra precaution that they do not expose others.

Dudley Darling, who has been telegraph operator for the Northern Mutual Telegraph Company at Fulton, has severed his connection with that Company and accepted a similar position with the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg railroad telegraph company at Charlotte.

Mrs. Mary Ward who resides in North Granby, has had trouble with her eyes for several years, having lost the use of the right eye about four years ago. This last summer the other eye also failed to perform its office and some five weeks ago she went to the hospital in Oswego to receive treatment of Dr. J. R. Stockwell who has restored the sight of the right eye and Mrs. Ward has returned to her home again.

The 50th anniversary of L. L. Babcock's birth occurred on Tuesday, October 30, and he celebrated the event in a most befitting manner, surrounded by a number of friends who were present to wish him many happy returns of the day. As pleasant reminders of the occasion he was made the recipient of a pair of gold spectacles, a gold pen, an oil painting, a rocking chair and some solid silver spoons.

The Fulton Reading Circle met again Monday evening at the residence of Mrs. L. E. Loomis and were entertained and instructed by an exceedingly interesting paper upon French literature concerning "Bude, Bodin and Rabelais," while Miss May Gardner added to the enjoyment of the evening with a chapter from Guizot's history of France. A humorous poetical selection, read by Miss Mary L. Lawrence, and "Aunt Avery's story, Fred and Maria and Me," read by Mrs. C. M. Lee also contributed to the pleasure of those present.

For Musical Improvement.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement in another column of the class in vocal music to be organized next Friday evening at the M. E. church. The terms are placed unusually low so that no one need be deprived of the privilege of attending—and with the hope and expectation that a large class will be formed.

Mr. Chase is a thorough and successful instructor of music and deserves the hearty co-operation of all lovers of the fine art in this community. We believe this plan of instruction is well calculated to meet two very apparent needs. First, there are a great many of our young people who have good voices but unable to read music, and second our older musicians have long felt the need of a choral society that would unite the musical element of our town in one powerful influence for advanced interest and improved taste in this oft neglected department of culture.

If our musical and musically inclined people will join heartily in this enterprise there is no reason why a chorus of a hundred voices may not at the end of the term bring out some of the work of the masters for the entertainment and improvement of our people and the nucleus of a permanent choral society be left for the benefit and pride of our town in future years.

Don't forget to attend the auction sale of [illegible] in Sanderson block this evening at 7 o'clock.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

How Watch Cases are Made.

This process of manufacture was invented by James Boss, who started in business in 1854, and the methods and tools used in making these watch cases are covered by patents. This is the only watch case made under this process. For many years the introduction of these goods was slow, owing to popular prejudice against "plated" goods, but gradually the public learned that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case was not a cheap gold-washed or electro-plated article, but was made of genuine gold plates of standard quality and thickness. Conscientious adherence to the determination to make the best watch case ever put on the market, and the adoption of every improvement suggested, has made the James Boss' Gold Watch Case the STANDARD. In this watch case the parts most subject to wear—the bow, crown, hinges, thumb-catches, etc., are made of SOLID GOLD.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. SETH GREEN

What the Great Fish Culturist Says:

Last winter I went to Florida and while there contracted Malaria in a very severe form. When I returned home I went to bed and remained there until spring. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of Malaria can appreciate my condition. As I failed to get any better I determined to try a remedy made by a gentleman in whom I had the greatest confidence. I am happy to say it affected permanent relief and that I am well to-day through the influence of Warner's SAFE Cure. After such an experience I can most heartily recommend it to all sufferers.

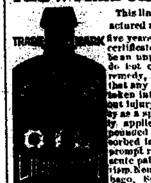
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



For Man & Beast

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF StemWindingOpenFaceCase,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain there [illegible] and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

Many farmers who secure for themselves all the labor-saving improvements are slow in arranging similar helps for their wives.

A milker should learn to milk quickly. Slow milking will ruin any cow, and there is little doubt that many cows are made unprofitable by bad milking. As soon as the flow of milk begins it should be drawn as rapidly as possible. Stripping with the finger and thumb is a bad practice, and should be unlearned at once, and the whole hand used to milk with.

Well managed clay soil is known to be capable of yielding the largest crops of grain, and, if properly drained, with greatest certainty. The reason usually given for this is that clay is retentive of both manure and moisture. But there is another reason of scarcely less importance. Insects that attack the roots of plants living unseen, and often unthought of or unsuspected, find it difficult to live or work in clay. They cannot penetrate it or they perish in it.

A sparrow under a full head of steam collided with a merchant the other day as he was briskly rounding the corner of an old wall in Louisville. The bird's bill entered the corner of his eye and destroyed the sight.

A MUCH MARRIED WOMAN

Mrs. Fowler, of this city, was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem, five of them died exactly two years from their marriage day. Her present husband has been sick for the last four months with chronic jaundice and was given up by four of our best physicians; and at last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had saved his life, smilingly saying that he guesfed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a second better half for some time to come.—Exchange. 24t2

Few like gray hairs, except on other persons, If your hair is turning gray, restore it to the hue of youth by using Ayer's Hair Vigor.

Spanish is taught in the public schools at San Antonio, Tex.

Do you wish a beautiful complexion? Then use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses and purifies the blood, and thereby removes blotches and pimples from the skin, making it smooth and clear, and giving it a bright and healthy appearance.

"Here, Bill, "cried a rural gentleman, rushing toward the elevator, as he saw it coming up, "here's the telephone if you want to see it!"

Trial proves that honesty is the best policy in medicine as well as in other things. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a genuine preparation, an unequalled blood purifier, decidedly superior to all others.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

[illegible]

[illegible]

She tied me in a cone-shaped hat—
  [illegible]
She tried for something broad and flat,
  My kind regard to win;
My head looked like a stunted nut
  An overgrown burr within.

She tossed with hand that did not crush,
  Felts, furs and velvets o'er;
Old gold chenille and moleskin plush
  She thought I should adore;
She seemed to think my purse was flush
  To buy up all the store.

She said: "Here's something very neat;
  You cannot pass it by."
I looked: a gaudy parrakeet
  Had spread its wings to fly.
"Try this; a pair of Tiger's feet
  Upon the brim did lie.

"Now here's a lovely thing in fur,
  Topped with a gray rat's head."
Oh, horrors! and I looked at her,
  Not sure of what she said.
She smiled, and said, consolingly,
  "Of course the rat is dead."

Upon my brow, as on a stone,
  A cock with glassy eye;
Was laid with helpless head and lone,
  By cruel hand to die;
And next a brooding Guinea hen
  Its nestlings there did try.

She said: "This turtle shall not fail
  Your taste refined to meet,
Unless you choose this graceful snail,
  Or spider with gold feet,
A life-like ship, or crawling crab,
  Would make your hat look sweet."

Perplexed and tired and vexed at heart,
  I said: "I'd think it over."
The milliner was loath to part,
  And longed to show me more.
Glad to escape from fashion's mart,
  I sought my sheltering door.

THE AGONY.

That night I dreamed a fearful dream
  That filled my soul with sighs,
All around me fluttering birds did seem
  To rend the air with cries;
The dove's sad moan and peacock's scream
  Were all my lullabies.

And through my hair, the night of dread,
  Did scratch and peck the fowls,
And hens upon my heated head
  Did brood like wakeful owls.
And pawless bears and tigers leaped
  Upon my couch with howls.

All o'er me scrambled great gray rats,
  And turtles pinched my ears;
Fat, slimy snails left shining trails
  That mingled with my tears;
To tell such horrors language fails—
  The moments seemed like years.

THE CONCLUSION.

I woke. My throbbing head grew cool;
  My heaving breast grew calm,
I said:—"No more I'll be a fool,"
  I sang this peaceful psalm:—
"The Quaker garb shall be my choice;
  Plain dressing bears the palm."

Next day I joined the "S. P. C. A."
  And next the Peace society,
Behold me now in neat array,
  Eschewing vain vanity.
A nun could hardly be less gay;
  Of style I've had satiety.

[Harper's Bazar.

THE WIDOW'S MARRIAGE.

I was left an orphan when a mere boy and received into the house of an uncle. My family had been rich, but their wealth had been dissipated and I was poor as well as parentless.

My uncle was a keen, cynical, worldly, poor man. He lived on the remnants of a fortune (which I heard he acquired by his wife) and the traditions of family greatness. His wife was dead; had died while I was still very young. I scarcely remembered her, and she had never awakened my affections.

As I grew up I insensibly acquired a low estimate of women. My uncle's influence all tended to this result, and there was nothing to counteract it. I was taught that my future position and comfort depended upon winning a wife who possessed a fortune.

"No matter what the woman may be," my uncle would say, "unless, indeed, she be strikingly vulgar. Money covers all other defects, even extreme ugliness. But don't marry a widow, my boy. It is said there's a skeleton in every house, but don't let yours be the [illegible] of your 'wife's dear departed.'"

Every year since my childhood I had been accustomed to visit Lyme hall. There dwelt an aged pair who had been my mother's earliest friends, and were, [illegible] distant relatives. They had always manifested a warm affection for the child of their dead niece. They made a point of receiving these visits—they were wealthy and without any direct heirs, and my uncle was averse to any neglect of the communication. I really enjoyed a few summer [illegible] in the [illegible], where I [illegible] and [illegible] every [illegible] spent [illegible].

[illegible] I met Harriet Marsden. [illegible] Mr. Lyme [illegible] with him. "You [illegible]

[illegible] at Lyme called [illegible] guest of my old relatives, and I were thrown into constant companionship. Walking, riding, singing, we were together all day, save when Harriet took her place for an hour or two in the sick chamber, and I stole off to my room, or for a solitary ramble in the grounds, and thought of her. Ere the week was ended I knew that I was madly in love with Harriet Marsden, and felt strong enough to sacrifice anything that I might win her.

At the end of that time I sought an interview with Mrs. Lyme. I knew so little of Harriet that I dared not to speak the words that trembled on my tongue. For the first time I felt a lover's painful timidity. I wanted to know what obstacles, if any, stood in the way of the fulfillment of my wishes.

The information obtained at this interview made one thing certain to me. My uncle, on whom was my sole dependence at present, would never consent that I should address Harriet Marsden, poor and a widow. I seemed to shrink beneath his sneers, his ridicule, his worldly-wise advice. How I longed for fortune. How I wished for strength to enter the arena of human struggle, and test my prowess with my fellows in the race for ambition! Labor would be sweet with Harriet's love for reward. To gain her hand would be better than all social triumps; and, for the first time I felt how ignoble it would be to owe fortune to another; and a keen sense of degradation oppressed me as I thought how I had sought wealth and looked upon the woman who was to bestow it upon me as little better than ancumbrance to its enjoyment.

I braved my uncle's wrath and ridicule; was cast off by him; was aroused from my torpor by the shock; developed powers that I had known not of; six months later was on the road to success and proud independence, and dared to claim my bride, not fearing my ability to provide a home of simple comfort for her acceptance.

"Why not have a quiet wedding here to-morrow morning?" said my dear old grand-uncle, as we sat one evening before the glowing parlor grate at Lynne hall. The little hand that lay in mine trembled, and a soft blush stole over the cheek of her who sat beside me; but no word was spoken. The elders smiled at each other from the opposite arm-chairs Then they arose and withdrew.

"Come to me Arthur, in the library when you have finished your talk with Harriet," said Mr. Lyme, and I nodded assent, scarcely daring to hope that she would consent to the conscious proposition that his words had encouraged me to make.

But the task was not so difficult as I had feared. Harriet's objections to a speedy marriage being founded almost entirely upon her fears that a wife might be a hindrance to me in the pursuit of my lately begun professional career. An hour had scarcely passed ere, elated with her promise to become my wife next morning, I took my way to Mr. Lyme's library.

The good old man read the tidings of my success in my countenance, and warmly congratulated me.

"You have gained a prize young man, a prize of the highest value. Be sure that you receive it as such. Harriet Marsden, penniless, is worth a score of senseless daughters of fashion. And penniless she means to go to you to redeem you from the name it seems you once had of—fortune hunter. It appears she has a little fortune, but she chooses to make it all over to you in advance. It is her will and she is entitled to it now on her last day of freedom."

I took the papers almost mechanically.

The gift was trifling, without doubt, and since it pleased my bride to bestow it, I would not be so churlish as to refuse.

On examing the "documents" after our marriage I found that my wife had bestowed a fortune on me. She had been vastly rich all the time, but had kept the knowledge of the fact from me.

My uncle cordially "forgave" me on learning the good news, and declared that he "suspected how it was all the time."

WOLCOTT, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1882.

Gentlemen—I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism and constipation; have been almost helpless and unable to dress myself alone. I, like thousands of others, tried many remedies I had seen largely advertised, in the hope that I might find some relief, but never until I used the Rheumatic Syrup did I find anything that seemed to hit my case in the least, and I confess that when I did finally consent to try your remedy I had no faith at all in its merits, but I was very happily disappointed. To-day I am entirely free from pain, and can dress myself alone, and can get around better than I have for a long time, and I have used the medicine less than four weeks, and can truthfully say that it will do all and more than you claim for it. I am yours truly, JAMES [illegible].

The fashions of a hundred years ago, [illegible] laughed at, are again coming into vogue.

THE [illegible]

AS SEEN BY THE REV. A. U. HUTCHINS.

Montana and the Valley of the Yellowstone—"Old Timers" and Their Ways.

LAWISTON, Idaho, Oct. 8.—We leave Glendive on time; our course is a little south of west to Billings, a distance of two hundred and twenty-five miles, the western terminus of this division. We follow the south bank of the Yellowstone, keeping the river in sight most of the way. The river is rightly named as the pebbles in its bed are quite yellow through the centre and when brightly polished look pretty. I saw one attached to a gentleman's watch chain that was beautiful. The outside looked like polished ebony and the centre resembled burnished gold. The Yellowstone is not like the Hudson or Columbia a beautiful river. Its waters at this time of year are low and muddy in many places and its banks are uninviting. One misses the "living green" with which Nature robes herself along our eastern rivers. A short distance from Glendive we passed through a large village of gophers. These little animals are not to be confounded with the prairie dog for they are distinct in every particular. They have become quite familiar with the cars and while some of the younger ones would, after taking a look at the train, dodge quickly into their homes burrowed in the earth, the others would sit bolt upright until we passed.

The next seventy-eight miles gave us no change of scenery until we reached Miles City. It was a dreary ride. This city, I suppose, was named after Gen. Miles, who fought under Gen. Howard in the last Indian campaign and is now stationed at Vancouver's Island on this coast. Miles City would be called east a small village, but no eastern village would lynch a dead man. A few days before our arrival a drunken rough was shot and hung in less than twenty minutes after he had insulted a lady. The man, mistaking the house, tried to force an entrance as the lady opened the door, not knowing the character of her visitor. Her cries brought to her assistance, in a very short time, a few "old timers" who happened to be on the street, and they made short work of the matter. The dead man was buried in a small enclosed yard visible from the cars, making the twenty-seventh occupant and the twenty-sixth man who died with "his boots on." One only had died a natural death. The men known here as "old timers," have many noble and manly traits of character. They are, as a rule, brave, generous and a fair representative of modern chivalry. They will brave any danger, they will share the last meal with the needy and avenge an insult to a lady with instant death. Next to this the most honious offense is stealing a horse.

A short distance from Miles City we came to Fort Keogh. Here are a few United States soldiers and many other reminders of Uncle Sam's presence. The letters U. S., whether branded on a mule or painted on a store wagon, gives one a home feeling way out here in Montana. Surely one may be proud of being an American citizen without incurring blame. Here we left about twenty-five U. S. regulars who had come all the way from New York, under the order of transfer to find their home in the West. The poor soldier, like the poor itinerant minister, must go where he is sent, whether it is in Montana or Idaho, and his home is everywhere and nowhere.

As we hauled out from the fort we noticed an Indian encampment of about forty lodges. They were quite near the track and a short distance from the city limits. They proved to be a band of Sioux who had come down to witness the Villard celebration, and were in no hurry to return. I saw quite a number of fierce looking warriors, dressed in full war paint and feathers.

Physically the Sioux Indians are superior to any other on this continent; these were no exception. They were fine looking with a proud and haughty demeanor. The children rushed out as we passed, throwing up their arms and saluting us in many ways with childish glee and enthusiasm, but the older ones showed no signs of recognition whatever. But we travel on, passing a small village called Custer, named after the hero who was killed south of here, and whose untimely and tragic death produced universal sadness and sorrow. Before we reach Billings we pass "Pompey's pillar" on our right. This is not where "Great Cæsar fell," but where Indian tradition has reared a monument by the Great Spirit. We arrive at Billings at 6:25 p. m., and nine hundred and fifty [illegible] miles west of St. Paul. The cars stop here twenty minutes for supper. We are hungry, but [illegible] firm; and we prefer the [illegible] of hunger [illegible]

[illegible]

A few years ago a [illegible] coal mine in Pennsylvania caught fire. It started slowly but soon obtained such headway that it spread through the greater portion of the entire mine. To flood it with water would extinguish the fire, but well nigh ruin the mine; and still flames continued to increase. At that juncture a young man stepped forward and suggested that all the entrances and vent holes of the mine be covered and secured, thus shutting off the supply of air. His advice was followed and the flames were finally subdued.

To compare the condition of this mine with many phases of the human system, is most natural and appropriate. "Fire in the blood" is not a mere expression, it is a most serious fact. How it originates, it may be impossible to say; but that it burns and rages with an increasing fury, the one who is its victim only too painfully knows. The blood is the life. It is designed by nature to purify, strengthen and sustain the system. It is too often made the channel through which poison and death are transported. Poisonous acids coming through the veins and arteries inflame and cause a fire just as real as the one which existed in the mine. They burn and irritate causing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung; they carry pains to the muscles and leave agonies in the joints. they bring destruction instead of stength; they devastate the very portions of the body that most require help, and they hasten the appoach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of rheumatic disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous acids. The lactic, lithic and uric come in to the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections.—when they are deposited as gritty crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely to locate in some joints and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart disease. The fire in the blood must be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by guarding the portals to the blood—the kidneys and liver; and no means has ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the seat of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause.

The well known standing of H. H. Warner & Co. of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed by no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical college, New York, and the fidelity with which they have carried out all their promises to the public, should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. They, however, guarantee to cure ninety-five per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Nothing can be fairer than this, and those who suffer in the future from rheumatism with such an offer before them, do so on their own responsibility, and can blame no one if living pain and untimely death are the results.

[illegible] Massachusetts it is [illegible] that he should be a candidate for Governor again next year.

At Mystic Park, Boston, last Thursday, in a double team trotting match, with running heats, Winship trotted a mile in 2:11¾.

THEODORE F. RANDOLPH, ex-Governor of New Jersey and ex-United States Senator, died suddenly last Wednesday, aged 50 years.

LAST Thursday the entire roof of the Wisconsin State capitol at Madison fell in and killed four laborers and injured twenty others, some of them fatally.

IN another column is an advertisement of the Detroit Free Press. The Free Press is one of the few papers which we consider a valuable acquisition to our exchange table.

As an instance of big newspaper circulation the New York Sun claims that it was obliged to print 173,740 to supply the demand last Wednesday and the Herald says it disposed of 198,500 copies on the same day.

THE Republicans of Massachusetts are happy once more. They have laid Ben Butler away and they now fear no evil. On the night of the election the Republicans of Tewksbury assembled and when a part of the State returned a majority of 7,000 against Butler the company sang "America." When the more complete returns made Robinson's election certain the assembly devoutly sang "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

TWO OPINIONS WORTH HEEDING.

The events of Tuesday have removed all doubt, if any existed before that in the minds of intelligent people, that the election of 1884 will not be a holiday festival for the Democracy.—[New York Sun.

The work done at the polls yesterday in New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Pennsylvania makes it very clear that something besides the empty cry of "Turn the rascals out!" will be required as the working capital of the Democratic party.—[New York Times.

THE SUN'S CANDIDATE.

The New York Sun believes that the election of last week indicates a demand for a strong Democratic Presidential candidate next year, and the Sun further believes that the strongest man the Democrats can nominate is its favorite candidate, Holman of Indiana. In the same article the Sun declares that "no Democrat can be elected President in 1884 who does not carry New York."

It is not probable that the State of New York can be carried by the Democrats next year unless their candidate is a resident of this State. Since the organization of the Republican party in 1856 New York has been carried but twice by the Democrats in Presidential years—by Seymour in 1868 and by Tilden in 1876, both residents of the State.

There is another obstacle in the way of Holman's candidacy. Before Holman the Democrats of Indiana—Holman's State—would prefer either Hendrick's, McDonald or Voorhees.

"THE WILDS OF THE WEST."

Under this caption THE TIMES is reprinting from the Phoenix Register some very entertaining letters from the Rev. A. U. Hutchins who is now in the far west. They possess the merit of being free from that glowing bonanza puffery that so often characterise effusions from that country, and the fact that they are written by the former pastor of one of Fulton's churches lends greater interest to them in the eyes of the readers of THE TIMES.

[illegible] New York State gave a majority of [illegible] in favor of the [illegible] convict labor in the State prisons.

The plurality of Robinson over Butler in Massachusetts is slightly over 10,000. The Senate will stand 25 Republicans, 15 Democrats, a gain of two Republicans.

The number of votes cast in Oswego county in favor of the proposition to abolish convict labor was 2,065, against 6,095, making a majority against the proposition of 4,030.

The official count of the October elections in Iowa shows the following vote on Supreme Judge: Reed Republican, 166,235; Hayes, Democrat, 141,061; Reed's majority 22,174. Hayes received the entire anti-prohibition vote.

The vote for Judges in the Fifth Judicial District, comprising the counties of Herkimer, Jefferson, Lewis, Oneida, Onondaga and Oswego, was as follows: Kennedy, 36,423; Williams, 37,223; Adams, 32,188 and Wynn, 34,078.

The majority of Carr, Rep., for Secretary of State is now figured at 23,080. Chapin, Dem., for Comptroller, has 12,020; Maxwell, Dem., for Treasurer, 10,000, and the remainder of the Democratic State ticket from 12,000 to 14,000. The Legislature will stand: Senate—19 Republicans, 13 Democrats; House—73 Republicans, 55 Democrats.

The total vote of Gates, prohibition candidate for secretary of State in Oswego county was 860, while Merritt, prohibition candidate for attorney general, received 885 votes. By this it will be seen that only fifteen prohibitionists voted for Maynard, the democratic candidate for secretary of state. The total vote for Beecher, greenback candidate for secretary of state, was 207.

Martin Luther.

At this time the following brief sketch of the career of the man who stands in the anti-Romish Christian world next to the Apostles will be found interesting:

Martin Luther was born on the 10th of November 1483, of humble parentage, at Eisleben, Saxony. There was little remarkable about him as a boy. Others were as studious and capable, and when he attended the University at Erfurt it is doubtful if he was any more proficient in his studies than is many a young collegian of to-day. But he was a conscientious student who wanted an original knowledge of all things, and there was a mighty energy and determination about him when once aroused. While in the Augustine Convent at Erfurt, he conceived an idea but for which he might have passed his life in the seclusion of the cloister. He went through a spiritual crisis, revolving in his mind the teachings of the Church and poring over the old books in the library, and it was then that a conviction took root in his soul that sins could only be forgiven through the grace of God.

It was little thought by the people of Wittenburg that the young man in sacerdotal robes who advanced such strange ideas in lecturing at the University, was to make the town famous in history, and change the thought of the world. It was in Wittenberg that he nailed the ninety-five theses against the sale of indulgences upon the gate of the church, and offered to maintain them in the University against all impugners. At Wittenberg he published those famous addresses and treatises about the year 1520, which sowed the seeds of reformation abroad in the land. It was there, too, that he burned the theses of Tetzel and the Pope's bull at the gate of the city. All Germany was convulsed with excitment, and Luther was summoned before the diet at Worms. With heroic courage he resolved to obey the summons. In spite of the threats of enemies and the anxiety of friends he attended the diet and defined his position to the assembled sovereigns. He closed his speech with these famous words:—"Here I take my stand. I can do no otherwise, so help me God. Amen." Despite the awful menace of the Pope and the priests, Luther continued to scatter the seeds of reform, and his eloquence, courage and power displayed on many famous occasions, determined the fortunes of the Reformation. About the last important act of his life was the maintenance of his peculiar views in regard to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper at the famous conference of Marburg, and in February, 1546, sixteen years after, he died.

His sermons are forcible, fearless and pointed, speaking without notes and in a style that at once fastens the attention of the listener. He is little given to sensational preaching, but his illustrations are so apt and his words are so full of reference to the every-day affairs of humanity, coupled with gospel inspiration and enthusiasm that it is impossible to be within sound of his voice without giving his utterances the closest attention.

Mr. Chase's Music Class.

Pursuant to the advertisement in THE TIMES last week, and to which we again call attention a singing class was organized Friday evening at the M. E. church under the direction of M. W. Chase of Syracuse. Owing to the threatening weather, only about twenty-five were present, yet their spirit was such as to insure a successful class. The term of instruction will begin next Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock. It is important that all members should be present the first evening as the work will be progressive and no ground will be traversed twice. It is hoped that the choir singers and others known to be musically inclined will lend their influence by their presence and to the encouragement of beginners. By so doing they will give themselves the benefit of valuable practice and aid in furthering the musical taste and ability of our town.

THE WESTERN METROPOLIS.

Chicago and its Business Houses. —Former Fultonians.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7, 1883.

Business here is dull, decidedly so for this fast, restless people. Nearly all speculation has been at a stand still since the great iron failures of last winter and the early spring, and add to them the heavy failures among the lard dealers of the late summer; and the entire flat market in wheat and pork and you have reason enough for the dullness in speculative trade; however one does not notice this among the dry goods houses. We looked in at Marshall Field & Co's. store on State street on Saturday last, a very bright day, and found the fourteen hundred clerks and cash boys as busy as they could be. This is a magnificent six story fire proof building, and rivals any house in New York or in the new world.

The time is not quite at hand for a good fall trade and the holiday craze has not yet taken hold of the masses as it is sure to do when every dealer expects to sell as much in three weeks as he does in three months of ordinary trade, and they expect this year will be no exception. Two young men, E. L. Judkins & Co. from Boston opened the first of this month at 107 State street a store for the sale of hosiery, gloves and fine millinery and their trade is simply immense owing to keeping only the best goods and selling at a small profit, and always at one price. The head of the house is an importer and has had considerable experience in Boston and New York and yet he said they never equaled Chicago for trade, he said he was happily disappointed.

At the Chamber of Commerce to-day where were some fifteen hundred busy and at times almost wild men we met, two well known former citizens of Fulton, Murry Nelson and Jas. A. Sibley. Mr. Nelson is a younger brother of W. S. Nelson and is now a prominent and wealthy business man and among the heaviest dealers in grain the firm owning two elevators of more than a million bushels each capacity. Mr. Sibley is connected with the commission house of Murry Nelson & Co. It is now fourteen years since he was in active service in the old Genessee Mills in Fulton; and he will be remembered as a most pleasant, careful and popular business man. He spoke in warm terms of praise of many of his former friends and of some who since then have died.

THE MARKETS.

CHEESE.

Five hundred and eighty pounds of cheese were sold at Syracuse Monday, including a sale of 220 boxes by the Ingells Crossing factory at 11¼c.

The market at Utica exhibited an unusual degree of strength. The prime reason seemed to be that other sections of the country held back so much September and October cheese as to make it comparatively scarce. Besides, cheese in that locality is sold down more closely than it was a year ago at this time. Next week will close out most of the October make, leaving only a few scattering lots and the November make to come into market afterward. Most of the factories closed about November 1, and only the large ones are still running and making every other day. The ruling price was 11 cents and 7,730 boxes of cheese were disposed of.

At Little Falls fine cream cheese met with a strong demand by both the home and foreign trade. Any stock showing slight imperfections, however, were much slower of sale. Good judges say they believe that prices of fine cheese will not go lower, but late made inferior stock is likely to be a drug on the market. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price
6	800	10¼
7	550	10¾
14	1080	11
2	85	11⅛
19	1630	11¼
2	320	11⅜
35	2345	11¼
2	130	11⅝
3	313	p. t.
91	7,300
Farm Dairy	755
Total	8,055

There was a small attendance at the Fulton market Monday evening and the market was dull. About 700 boxes of cheese were offered from eight factories and were partially disposed of at from 10¾ to 11c. In 1882 the price was 12c.

Our children now wander in tatters,
And their purple skin peeps coldly out
From their pants that have holes without number.
Old man do you hear when I shout—
"Get thar Eli!"

[illegible] sermons [illegible] were delivered by [illegible] M. E. church [illegible] was favored by a large congregation. He took his text from Proverbs 10:7—"The Memory of the just is blessed, but the name of the wicked shall rot." "In Luther's famous battle hymn," said the speaker, "he recognized three forces, the divine, the human and the satanic as concerned in world events, the tramp of these forces down the ages makes human history. Times are pivotal, as when Christ came, at the confluence of Hebrew Religion, Greek culture and Roman power. He who will take account of a century, counting half each way from the time of Luther's birth will note it as the time when was born a new civilization. A time when Europe seemed to awake as from a troubled dream. Gun powder and the art of printing were invented in America and a water passage to the east were discovered. Art reached marvelous fection. England shook off the author ity of Rome. Men thought, studied and wrote as never before. Strong characters came to the front. Henry the VIII and Cardinal Woolsey in England, John Knox in Scotland, Francis I, the Guise family, Coligny and Calvin in France, Isabella and Columbus in Spain, the Medici family, Angelo and Raphael in Italy, Chas. V. Frederick of Saxony, Luther and Melanchon in Germany. A century's catalogue Europe cannot surpass. But individuals are pivoted in times. So Luther, called of God, took his place. The milestone facts in his life are First—His early religious and intellectual training. Second—His discovery of the Latin Bible. Third—The revelation to him of "Justification by Faith," a Scriptural truth. Fourth—His visit to Rome. Fifth—His contact with the traffic in Indulgences. Sixth—His defence before the Diet at Worms. Seventh—His marriage. Martin Luther is the central Christian figure of the last thousand years. His place in history is attested by the millions who reverence his memory and confess indebtedness to him, on this four hundredth anniversary of his birth. He stands before the civilized world as a giant among men, of good proportions in character, intellect and achievements. In a gathering of the world's notable heroes since the apostles, Luther towers head and shoulders above them all. The world knows no man who could have taken his place. He had convictions and courage equal them. For God's word he stood alone before all civil and ecclesiastical authority, defiant, immovable. Out of the travail of his soul protestantism was born. He was self reliant and so a leader. His work was constant so his skill became great. His purpose was two fold. First—To destroy the work of the devil. This he did by antagonizing Romish errors. Second—To establish the truth, this he did by preaching, writing, translating the Bible, composing hymns, &c. No personal or selfish motive entered into his life. It is suggestive that when the foundation of St. Peter's Cathedral, the pride of catholicism, was laid, the Reformation, the humiliation of catholicism, was involved. Only as we put the measuring line on protestantism in its wonderful manifestations of to-day can we properly estimate Luther's work. Blessings on his memory. Looking at Luther we conclude one can afford to be true to conscience and to God.

At the Presbyterian church every seat was filled to listen to the eloquent discourse which fell from the lips of the Rev. J. S. Riggs, his topic being "Martin Luther as viewed through the Vista of Four centuries." As the grandeur and sublimity of Mount Blanc is realized in the streets of Geneva, fifty miles away, said the preacher, so the character of Luther is appreciated through the intervening centuries. Taking up the thread of Luther's life he sketched his career in a most interesting manner. He spoke with enthusiasm of Luther's defense of his doctrines at Leipsic and at Worms, and declared that he believed that but for Luther's translation of the Bible at the Castle of Wartburg into the German tongue the world might still be without a Reformation.

The discourse was listened to with the closest attention throughout.

We predict for Hill's Manual great popularity and an extensive sale.—[Chicago Tribune.

The Event of Next Week.

Next Wednesday evening the Thespian Society will present the operetta "Trial by Jury" in the Stephen's Opera House. It was played by the same society last season and drew a crowded house, who approved it by generous applause. The cast of characters has been much strengthened and next Wednesday evening it will probably be favored by as large an audience as was the late "Uncle Tom's Cabin." In addition to the operetta, the humorous farce, "I've Written to Brown" will be rendered and doubt less in a manner that will leave no room for criticism.

High winds have prevailed in this vicinity at intervals for several days past. Last Friday evening shortly after dark a heavy gust of wind removed a blind from a building on First street, between Oneida and Cayuga, and rattled it around the street for some time, together with some pieces of board and small rubbish in front of Lathrop's new building, making a lively racket on the pavement, frightening horses and endangering pedestrians.

On Monday afternoon during the high wind the Hannibal Centre stage attempted to turn the Lewis House corner from Cayuga on to First street. Unwisely the driver had his curtains fastened down and he presented a broadside to the wind which careened the vehicle over on its side in a jiffy. The team did not prove fractious and stopped. The only person aboard of the vehicle was the driver and he crawled out unhurt.

At just the moment the stage was overturned Dr. J. Watson attempted to cross First street in front of The Times office and was blown off his feet. He was slightly hurt.

At about noon S. B. Whitaker was returning from a trip down the river with his covered delivery wagon. A heavy gust of wind struck the vehicle and overturned it, the sharp corner of the top striking the horse upon the flank and tearing out a piece of flesh. The animal was going along on a brisk trot when the catastrophe occurred, but stopped after going a few feet. Not soon enough, however, to prevent Mr. Whitaker from receiving several severe scratches about his face.

At 4 o'clock the Western Union Telegraph Company wires became useless but business was dispatched over the railroad wires until yesterday morning when the Western Union's wires were repaired. Just at dark a piece of tin a foot long by six inches wide was blown through the window of Willis Ney's news room.

A high chimney was blown from the house of Rufus Brown of Sixth street some time during the day.

In Oswego Falls the spire of the new Congregational church was slightly injured by the wind. A street lamp was demolished and numerous blinds were blown off the houses, as were also pieces of slate from the roof of the factory buildings.

A snow storm set in Monday night and continued during yesterday and today, several inches of snow falling.

The finest gift book in existence is Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms. The penmanship, epistolary letters, album selections wedding ceremonies and beautiful forms of ornamental letters make it desirable for the young lady. The notes of invitation, family records, choice poems, and many social forms make it attractive to the lady of mature years. The legal and commercial forms, parlimentary rules, writing for the press, interest tables, bank forms and important reference tables make it indispensable for all men; while to the boy, as a guide and instructor in the formation of correct habits in doing business, this is the most valuable book in world. "Hill's Manual."

Hale at Eighty-nine.

Freeman Gasper passed his 89th birthday last Saturday and is still hale and hearty. The event was celebrated by a pleasant call from a number of his relatives, who assisted in demolishing a good dinner provided by his amiable daughter Mrs. John VanBuren. The Times staff was favored on Monday with some of the choicest viands of the repast and we take this occasion to express our thanks and to wish Mr. Gasper many pleasant returns of the happy event.

The subject of this notice was born in Pittsfield, Conn., and in 1812 removed to the town of Volney where he has since resided. Shortly after coming hither he enlisted and went to the front at Oswego to fight the Britishers.

BRANDETH'S PILLS

They are compounded of Roots, Herbs and Gums of the most healing and beneficial kind,

As a Family Medicine they are unrivalled, curing Head-ache, Constipation, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia—clearing the blood of all impurities —acting on the Liver, Kidneys and other important organs, removing the waste tissue, and adding years to the lives of all who use them.

For fifty years they have been used by the American public, and their constantly increasing sales show how they are appreciated.

A Perfect Remedy in 20 Diseases.

Ashfield, Mass.

I am verging on eighty years, and deem it my duty to suffering humanity to say that my long life is due to Brandreth's Pills which have been my sole medicine for half a century. I know the last forty-three years of my life is owing solely to their use. Your Pills saved me many times after the best medical skill in several States had given me up as hopeless. I have had many converts to purgation with Brandreth's Pills, and have seen them perform almost miracles of cure. For children, a few doses have cured measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough. In all female troubles and weakness I have never known them to fail. In adult males I have known them to cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney disease, dysentery and diarrhoea; even dropsy, paralysis, and apoplexy have yielded to a persistent course of Brandreth's Pills. In fact I have found them the true Life Elixir. They act as continual preventives against the effects of time, disease and labor.

[illegible] question of [illegible] The contest was between Low, the independent, and Hendrix, an ex-reporter of the New York Sun. The former was the citizen's candidate and the latter stood in with the machine part of the Democratic party. The reports began to arrive at ten o'clock and as the first lot came from strong democratic wards, giving Hendrix large majorities, the "great unwashed" took it for granted that their man was elected, and with brazen lungs they scattered the report over the city. The report held good until about one o'clock and then Low's prospects began to brighten. At three o'clock a cloud began to settle over the democrats and at five they were completely obscured. The morning papers confirmed the hopes of Low's friends, and by noon it was a foregone conclusion that he again would occupy the Mayor's chair.

Hendrix had the support of the New York Sun, and, as I said before, the democratic machine. It has become a notorious fact that any man whom the Sun strongly supports is sure of defeat. Examples—the last two Presidential candidates and several city officials. The campaign was a warm one and the music began as soon as the two men were nominated. For two weeks back mass meetings have been held every night by both parties and on Sunday Beecher and Talmage both preached political sermons. The city was flooded with campaign documents and in every available place banners and transpariencies were hung. Seth Low, the successful candidate, is thirty-five years of age and is a fine looking man. During his first term he has served Brooklyn faithfully and has even given up his business to better attend to his duties. He has increased the number of public schools and supplied them with free books; has purified and strengthened the departments, cleaned the streets and hastened the completion of the great bridge. His friends are sure that the gubernatorial and even the presidential chair is within his grasp. Long may he live!

Last Sunday I had occasion to go up the Bowery in a Third Avenue car. I took a seat between a Turk and a Chinaman, each in his native costume. Just across a German was talking to a companion and in the corner a dirty son of sunny Italy was conversing with a representative of France. A burly negro stood on the front platform smoking a poor cigar and talking with the Irish driver. The conductor was English and with the remaining passengers I think that most of the nations of the earth were represented. Each person was a curiosity to each other and as I gazed at the motly collection I thought that America was a great country and its resources were many.

Never before has there been so many attractions in the theatrical line in the city at one time. A person is bewildered by the array of talent and hardly knows which way to turn. Henry Irving and his English troupe have created a favorable impression at the Star Theatre. At his reception by the Lotus club last week he met with a very hearty welcome and it has been the same way on the stage. Joe Jefferson is at the Union Square, playing "The Cricket on the Hearth." "Excelsior" is still at Niblo's and "Moths" has entered its third week at Wallacks. Fanny Davenport at the Fourteenth Street Theatre has been playing to crowded houses, in Sardon's Parisian success "Fedora." "The Duke's Motto" has been revived at the Fifth Avenue, with Chas. Coghlan in the title role. "The Stranglers" of Paris is at the New Park and "Cheek" is on at Rankins. "In the Ranks" was brought out at the Standard last week and is a great success. This play is put on with the finest scenery ever shown in New York, and the mechanical effects are wonderful. It is of the "Youth" family. "The Rajah" is still at the Madison Square and like its predecessors is destined to run a year. Barrett has transferred "Francesca da Remeni" to the Park in Brooklyn. This is one of the finest tragedies that has been put on the boards this season. It is purely American, for it was written by an American (Hon. Geo. Baker of Phila.) and played by one of America's best actors. Everyone agrees that this is the finest character that Barrett has created. Other great guns are here but these are the principal ones. The opera this year is receiving more patronage than formerly, and this probably is on account of the new Metropolitan Opera House. Fashion has declared that the opera is "the thing" and so every one—that can—goes. Mapleson and his troupe are at the Academy, torturing the musical scale, while Abbey with his followers at the Metropolitan holds himself liable to arrest "for murder on the high C's." All the old familiar operas have been produced but very few new ones. [illegible]

OBITUARY NOTES.

JOHN F. BOARDMAN.

John F., only son of John and Electa Boardman died Sunday morning of a lingering consumption. He was born in Fulton 26 years ago the 25th of last March and was educated in the schools of this village. After leaving school he became an expert telegrapher under the tuition of Clayton Kenyon. Forsaking this branch of industry for a time he graduated at the Philadelphia Dental College and followed that profession for a time, having an office in Fulton. Finally returning to his first love he organized the Fulton Telephone Exchange, which he subsequently sold to the Empire State Telephone Exchange. In February, 1881, he became manager of the Western Union Telegraph office of this village, E. F. Blanchard resigning in his favor. He has been in declining health for the past year or more and was obliged to give up office business in March last. Mr. Boardman was a young man of excellent habits, was generous, affable and a general favorite among his many friends who will sincerely regret his early death. He was gifted with excellent executive ability and promised a successful business career. He leaves a wife and a son about 2 years old.

The funeral services occurred yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of the deceased the Rev. J. S. Riggs officiating.

The following resolutions of respect have been passed by Steamer Company No. I of the Fire Department:

Whereas, Through an allwise and everseeing providence Bro. John Boardman has been taken from us, be it

Resolved, That in his death we have lost a member who though he had served his time with us was held in remembrance by our company as a tried and true fireman.

Resolved, that we deeply sympathize with his family in their loss.

Resolved, That our session room be draped in mourning for ninety days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in each of the village papers, also that a copy be engrossed and presented to the family of the deceased.

Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

How Watch Cases are Made.

A plate of SOLID GOLD 14 2-10 karats fine is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this plate the various parts of the cases—backs, centers, bezels, etc. are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving, and engine-turning. The composition metal gives it needed strength, stiffness and solidity, while the written guarantee of the manufacturers warranting each case to wear twenty years proves that it contains all the gold that can possibly be needed. This guarantee is given from actual results, as many of these cases have been worn perfectly smooth by years of use without wearing through the gold.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organ. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This Liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be as unequalled [illegible]. We [illegible] offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,
MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1883.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his watch caught in a hitch and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours fishing it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

"I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. [illegible]"

Winter cloaks will be very long, high on the shoulders, fitting close and with small ottoman sleeves.

A Gainsborough hat of deep blue Ribbons velvet, with feathers of the same, is most becoming to a blonde.

Loose, printed jackets and plaited blouse bodices will be worn in wool dresses made as they were during the summer.

Snake bracelets of beaten gold with ruby eyes and rows of emeralds about the body, are among the newest designs in jewelry.

Some of the long new polonaises have six darts in front, taken very deep, with the extra fullness left in the front of the polonaise skirt.

The newest handkerchiefs are white cambric with a deep plain border inside the hem, the border being embroidered in a floral design with a white linen thread.

A favorite way of making morning gowns is to plait the bodice in fine plaits from the throat and imprison the waist in a wide belt of velvet fastened by a silver buckle; the plaiting below the belt forms a frill that covers the hips.

There are three new styles in the gauntlet gloves: the "Templar," which flares at the top; a style which laces over the wrists, and a plainly-hooked cuff. They all have embroidered backs, and are most popular in dark tan shades. Four-buttoned kid gloves, heavily stitched on the back, are worn again.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:
"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

WOOING BY PROXY.

She is leaning back in a deep crimson [illegible], with a white dress sweeping in [illegible] shining folds about her. She is [illegible] to two or three men with that [illegible] weary grace he has grown accustomed to see in her, and which is so different from the joyous smiles of the Jeanne de Beaujen whom he loved so long ago. He is watching her from the opposite side of the salon, as he stands talking with his hostess, and he tells himself that it is for the last time. He is going to her presently, and he knows how coldly she will raise the dark eyes that once never met his without confessing that she loved him. He knows just what he will say and what she will answer and there is no need for [illegible] in this last scene of the tragedy.

"A man should know when he is beaten," he is thinking, while he smiles vaguely in reply to Madam de Soule's commonplaces. "There is more stupidity than courage in not accepting a defeat while there is yet time to retreat with some dignity. For six weeks I have shown her, with a directness that has, I [illegible] say, been very amusing to our mutual friends, that after ten years' absence my only object in returning to [illegible] is her society. She cannot avoid meeting me in public, but she has steadily refused to see me when I call upon her, or to permit me a word with her alone. I have been a fool to forget that all these years in which I regretted her she has naturally despised me, but at least it is not just of her to refuse me a hearing."

The moment he has been waiting for is come. The little court about her disperses, until there is but one man beside her, and she is glancing around with a look of mild appeal against the continuance of his society.

De Palliser has escaped from his hostess in an instant, and the next he is murmuring, with the faintest suspicion of a tremor in his voice, "Will Mme. Miramon permit me a dance?"

"Thanks, M. De Palliser, but I am [illegible] dancing this evening," she replies, with exactly the tone and glance he expects.

"Will madam give me a few moment's serious conversation?" and this time the tremor is distinct, for even the nineteenth century horror of melodrama cannot keep a man's nerves steady when he is asking a question on which his whole future depends.

"One does not come to balls for serious conversation—" she began lightly.

"Where may I come then?" he interrupted eagerly.

"Nowhere. There is no need for serious conversation between us, M. De Palliser," she replies, haughtily, and [illegible] she takes the arm of the much [illegible] gentleman beside her and moves [illegible]

[illegible] all he has prophesied to himself, [illegible] for a while the lights swim dizzily before him, and the passionate [illegible] of the Strauss waltz the band [illegible] his heart like a knife. [illegible] he does not realize that [illegible] standing quite motionless, gazing [illegible] despair in his eyes, after Mme. [illegible] slender figure, and that [illegible] people [illegible] have seen and [illegible] at him with that [illegible] sentimental catastrophe [illegible] the spectators. [illegible] presently [illegible] he comes [illegible] Lucille de [illegible]

[illegible] of teaching [illegible] Jeanne de Miramon's sister, who believes that much as she loves you, you love her even more."

For the second time this evening De Pallisier forgets possible observers, and clasping both the girl's slender hands in his he murmurs unsteadily: "God bless you!"

"You forget that we have an audience, monsieur," she says, withdrawing her hands quickly, but with a smile of frank comradeship. "I have a story to tell you, and not much time to tell it in. Years ago, when Jeanne left her convent on becoming the fiance to M. de Miramon, she met you at her first ball, and you loved each other. It was very foolish, for you were a cadet of your house, and a sous-lieutenant, and Jeanne had not a sou, so both the families were furious; but all would have ended as well as a fairy tale if you had been reasonable. Jeanne met you time after time in secret, and promised any amount of patience, but she would not run away and marry you in defiance of her parents; so you tormented her with doubts, and shamed her with suspicions until she dreaded those secret meetings almost as much as she longed for them. At last, after making a more violent quarrel than usual, you exchanged from your regiment at Versailles to one stationed in Algiers, and left her no refuge from the reproaches of our father and mother, but to M. de Miramon. He might have refused to marry her after hearing her confess, as she did, that she had given her heart to you, and that only your desertion had induced her to consent to their marriage. But he did not; he had better revenge than that. He married her, and for eight years he tortured her in every way that a jealous and cruel man can torment a proud, pure woman. He opened all her letters, he made spies of her servants, and not a day passed that he did not insult her with some mention of your name. Our parents died soon after the marriage, and I was at the convent. There was nothing to be done with her misery but to endure, knowing that she owed it all to your patience. Can you wonder that she is unforgiving?"

He is leaning on the small table between them with folded arms and down bent eyes, and he is very pale, even through the bronze of ten African summers.

"I loved her always" he says, almost inaudibly, then pauses; nor does he finish the sentence, though she waits for him to do so.

"You love her? You could not have wrecked her life more utterly if you had hated her. Can you wonder that she has grown to fear the thought of love that has been so cruel to her as yours and her husband's? Monsieur, my brother-in-law, died two years ago —God is so good!" continued Lucille fiercely. "Since then Jeanne has been at peace, and she shrinks with absolute horror from disturbing the calm which has come after such storms. She fears you, she avoids you, because—shall I tell you why?"

She can see his lips quiver, even under the heavy mustache, but he neither speaks nor raises his eyes.

"She loves you," murmured Lucille, just aloud.

He lifts his eyes now and looks at her dumbly for an instant; then rising abruptly walks away.

He comes back presently.

"My child," he says very gently, "do not try to make me believe that, unless you are very sure, for if I once believed it again, I—I"

"I am sure as I live that Jeanne has never ceased to love you, and that you can force her to confess it if you will make love to me."

"I? You? You are laughing at me!" with a rush of color to his dark face.

"Do yo think so ill of Jeanne's sister?" she asked softly.

"Pardon. I am scarcely myself, and cannot imagine how."

"Jeanne will not receive you because she knows her own heart and is afraid of it. She fears that you will destroy the hard won peace which she values so highly. But you are wealthy, distinguished, the head of your name—a very different person from what you were ten years ago, and she can find no reason for refusing you as my suitor, if I consent, and as my chaperon she must be present at all our meetings. [illegible] begin to understand? [illegible] that your love is not [illegible]

[illegible] cannot [illegible] you who have long [illegible] to marry him, and he is the best party in Paris, and does [illegible] for his age."

It is quite true there can be no objection to the wealthy and distinguished Marquis de Pallisier if Lucille is willing, none but the pain at her heart, which she is too ashamed even to confess to herself. So a note is written, fixing an hour even for his first visit, and Mme. de Miramon prepares herself to meet the man whom she last saw alone in the passionate anger of a lovers' quarrel.

There is a sound of wheels in the courtyard, and she rises with a hasty glance at her reflection in the mirror.

"His old friend!" she murmurs scornfully. "I dare say I look like an old woman beside Lucille."

Then she turns with a look of graceful welcome, for the door is thrown open and a servant announces:

"M. le Marquis de Pallisier."

"Nothing could give me greater pleasure than to receive as my sister's suitor the old friend of whom the world tells me such noble things." She utters her little speech naturally as though she had not rehearsed it a dozen times, and holds out her pretty hand to him.

"You are too good, madame," he replies, very low; and she reflects that he is, of course, a little embarrassed. "I am afraid you had much to forgive in those days so long ago, but time, I trust, has changed me."

"It would be sad, indeed, if time did not give us wisdom and coldness in exchange for all it takes from us," she says, with a quick thrill of pain that he should speak of ten years as if it were an eternity.

"Not coldness," he exclaims, coming nearer, and looking at her with eyes that make her feel a girl again. "If you could see my heart, you—"

"May I enter, my sister," asks the gay voice of Lucille, as she appears from behind the portiere at so fortunate a moment for the success of her plot that it is to be feared that she had been eavesdropping.

De Pallisier turns at once and presses her hands to his lips.

"Mademoiselle," he says tenderly, "I am at your feet."

Then begins a charming little comedy of love-making, in which Lucille plays her role with pretty coquetry and he with infinite zeal.

And the chaperon bends over her lacework and hears the caressing tones she thought she had forgotten, and sees the tender glances she imagined she had ceased to regret, all given to her younger sister in her unregarded presence. She is very patient and used to suffering but at length she can endure no longer, and not daring to leave the room she moves away to a distant writing-table, where she is at least beyond hearing.

There is an instant pause between the conspirators, and while De Pallissier's eyes wistfully follow Mme. de Miramon, Lucille seizes her opportunity with a promptness that would have done credit to a Richelieu or a Talleyrand, or any other prince.

"Courage, monsieur!" she murmurs. "She has been cold to me ever since your note came. You would make a charming jenne premier at the Francais only when you do say anything very tender, do you remember to look at me instead of Jeanne." And she breaks into a laugh so utterly amused that he presently laughs, too, and the sound of their mirth causes an odd blot in the poor chaperon's writing.

A month has dragged by wretchedly enough, both to the conspirators and their victim, and like all things earthly, has come to an end at last. Even Lucille's energy could not keep De Pallissier to his role, if he did not believe that in surrendering it he must give up the bitter sweet of Jeanne's daily presence, which even in its serene indifference had had become the one charm of life to him. Mme. de Miramon and her sister are spending a week at her villa near Paris, and De Pallissier, who is to accompany them on a riding party, has arrived a little late, and finds both sisters already in the courtyard, with some horses and grooms, when he enters. Lucille comes to him at once [illegible], with a look of alarm instead of her usual coquetry.

"Do not let Jeanne ride Etoile," she said [illegible]. [illegible]

[illegible] he whispered, [illegible] "Does it hurt you that I should find it at last—I who have loved you for all these years?"

"[illegible] Lucille," [illegible] falters, moving away from him, but with eyes that shine and lips that quiver with bewildered joy.

"Never mind Lucille," cries that young lady very cheerfully from the doorway. "It has been all a plot for your happiness, Jeanne, which would never have succeeded if you had known your sister as well as she knew you. To think that I would be content with the wreck of any man's heart!—fi donc! When my day comes,

"Like Alexander, I will reign,
And I will reign alone."

The people of Dakota are a shrewd, sharp, cunning lot without a doubt. The emigration to the Territory has dwindled lately and gave evidence that the population might not be enough to work up a feeling in favor of making Dakota a State, but the people are equal to the emergency, and now they tell tales of the discovery of gold at Lisbon. If a little effort has been made to properly "salt" the creeks and mountain sides the rush to Dakota will be wonderful within the next sixty days.—[Buffalo News.

The air is chill; we feel the icy breath
Of winter, stalking in at summer's death,
Exultant that her gentle reign is o'er;
No more doth the peerless Isabel wait,
For her lover bold at the garden gate,

While her patient sire, by the kitchen fire,
Sadly sighs as he thinks how the coal bins lower.

John W. Mackey said to a reporter of The St. Paul Pioneer Press: "Mining is the most precarious business in the world." "You can well afford to say it," the reporter retorted, "with $30,000,000 to your credit. But did you think so in 1860, when you were pushing an ore car in the Ophir mine?" "I knew it then only in theory, for my salary of $4 a day was always sure, and my wants were simple. You always hear of the successful miners. The men who disappear and are lost in Pauper alley are not so often quoted."

Her lips were like the leaves, he said;

By pressing them she hinted.
The meaning of this gentle hint
The lover did discern;
And so he clasped her round the neck.
And glued his lips to her'n.

Dr. Henry Foster, the gentleman in question, is [illegible] years of age [illegible] the leading health resort of the country. Several years ago this benevolent man wisely determined to be his own executor; and, therefore, turned over this magnificent property worth $300,000, as a free gift to a board of trustees, representing the principal evangelical denominations. Among the trustees are Bishop A. C. Coxe, Protestant Episcopal, Buffalo; Bishop Mathew Simpson, Philadelphia, Methodist Episcopal; President M. B. Anderson, of the University of Rochester; Rev. Dr. Clark, Secretary of the A. B. C. F. M., Boston. The benevolent purpose of the institution is the care: 1st.—of evangelical missionaries and their families whose health has been broken in their work. 2d.—of ministers of any denomination, in good standing. 3d.—of members of any church; who otherwise would be unable to secure such care and treatment. The current expenses of the institution are met by the receipts from the hundreds of distinguished and wealthy people who every year crowd its utmost capacity. Here come men and women who were once in perfect health, but who neglected the first symptoms of disease. The uncertain pains they felt at first were overlooked until their health became impaired. They little realized the danger before them or how alarming even trifling ailments might prove. They constitute all classes, including ministers and bishops, lawyers, judges, statesmen, millionaires, journalists, college professors and officials from all parts of the land.

Drawing the Morning Democrat and Chronicle from his pocket, the reporter remarked, "Doctor, that letter of yours has created a great deal of talk and many of our readers have questioned its authenticity."

"To what do you refer?" remarked the doctor.

"Have you not seen the paper?"

"Yes, but I have not had time to read it yet."

The reporter thereopon showed him the letter which was as follows:

CLIFTON SPRINGS, SANITARIUM CO.,
CLIFTON SPRINGS, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1883.

DEAR SIR: I am using Warner's Safe Cure, and I regard it as the best remedy for some forms of kidney disease that we have. I am watching with great care some cases I am now treating with it, and I hope for favorable results.

I wish you might come down yourself, as I would like very much to talk with you about your sterling remedy and show you over our institution.

Yours truly,
[Signed] HENRY FOSTER, M. D.

"I do not see why anybody should be skeptical concerning that letter," remarked the doctor.

Isn't it unusual for a physician of your standing and influence to commend a proprietary preparation?"

"I don't know how it may be with others, but in this institution we allow no person to dictate to us what we shall use. Our purpose is to cure the sick, and for that work we use anything we know to be valuable. Because I know Warner's Safe Cure is a valuable preparation, I commend it. As its power is manifest under my use, so shall I add to the completeness of my commendation.

"Have you ever analyzed it, doctor."

"We always analyze before we try any preparation of which we do not know the constituents; it does not give the all important proportions. The remarkable power of Warner's Safe Cure undoubtedly consists in the proportions according to which its elements are mixed. While there may be a thousand remedies made of the same elements, unless they are put together in proper proportions they are worthless as kidney and liver preparations.

I hope some day to meet Mr. Warner personally, and extend fuller congratulations to him on the excellence of his preparations. I have heard much of him as the founder of the Warner Observatory, and as a man of large benevolence. The reputed high character of the man himself gave assurance to me in the first place that he would not put a remedy upon the market that was not trustworthy; and it was a source of a great deal of gratification to find out by actual experiment that the remedy itself sustained my impressions."

The conclusion reached by Dr. Foster is precisely the same found by Dr. Dio Lewis, Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Ex-Surgeon Gallagher and others, and prove beyond a doubt the great efficiency of the remedy which has awakened so much attention in the land and rescued so many men, women and children from disease and death.

THE MARKETS.

CHEESE.

UTICA, Nov. 19.—Buyers have waked up to the fact that fall cheese is not so plentiful after all. The fact is that since the first of October the make has been shrinking very rapidly, the cold weather of the fall having caused a larger shrinkage of milk than usual, and the factories having been compelled to close fully two weeks earlier than last fall in consequence thereof. This accounts for the accessions to the ranks of buyers to-day, and the strong desire manifested to get possession of cheese at almost any price. The prices on "late ends" are likely to be unusually good, and we imagine that less will be heard about pasty and slack-cured goods. We hear of two large sales made in Lewis county last week composed of September and October makes mixed, one of which brought 12c. and the other 12¼c. In fact, the cheese in central New York has been picked up so closely during the last ten days, that there is now precious little left. A total of 8,511 boxes were disposed of. The ruling price was 11⅛c. The Utica market will close December 4.

LITTLE FALLS, Nov. 19—There has been an active trade in cheese here today, though the amount sold is smaller than usual. Buyers appeared anxious to secure all of the fine cheese they could, and upon the market there was a strong push to engage the nice lots of small cheese, both of farm dairy and of the smaller factories which sell at that time, and prices on the latter were carried to a high figure. On the afternoon market, several factories closed out their entire stocks for the balance of the season at 11¾c. Most factories in this section are still making, but of course in very light quantities. Following are the sales of the day.

Lots	Boxes	Price
6	440	11¼
16	1,287	11⅜
25	2,256	11¾
6	552	Com
53	4,535
Farm Dairy	722
Total	5,257

On the Fulton market Monday evening about 800 boxes of cheese were offered from eight factories. A few lots sold as high as 11¾c., but the ruling price was 11½c.

BUTTER.

At Little Falls Monday 120 packages of butter sold at from 22c. to 26c.

HOPS.

During the past week about 750 bales of hops have been purchased by Utica dealers, all but about one hundred having been taken by one house. Prices have ranged all the way from 15 to 25c. The best quality can not be bought less than 25c.

TOBACCO.

Market is steady. Quotations locally unchanged; Havana seed, ordinary, 15 and 20c., and extra quality, 20 and 24c,

[illegible] that he was stole [illegible]

He had charge of a [illegible] cash drawer and made deposits in the bank, rendering an account to the company of all the moneys that passed through his hands.

It seems that recently he has been making renderings to the company in excess of the amounts he deposited in the bank, being obliged to make his balance sheet out correctly or his dishonesty would be at once apparent, so he made false returns to the company, and pocketed the difference.

The Oswego Falls Manufacturing Company and the Citizen's National Bank, with which the company has all its dealings, have a settlement once in six months, so that North's defalcations could not have been going on for any considerable period. The company estimate their loss at from $1,200 to $1,500 but cannot at present state the exact amount. It was learned that North had gone to Syracuse and thither Officer Frank McCann was sent in quest of him, but after a diligent search the officer returned without his prisoner. McCann learned in Syracuse, however, that North had bought a ticket for New York and he engaged a detective to follow him to that city.

The Syracuse Sunday Times prints the following concerning North's meanderings in that city last Friday: "He is a prominent member of the Oswego Falls Cricket team and has played in several games against our cricket team. Consequently he is well known and was well liked among the cricketers here. Immediately on his arrival, he went to a well-known cricket headquarters and treated and drank several times, and had a good time generally, it seems. From there he went to Bright's restaurant and had a pleasant visit. North's next move was to invest freely in underwear and buying an overcoat at Kent & Miller's. After these transactions he returned to the cricket headquarters, where he had left a parcel, and told the proprietor that he was about to take the 1.50 express east on the Central."

North is about twenty-five years of age and is a native of Yorkshire, England. He has been in the employ of the Oswego Falls Manufacturing Company about ten years and worked his way up from the position of office boy to that of assistant book-keeper. He was a general favorite among his companions and was considered perfectly reliable by the company whose confidence he had gained by faithful service. Of late it is said he has been considerably dissiyated.

North was inclined to be portly and was of sandy complexion. He left a wife and two children in Oswego Falls.

Success Assured.

By Monday very few of the choice seats of the Opera House for this evening's entertainment by the Thespian society remained unsold, and it is probable that the Opera House will contain one of the largest audiences to-night that it ever held. The operetta was so highly appreciated and thoroughly enjoyed last season that the immense patronage which it is receiving upon its second presentation is not surprising. In addition to the operetta the audience will be favored with the amusing farce "I've written to Browne." The cast of last named is as follows:

Mr. Peregrine Dotts	Mr. Ross
Mr. Otway Sheridan Browne	Mr. J. Bacchus
Mr. Chas. Heatherington	Mr. H. Bacchus
William, the Gardener,
Mrs. Walsingham	Miss Ramsden
Laura (her sister)	Mrs. Ross

The following is the cast of the operetta "Trial by Jury:"

Judge	Mr. Smiddy
Plaintiff	Miss Smiddy
Counsel for Plaintiff	Mr. R. Carr
Defendent	Mr. H. Bacchus
Foreman of the Jury	Mr. Robertshaw
Usher	Mr. Gilbert
Bridesmaids, Jurymen Spectators, etc.	chorus of trained voices.
Accompanists	Mrs. Ross and Mr. J. White
Musical Director	Mr. H. Bacchus

Nugent's Metropolitans.

This favorite company began their second engagement here last Monday evening with the "Honeymoon." The acting and dressing were never surpassed here. Mr. Nugent as the Duke, and Messrs. Munroe, Jackson, Nicholson, Ware and Love were all elegantly costumed, and played their parts well. Miss Newcomb has become a favorite with our citizens, and May Nugent always was one. Miss Tennant deserves to be complimented also. No company ever visited our place that is held in such high esteem by all. Aside from their ability on the stage, they are ladies and gentlemen off of it. We say, come again and we'll be glad to see you. They close their engagement to-night (Saturday) with the great play "A Life's Secret." Don't fail to fill the hall to-night for they deserve it.—[Coxsackie News.

The above named company will play next week in the Stephens Opera House, commencing Monday evening. See advertisement in another column.

A young married lady on Third street in trying to build a fire recently, saturated the kindlings with kerosene, and when she placed a lighted match to them, she thought for an instant there had been an explosion. But with rare presence of mind (in a young and pretty bride) she extinguished the burning dress, and then carried her scorched and smarting hand to Surgeon Pardee, without once screaming fire.

Dean Maxon, a lad 16 years of age, who enlisted in the United States Navy two years ago, having been discharged returned to Fulton last Saturday. Maxon was brought up in Fulton and had a desire to go to sea, so he enlisted in the navy two years ago. He has been across the ocean twice and has been to the West Indies and other places. After being absent a year he deserted and came home. Finally going back of his own accord he was shipped in another vessel. He now comes home discharged.

The Fulton Reading Circle met Monday evening at the home Mrs. E. H. French. Mrs. D. W. Gardner read a very instructive article upon French literature, embracing sketches of the literary work of Rensard, Bromtome, Jodelle, and John Calvin, and an historical article upon Joan of Arc prepared by Miss Carrie Gardner and read by Miss. Ellen Emerick. The "Song of Roland" was read by Miss May Loomis. These comprised the main features of the evening's entertainment. The circle will meet again with Mrs. French next Monday evening.

Measles has almost assumed the form of an epidemic in Fulton and Oswego Falls and vicinity. A leading Fulton physician expressed the belief Monday that there were at least 150 cases within a radius of four miles of Fulton and Oswego Falls.

The Sunday evening services of the Fulton churches now commence at 7 p. m., instead of 7.30. The Oswego Falls Congregational church has changed its hour of morning service from 10.30 to 11 o'clock. In the evening services commence at 7 o'clock, instead of 7.30 as heretofore.

William Miller was brought before Police Justice Piper last Friday for stealing a watch belonging to James Wilson. Wilson had loaned Miller the watch, but as the latter did not return at the time agreed upon with the watch he was arrested and found guilty. The matter was amicably adjusted by each party paying half the costs.

Conn's Coat.

Dion Boucicault tells the story—as only he can tell one—of an incident of his first performance of the "Shaughraun" at a small town in Cornwall, situated about the mouth of the largest mine in that section. The theatre had just been completed, and this was the initiatory play, attended by a large body of miners, most of whom had never been in a theatre before. The first two acts were listened to in silence, but with manifestly absorbed attention. When the curtain rose for the third act a burly looking pick wielder stepped over the footlights, and in the Cornish dialect, presented the astonished star with a hat full of coppers, the result of a collection taken up in the audience to buy Conn. a better coat. It was a signal triumph for Conn. and the "hat full of coppers" reminds us that everybody may buy coats and overcoats and suits of first quality and excellent make and wholly satisfactory, just as cheaply at Kent & Miller's, 18 & 20 South Salina street. Don't fail to call in and see their stock.

The Ellis Family of bell ringers will give an entertainment in the M. E. church next Wednesday evening. The Ellis Family is highly spoken of by the press and doubtless a large audience will be in attendance if the weather is propitious, which it is hoped will be the case. The ladies of the M. E. church propose to give a series of entertainments, of which this is the second, the proceeds to be devoted to the payment of the expenditures for the repairs to the M. E. parsonage.

The C. L. S. C. met last Friday evening at the residence of M. V. Connell. There was a large attendance present and a very enthusiastic meeting was held. An exercise in Greek history was conducted by Miss Maria Highriter and an exercise in political economy by F. E. Bacon, while G. F. Schenck read an essay on "Physical Science." and Mrs. M. V. Connell questioned the company from the Greek text book and Miss Ada Thayer put some questions relative to the geography of Greece. An illustrated exercise in German was conducted by E. R. Redhead, and Mrs. A. Emerick presented a review on Sunday reading in the Chautauquan. Rev. W. F. Markham was present and exhibited an interesting map delineating the history of the nations of the earth from the earliest times. The next meeting will be held at the residence of B. R. Howe one week from Friday evening.

"Mrs. J. T. Sheridan, of Fulton, a pupil of Mr. Stiles, has a fruit study at Hendricks' which shows some good artistic work. The treatment of the various kinds of grapes is first rate. There is a certain quality of hardness, or lack of freedom, which is materially enhanced by the sharpness of the marble table top; but as student's or amateur work it is praiseworthy as a whole, and we could wish that more paintings as good were done by the advanced students and amateurs of this city."

A Slight Fire.

About 6 o'clock last Thursday evening fire was discovered in a building at the west end of the lower bridge owned by John Flannery and occupied by D. S. Bullock as a wagon repair shop. The upper portion of the building which contained considerable lumber and other stock was entirely consumed.

The lumber and stock was valued at more than $300 and was covered by insurance to the amount of $150. The fire was extinguished by the vigorous aid of the Fulton Fire Department and the neighbors, to all of whom Mr. Bullock desires to return his thanks. It is thought the fire originated from the chimney which was in an imperfect condition.

Mr. Bullock was insured in the Phœnix of Hartford of which C. W. Streeter is the representative. A check for the amount of the insurance was received from the company this morning.

Good Templars Anniversary.

The second anniversary exercises of the Fulton Lodge of Good Templars was held at the lodge rooms on Monday evening and was largely attended by the order and their friends. The program of entertainment comprised an anniversary address and welcome by Mrs. S. Reynolds, a recitation by Miss Susie Day, a recitation by Will Mosher, entitled "Mother's Song," a class exercise by members of the Juvenile Temple connected with the lodge, consisting of marching, singing, etc., the exercises being interspersed with music by the lodge choir and exhibitions of high art, tableaux and charades, concluding with an exhibition of "Madam Jarley's Wax Works" in character and costumes. At the close of the public exercises a meeting of the lodge was held and several persons were initiated.

Change of Time.

A new time table went into effect upon the D. L. & W. railroad Monday, changes being made in two trains per day each way. The morning trains now meet at the Fulton station at 8:03 a. m., while the evening train south does not reach Fulton station until 6:24, 26 minutes later than before. The evening train from the south now arrives at 8:21 or ten minutes earlier than formerly. The omnibus time table has been changed to conform with the change of time by the railroad and can be noted in the schedule at the top of our local columns.

The New York Night Express going south will not stop at Minetto, South Granby or Stiles. Passengers for either of these stations can take the freight and accommodation which leaves Oswego at 5 p. m.

Handsome Cards.

F. E. Goodjon is giving out to purchasers some of the handsomest and most tasty cards we have seen. THE WONDER OF HEALING!

Catarrh. The Extract is the only specific for this disease, Cold in Head, &c. Our "Catarrh Cure," specially prepared to meet serious cases, contains all the curative properties of the Extract; our Nasal Syringe invaluable for use in catarrhal affections, is simple and inexpensive.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia. No other preparation has cured so many cases of these distressing complaints as the Extract.

Hemorrhages. Bleeding from the Lungs, Stomach, Nose, or from any cause, is speedily controlled and stopped.

Diphtheria & Sore Throat. Use the Extract promptly. It is a sure cure. Delay is dangerous.

For Piles, Blind, Bleeding or Itching, it is the greatest known remedy.

For Ulcers, Old Sores or Open Wounds its action upon these is most remarkable.

Caution.—POND'S EXTRACT has been imitated. The genuine has the words "POND'S EXTRACT" blown in the glass, and our picture trade-mark on surrounding buff wrapper. None other is genuine. Always insist on having POND'S EXTRACT. Take no other preparation.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. I have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

How Watch Cases are Made.

It is a fact not generally known that the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases really contain more pure gold than many "solid" gold cases. The demand for these watch cases has led to the manufacture of a very poor grade of solid gold watch cases—low in quality, and deficient in quantity. These cases are made from 4½ to 10 karats, and a 5 or 6 karat case is often sold for 12 or 14 karats. It is NOT economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will soon lose its color, or one so soft that it will lose its shape and fail to shut tight, thus letting in dust and damaging the works, or one so thin that a slight blow will break the crystal, and perhaps the movement. It IS economy to buy a James Boss' Gold Watch Case, in which NONE of these things ever occur. This watch case is not an experiment—it has been made nearly thirty years.

HAZLETON, PA., Oct. 24, 1881.

I sold two James Boss' Gold Watch Cases thirty years ago, when they first came out, and they are in good condition yet. One of them is carried by a carpenter, Mr. I. W. Drake, of Hazleton, and only shows the wear in one or two places; the other by Mr. Bowman, of Cunningham, Pa.; and I can produce one or both of these cases at any time.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

What the Great Fish Culturist Says.

Last winter I went to Florida and while there contracted Malaria in a very severe form. When I returned home I went to bed and remained there until spring. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of Malaria can appreciate my condition. As I failed to get any better I determined to try a remedy made by a gentleman in whom I had the greatest confidence. I am happy to say it affected permanent relief and that I am well to-day through the influence of Warner's SAFE Cure. After such an experience I can most heartily recommend it to all sufferers.

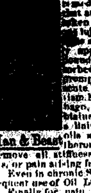
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



For Man & Beast

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty-five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscle, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. R. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 28, 1881.

Bustles and crinolettes grow larger, while skirt draperies are being made more ample to accommodate them.

Refinement in dress proclaims refinement in other things, and showy, vulgar dress indicates corresponding qualities in the wearer.

The Moliere waistcoat and the blouse waist, worn under cut-away jackets, are favorite autumn styles.

The coming dress sleeve obliterates the shoulder seam of the corsage, extending in a point to the neck of the dress.

The most approved phase of foot-wear has been developed in the direction of low heels, broad toes, and comfortable, thick soles.

A velvet and velveteen season is predicted. The new velveteens are so handsomely finished that they are frequently taken for real velvet.

Ladies with much color need ribbon or lace ties that will have a subduing effect, while those with none at all need something that will give them a faint coloring.

Only a kid or leather glove should be used for traveling. The long-wristed pig-skin glove is by all odds the best, as when drawn over the sleeve there is no chance for dust or cinders to drift inside.

Bounded soutache is used for braiding, as the designs can be executed in raised work by its use. It is easy to give Eastern effects by carrying out a free design upon thin material.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Gentlemen—I wish to acknowledge the great benefit I received from the use of your Rheumatic Syrup. I was sick for some time, and under the doctor's care, with what he called the liver complaint and rheumatism in my back and shoulders. Could find nothing to relieve me until I commenced taking one bottle I could feel a decided improvement. I continued its use a short time and it cured me. I most cheerfully recommend it to any afflicted in like manner.

HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

Over the Rockies—A Sunday in Helena—Saloons and Gambling Halls in Full Blast.

([illegible] Phoenix Register.)

[illegible], Idaho, Oct. 15.—I think I left you in my last at Billings, a small town on the north bank of the Yellowstone, and named after the Hon. Frederick Billings, a former president of the Northern Pacific.

We have now entered the Montana division, which extends to Helena a distance of 160 miles. We follow the northerly bank as far as Livingston, a due westerly course, when we bear north by north-east for about one hundred and twenty-five miles, where we are to cross the Rockies, the great wonder of our early school days. At Livingston there is a branch road to the National Park, the great wonderland of this continent. Here we part company with the Yellowstone river with feelings of regret, for it has been to us an oasis indeed in these vast western wilds of illimitable wastes. Between Livingston and Bozeman, a distance of twenty-six miles, we cross the summit ridge of the Bozeman pass of the Belt mountains nearly six thousand feet above the level of the sea. For twelve miles the average grade is one hundred and eighty feet. Three large engines, two in front and one in the rear, are required to haul and push the train to the summit.

The two extra engines used at this place are known as the great moguls, and they are rightly named. They weigh about sixty tons each, and are devoid of tinsel or show of any kind; but in their massive strength of build they are immense; yet they are not to be confounded with the concentrated engine, which weighs, I am told, eighty tons. With these two powerful locomotives we reach the summit without detention or accident. The decent to Bozeman is made without trouble, and once more we breathe naturally again. This passage was made in the night, but the moon was shining brightly, with a clear sky and we could see enough to make us wish ourselves at home. When the tunnel at the Bozeman pass, now in process of construction is finished, a much less grade will be reached and the danger comparatively nothing. The tunnel is 3,600 feet long and 5,565 feet above the sea level, and will be completed about the 1st of January next.

We passed on to Helena, the capital of Montana, where we arrived at early sunrise. Here we saw indications of city life. Busses, carriages, express wagons, etc., were in waiting as the train hauled in.

Helena is situated on a level plain, about two miles from the station, under the very eaves of the Rocky mountains. It is nearly four thousand feet above sea level and consequently experiences some very cold weather during portions of the year. It is the capital of Montana, the home of Gov. Crosby, and contains a population of about seven thousand souls. The city is built on or near the remains of the formerly celebrated placer mine called the "Last Chance," so called from the fact that a party of miners had been prospecting for a long time with no success whatever. They had become discouraged and were about to give up when one of the party proposed as the "last chance," another trial, which proved successful. Gold was discovered, and in subsequent years very large amounts were realized. A placer mine is simply a surface mine; gold is separated from the earth by the aid of water sluices. This city is thoroughly alive with all the modern improvements, even to the electric lights.

As I have before remarked we "sailed forth" to see the town. It was Sunday and a lovely day. Business of all kinds was brisk. The stores were all open and the saloons all running. The streets were full, but quiet reigned. I entered two large gambling rooms on the first floor and prominent corners on Main street. They were occupied and the occupants were busy at play; all one could hear was the ring and chink of the coin. We did not remain long. We visited the Chinese quarters, and as the front doors were open, found many of the houses quite neat and tasty within. The Chinese number about two hundred males and eighteen women. According to my observation so far, they are well treated and considered as indispensible helps in all departments of labor. The public buildings speak well for so young a city, especially the U. S. assay office. The governor's residence was quite unpretentious, but we saw a number of private dwellings really fine. The city is furnished with the Holley water work system, and the fire department is well organized. As we passed up Main street [illegible] we found the saloons brilliantly lighted within and in front with the electric light. The front doors [illegible] open, and as there were no screens or other eastern device to shut out observation from the passer by, we had a [illegible] of the Bible hell. Here was [illegible] lewd women, and like their [illegible] described in the 5th chapter [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] hug the [illegible] sides with unflagging tenacity and slowly creep towards the summit, notwithstanding the rugged ascent. The road winds and zig-zags somewhat, following the indented valleys when possible, balancing on the side of deep ravines, and crossing great canyons upon wooden tressels from one hundred and thirteen to two hundred and twenty-six feet high.

Before we cross this last tressel the train is divided and the two monster moguls start for the summit. They have taken breath and are ready for the last and final effort, which will place us at the "Tip-top." They know their business and like well trained draught horses they commence to pull slowly at first, but steadily increasing in power and progress, both pulling together they give us the assurance of a safe journey.

There is one very sharp curve in this ride up the mountain, and we looked out from the rear car and saw the engines going east and we going west, we felt that had we the arm of "Long John Wentworth" we might shake hands with the engineer; but just at this moment the engines made a detour to the right, skirting a deep precipice to our left, and mounting a very steep grade, reached the crest or "tip top" of the Rockies at last.

Here we stopped with the centre of the train resting on the highest ridge, the engine and baggage cars inclining toward the Pacific and the three passenger cars slanting toward the Atlantic. While one of the engines returns for the rest of the train, the passengers spend the time in gathering wild flowers, bits of fir, and other mementoes of their ride.

A rough board nailed to an upright post tells us in large figures that we are five thousand seven hundred and seventy-three feet above the level of the sea. In conversation with the engineer I learned that the train broke in two the night before and shook some of the passengers up a little; but as it was going down the mountain there was not much danger. Had they been going up it would have been more serious. The engineers who assist the regular trains across the mountains have not far to run and are not hard worked; but their position is very important, requiring skill, nerve and courage, and they receive the highest pay of any on the road.

But we are reminded of the approach of the remaining cars, and as soon as attached we are off down mountain or mountains, for they succeed each other without any particular order or regularity. We can see the workmen way down below, two hundred and seventy feet, near the entrance to the tunnel, as we pass along, which will be finished in a few months, and when completed the trains will avoid those high tressels which seem to me dangerous.

We reach Missoula about three p. m. The ride for the last hundred miles has been pleasant indeed. We have found plenty of timber white and yellow pine principally, and so many living streams and fertile valleys that we begin to think more favorably of the west. There is one very unpleasant feature of travel, however, of which we are now reminded as we stop at Missoula, and that is dust. For about three months not a drop of rain has fallen here, and the country is so dusty a man can eat his "peck of dirt" in a very short life time.

Missoula is a thriving place of about fifteen hundred inhabitants being the trade centre of western Montana and situated at the mouth of the Bitter Root valley, which extends south for ninety miles and is of wonderful fertility. There is no danger of loosing a crop anywhere in this vicinity because of the facility of irrigation from the numerous streams and rivers.

We soon reach Horse Plains, which will be a thriving place, but now is only a supply station for the Flathead country. Here we obtain a good view of the Flathead Indians. Their heads are quite large at the base, but flat on top. According to phrenology they are largely deficient in the upper region of morals. I had the opportunity once of gazing down upon the bald cranium of Ben Butler; it was a glossy sight. While the top of his head was not flat yet it was somewhat concave in the region of reverence, phrenologically speaking. It is evident from his course as governor of Massachusetts that he lacks in this particular direction, he seems to have no reverence for the "blue bloods" of Beacon street, nor for the tanners of human skin. Gov. Butler is undoubtedly deficient in certain directions of morals, but he is mighty in helping the poor and a giant in intellect.

But please excuse this digression and let us return to the Flathead Indians, many of whom are watching us with wonder as the train passes on. We pass St Ignatiu's mission on our right and still keeping Clark's Fork to the left, we soon reach Heron Siding for supper.

This is the terminus of the Rocky mountain division. It is dark—the dinner bell is ringing furiously in front of one of those splendid eating houses found on the Northern Pacific; but we pass right by for we are posted and we notice, for some unaccountable reason, that most of the hungry passengers follow us. We enter a grocery and provide ourselves with [illegible]

Hosiery is very cheap.

Velvet is all the rage.

The favorite balmoral skirt is black.

Black stockings remain the first favorites.

Steel soutache on gray velvet is considered very chic.

There is a return of favor to clinging dress draperies.

The jersey is condemned by the Princess of Wales.

Russian green combines with black, gray, or deep red.

A Parisian costume of pigeon gray is trimmed with the plumage of the blue jay.

Plushes are now manufactured for skirts which are a perfect imitation of sealskin and beaver.

Silk cardigan jackets will be worn under dressy cloaks for extra warmth as the season advances.

Tucks are used to excess by some dressmakers, even velvet flounces being trimmed with two or three tucks.

All, or nearly all, basques have waistcoats. These are of soft silk or satin on heavy cloth and velvet costumes.

Some of the new greens combine beautifully with other colors, and they are becoming alike to the dark and the fair.

Velvet flowers, such as pansies, heliotrope, roses, and hyacinthe, combined with ferns, leaves, sprays of red roses, and white lilacs, will serve both for bonnets and dresses.

The favored colors for woolen goods are elephant gray, giraffe color, different shades of strawberry, and "blue capote." These materials are covered with all kinds of fancy designs, generally arranged in large groups, placed very far apart. The designs are horseshoes, full moons, and parts of moons, or bunches of flowers.

Try The Next.

"You know Blank, don't you?" queried a citizen as he entered a Griswold street office yesterday.

"Yes."

"Have you any influence with him?

"Well, I may have."

"Then you are the man to go to him. He has a son about 16 years old!"

"Yes."

"That boy is on the road to ruin because his father is too good natured and too much wrapped up in business. Seems to me it is your duty to go to that man, and tell him in a friendly way that he must exercise more government or his boy will be lost."

"I don't think I'm the man," replied the other, as he chewed at a blotting-pad and gazed out of the window.

"But why?"

"Well, I've got a boy about the same age, and I'm just going up to the Police Court to pay a fine of $20 for him smashing up saloon furniture! Try the next."—[Detroit Free Press.

"Yes, sir."

"And lost?"

"Of course I lost."

"Then you bought common?"

"I did."

"And lost some more?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then you tried Oregon & Trans-Continental?"

"I did."

"And you lost again?"

"Lost again."

"And now you want to know what you can do to get even with Villard?"

"Yes, sir, that's what I came to consult you about."

"H'm! H'm! The only way that suggests itself to me is to watch your chance and pick his pocket, though there is nothing certain that he would have anything in his wallet more valuable than the diagram of an eight per cent. dividend to be declared to bull the stocks again."—[Detroit Free Press.

Ex-Senator Conkling's Mistake.

In the absence of Judge Nixon, reporters occupied the Newark, N. J., bench recently. There were no other place, except the floor, for them to sit, the array of lawyers requiring all the space at the tables. When ex-Senator Conkling entered the room he gave the scribes a sharp glance, and, evidently astonished at something, began to whisper to Edward T. Green. He had mistaken the pencil brigade for Trenton judges, and was asking their names. He had already made a half bow to Justice of the Peace Gopson, whose eye-glasses had misled him, and was intently regarding another reporter, [illegible]

Rev. Dr. Haygood of St. Louis: "A few liquor dealers are in the church. They should quit their business, quit the church, or be turned out."

The State of Iowa was admitted into the Union in 1846, and from that day to this neither the State nor any county has received a dollar, directly or indirectly, for the manufacture or sale of any kind of intoxicating liquors.—[Home Guard.

J. K. Graham, one of the most brilliant young journalists in western Pennsylvania, died in Bradford a few days since from an overdose of a narcotic prescribed to relieve him from the effects of excessive drinking.

The statistics of Edwards County, Illinois, should be a weapon of defense with the temperance reformers. In twenty-five years no liquor seller has been allowed to locate upon its soil, and it is asserted that during that time only one criminal has been sent to the penitentiary from that county.—[Chicago Inter Ocean.

Resolution adopted by the Continental Congress in 1774: That it be recommended to the several Legislatures of the United States immediately to pass laws the most effectual for an immediate stop to the pernicious practice of distilling, by which the most extensive evils are likely to be derived if not quickly prevented.

Judge Davis of the Maine Supreme Court: "No man who has lived in the State for twenty years, and has had an opportunity to know the facts, can doubt that the Maine prohibitory law has produced a hundred times more visible improvement in the character, condition and prosperity of the people than any other law that was ever enacted."

The New York Commercial Advertiser publishes at the head of its editorial columns a list of its editors since its establishment in 1792, which embraces a more notable galaxy than any other paper in the country, as the following shows:

Noah Webster	1792 to 1803
Zachariah Lewis	1803 to 1820
William L. Stone	1820 to 1844
Francis Hall	1844 to 1863
William H. Hurlburt	1863 to 1867
Thurlow Weed	1867 to 1868
Hugh J. Hastings	1868 to 1883

Since the death of Mr. Hastings, less than three months ago, his nephew, Mr. John Hastings, has been editor. He is a young man not more than 35 years of age, but wielding a vigorous and trenchant pen.

SPRING LAKE, Cayuga county, N. Y.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism for sixteen years. A part of the time I could not leave the house, and many weeks I was confined to my chair, being unable to leave it without help, and for three years I was compelled to use crutches, and the pain I suffered no one can realize—except those who have been similarly afflicted. I called different physicians and tried many different kinds of liniments, but obtained no relief. My limbs were day by day being drawn more and more out of shape, and I had become completely discouraged, and supposed that I was doomed to suffer on until death put an end to my pain, when I heard of your Rheumatic Syrup, and immediately commenced its use, and in less than one week I could see that it was helping me and after using it two months I was completely cured and to-day I am as well as ever. Rheumatic Syrup is truly a wonderful medicine for cleansing the blood and is certainly a positive cure for rheumatism, it cannot fail to meet with great success.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

VAN R. RICHMOND is dead.

THE Prohibition vote of New Jersey at the last election was about 5,000; of Pennsylvania between 6,000 and 7,000.

THE newly elected State Senate is composed of sixteen lawyers, twelve merchants, three farmers and one insurance agent.

JOHN MCKEON, district attorney of the County of New York, died last Thursday. He has been Assemblyman, Corporation Attorney and Congressman.

THE TIMES has received from N. W. Nutting, Member of Congress from this district a copy of the "United States Consular Reports." which we shall doubtless find valuable as a work of reference.

THE authorities will close the canals December 1 unless sooner closed by Jack Frost, which condition indicates that Jack is a bigger man than State Engineer Seymour.

THE American Reformer says: "If the Republican party would elect our next President, it must nominate some one who does not breakfast at noon and dine at midnight. This Government does not require a night-watchman."

THE official vote of the State is returned follows: Carr's majority over Maynard, 18,818; Chapin's majority over Davenport, 16,318; Maxwell's majority over Sexton, 18,391; O'Brien's majority over Russell, 15,616; Sweet's majority over Seymour, 24,818; majority for abolition (except Kings and Suffolk) 66,258.

THE Scientific American of November 24 gives a description and illustration of an adjustable telephone receiver which has been patented and has the advantage of having a receiver for both ears instead of one as the receiver is now arranged. Of this new arrangement the American says: "We have tried this receiver with most satisfactory results, the sounds being clear and loud and entirely free from annoyances arising from local causes."

THE Cincinnati Enquirer estimates a portion of Vanderbilt's enormous wealth after this fashion: "Wm. H. Vanderbilt owns $47,050,000 in United States registered four per cent. bonds, a draft for the interest on which is mailed to him quarterly from the Treasury. The interest on these bonds amounts as follows; Per annum $882,000; per quarter, $470,500; per month $156,883.38⅓; per day, $5,156.16; per hour, $214.84; per minute, $3.58."

THE New York Sun remarks: "Mr DeWitt C. Littlejohn, who has been exhumed and restored by political antiquaries after years of burial from public view, has been uttering his thoughts to an Oswego newspaper. The one thing in which he feels the deepest concern, he says, is the future of the Republican party. This sentiment does credit to Mr. Littlejohn's levelness of head. A man who has just been elected to the Assembly by a majority of seven votes only must naturally view with alarm the crisis that would be precipitated in that district in the very probable contingency of the death of seven Republican voters."

THE Binghamton Republican is responsible for this little budget of common sense: "The abolition of the State paper is the subject of a discussion among newspaper men in the western part of the State. Why there ever was a state paper is a mystery that could never be fathomed after the generation which established such an instituion passed into oblivion. The Albany papers, which it is presumed will always hold this position of honor and profit, have no circulation beyond their local limits. Neither have any other papers in this country of large towns and local journals. Even the New York papers have become local in their circulation. The days when a State paper could perform any useful offices are passed."

THE American Reformer (temperance) makes the following complaint: "As if by previous agreement, the Prohibition vote of this state, on the 6th inst., has been almost completely ignored in the Associated Press dispatches. From county after county the returns have been telegraphed as "official" with no mention of Temperance candidates. It is difficult, therefore, to say what the Prohibition total is; but accurate returns of eighteen counties, which we glean from local exchanges, yield 7,276, and this average through the entire State would sum up about 22,000 not far, we assume, from the fact. While this is not so large as certain over-sanguine Prohibitionists pre-announced, it is a much better showing than last year's, though numerically less, and third party men have reason to be encouraged by it. The figures prove that [illegible] Prohibitionists voted for Maynard [illegible] that the Prohibition vote [illegible] balance of power [illegible]

[illegible] close of 1783, the [illegible] hostilities being ordered by [illegible] April, 1783, and a definite treaty was signed by the 3d of September, [illegible] although the continental army was disbanded on the 3d of November, Carleton and his 7,500 British and Hessians did not evacuate New York city until the 25th of November.

The New York of one hundred years ago was a town of about 23,000 people, located on the extreme southern portion of Manhattan Island. Its commerce and trade had been almost totally destroyed and it had been generally devastated by the ravages of fire and military occupation.

Carry the City Hall down to Wall street; rebuild Fort George in Bowling Green; put the stage coach in place of the railroad, the post-boy for the telegraph, oil and tallow for gas and the electric light; restore the quaint colonial dwellings and shops, with an occasional fine mansion, on the site of the massive commercial edifices of to-day; banish pavements and sidewalks from the streets; silence the tremendous whirr and work of steam on river and shore, and clothe the people with the knee breeches and cues, the embroidered coats and frills, the buckled shoes and three-cornered hats of that period, in order to bring back the New York of 1783.

Of the celebration Monday a press dispatch states that it was the most notable commemoration ever witnessed on this continent. Rivalry in business was combined with patriotic emulation to make each house in the business streets to surpass its neighbor in the extent, taste and costliness of decoration; and the result was that Broadway blossomed out in a manner that astonished even those who had contributed most liberally toward bringing about the general result.

The two great pictures of the day were the land and water parades. Each was enough to make a carnival in itself and both together were bewildering, but very effective. The street parade was in eleven divisions and was formed in Fifth avenue and the side streets from Thirty-second to Fifty-seventh streets. The total number of men in the procession was about 50,000, and it embraced every arm of the present military service, State and federal, and exhibited almost every uniform worn by the American troops from the continental period to the present. The most gorgeous division was the first, which included the Governors of the various States and their staff officers in full dress. In this division were also the city, State and federal officers in carriages, the commercial bodies of this and other cities, the Cincinnatians, the Loyal Legion and the carriage which brought General Washington to this city in November, 1783, and which was drawn on this occasion by ten black horses.

VICTORIOUS PRINTERS.

During the past fortnight the printers of several of the daily newspapers of New York have struck for a uniform scale of prices of 40 cents per thousand ems on the evening papers and 46 cents per thousand ems on the morning papers. The strike was inaugurated among the morning newspapers and all but one, the Tribune, acceded immediately to the demands of the strikers. The strike not being successful in the Tribune office at first, on account of about half of the men remaining in the office, it was renewed, when all went out but six men. This brought the Tribune to terms and its directors signed a contract with the compositors granting their demands and making the Tribune a strictly union office. This was a great victory for Typographical Union No. 6 of New York, when it is considered that Foreman Thompson of the Tribune was probably the greatest enemy of union printers and the craft in general to be found in this country. He had often declared that the Tribune should never go into the union and the latter organization has good cause to feel elated. The Tribune, also, is to be congratulated, for its practices are now consistent with the doctrine it teaches. It was Horace Greeley who so vigorously set forth the truth that it was not right, nor just, to obtain labor in the market where it could be bought the cheapest, nor was this policy pursued when he controled the Tribune, but after it fell into the hands of Whitelaw Reid it advocated the same theories of protection for American labor through the tariff, but it put in practice a theory toward its own employes which is the most debasing possible to American labor. While the Tribune is to be congratulated in being found once more within the bounds of consistency, it does not deserve the credit which a voluntary assumption of such a position would bring to it. It is simply consistent because it is forced to be and it hates trades unions with a degree of hatred which was entirely foreign to the nature of its founder, Horace Greeley, who advocated properly conducted trades unions as beneficial not only to work people, but to the public generally. Well may it be said that the Tribune was founded by Horace Greeley, but is being floundered by Whitelaw Reid!

But nearly as great a victory [illegible] one recorded above awaited the [illegible] day or so later when the [illegible]

[illegible] the price of [illegible] iron manufacturers of Pennsylvania should [illegible] combination to control the price of iron, or that manufacturers in any industry should form associations to control prices in their particular line of goods or to dictate the price of labor to work people. These things are done and manufacturers and other interested parties have gone so far as to get a law placed on the statute books of the State of New York that a workman who solicits a brother workman to quit work shall be liable to arrest for conspiring to injure an employer's business; a law which is entirely contrary to American institutions and the enforcement of which under the most favorable circumstances is doubtful.

The Thespian Society.

The Thespian Society's entertainment at Stephens' Opera House last Wednesday drew a large audience as THE TIMES foreshadowed it would do. No company of professionals who have visited Fulton for a long time have given better satisfaction or have more completely acted their parts than did the Thespians. "I've written to Browne" proved to be a delightful little comedy and was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Ross, Miss Lucy Ramsden, J. and H. Bacchus and R. Carr in so admirable a manner as to leave no room for criticism, while the merits of the operetta "Trial by Jury" as rendered by George Smiddy, Miss Smiddy, R. Carr, H. Bacchus, N. H. Gilbert, and Mr. Robertshaw, with a chorus of bridesmaids, jurymen and spectators were appreciated. The scenery was appropriate and was arranged to a nicety, which is saying considerable for an amateur company.

The Lecture Course.

The lecture course for the coming season will be opened at Stephens Opera House next Tuesday evening by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, whose topic will be "What shall we do with our daughters?" This is the first of a series of six entertainments, comprising the following talent: a lecture by the Rev. Joseph Cook, an illustrated lecture by Prof. Ragan, a jubilee entertainment by the Nashville Students and a lecture by the Rev. Dr. Vincent. The lecture by Mrs. Livermore needs no commendation as her name as a popular lecturer has become a household word. It is to be hoped that the lecture course will be liberally patronized, as its success or failure will decide whether or not we shall have a similar course under the same auspices in years to come.

Fred North's Case.

Fred North, the defaulting assistant book keeper of the Oswego Falls Manufacturing Company, was captured in Rome last Wednesday evening through the agency of Fred A. Gage, who performed a very clever piece of detective work in securing North's arrest. Gage met North on a New York Central train and had some conversation with him. North left the train at Rome and was followed by Gage, who learned by telegraph that North was wanted here. At the instance of Gage he was then arrested by a Rome officer and held until Officer Hulett arrived with a warrant. Upon being brought to Fulton he was taken before Police Justice Piper where he waived an examination and was admitted to bail in the sum of $2,000.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the State of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage which is dated the 28th day of December, 1881, and recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego, N. Y., on the 20th day of January, 1882, at 4½ o'clock p. m., in Liber 120, of mortgages, at page 254, was given by Wray S. Littlefield mortgagor to Lewis Johnson, jr. mortgagee, and is still owned by him. The sum claimed to be due upon the said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is one hundred forty-two dollars and forty cents, and the amount secured by said mortgage which is to become due thereupon is six hundred dollars and interest thereon from November 1st, 1883. The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in the said mortgage: "All that tract or parcel of land situate in the town of Volney, county of Oswego, and State of New York, being the south-east part of Lot number eight (8) of township number seventeen of Scriba's Patent, and bounded as follows: beginning on the east line of said lot number eight (8) forty rods from the south-east corner of said lot and running thence west by a line parallel to the south line of said lot two hundred (200) rods and sufficient to include fifty (50) acres of land. Also so much as may on survey be found remaining and lying between the piece above named and another certain piece off the north east corner of said lot conveyed by Henry P. Briggs and wife to Nathan Rumsey, which said remainder is included, with the said fifty acres and being all of the farm in the town of Volney occupied by said Henry P. Briggs since 1874." Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof, at public auction, at the law office of H. E. Nichols, in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 22d day of February, 1884, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated Fulton, N. Y., this 28th day of Nov. 1883.

THE CENTURY.

PROGRAM FOR 1883-'84.

The programfor the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, the Century shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by EDWARD EGGLESTON, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES by HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTROMNY, untechnical articles, by Prof S. B. LANGLY, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE by H. H. BOYESEN, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANITY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, HAWTHORNE, GEORGE ELIOT and CABLE, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"GARFIELD IN ENGLAND," extracts from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"THE SILVERADO SQUATTERS," by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "New Arabian Nights,"

There will be papers on outdoor England by John Burroughs and others, a beautifully illustrated series on Dante, a number of papers by the eminent French novelist ALPHONSE DAUDET, articles on art and archæology, by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER and others, illustrated papers on sport and adventure, short stories by the leading writers, essays on timely subjects, etc., etc.

Subscription price, 4.00 a year; single numbers sold everywhere, at 35 cents each. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter, bank check, or draft.

SPECIAL OFFERS.

To enable new subscribers to begin with the first volume under The Century name, we make the following special offers:

New subscribers beginning with November, 1883, may obtain the magazine for one year from date, and the twenty-four previous numbers, unbound, for $8. Regular price for the three years. $12.

Or, if preferred, a subscription, and the twenty-four numbers bound in four elegant volumes will be furnished for $10. Regular price, $16.

THE CENTURY CO. NEW YORK, N. Y.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

ST. NICHOLAS,

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them and St Nicholas has reached a higher platform and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries. The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. Nichlas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributions:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge,
Captain Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen,
Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton,
Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller,
Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney,
Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter,

Henry J. Case and William Case keep a saloon and grocery at the corner of Broadway and Second street. Frequent complaints have been made of the place to Police Justice Piper.

Last Saturday evening at about 10 o'clock four young men named David Murphy, Jerry Cullen, William Horton and John Terrell went into the Case saloon to drink and called for ale. After being served the bartender, William Newsbaum, attacked Terrel, thinking the drinks had not been paid for. He then attacked Murphy and the melee soon became general and ended in a free fight in the yard of Milo Lawrence who lives on Second street next door, and upon the sidewalk, and according to the testimony of those who witnessed the affray Henry J. Case, William Case and Newsbaum were the attacking parties, Terrell and Murphy being knocked down, while Cullen was struck in the face and kicked. The affray was witnessed by Mrs. Eleanor E. Lawrence, wife of Milo Lawrence, and was heard and partially witnessed by C. H. Easton who resides on Second street, opposite the saloon and by W. E. Gibbons, who was coming up Broadway on his way home at the time of the occurrence and stopped to ascertain what was the matter. On Monday Mrs. Lawrence appeared before Police Justice Piper and made the following affidavit which covers the main facts of the case:

I reside on Second street in the village of Fulton. Henry J. Case and William Case keep a grocery and saloon on the corner of Second street and Broadway about 60 feet from my residence. Their place is frequented by small boys and men. I have seen men and boys coming from there. Have frequently heard loud talking and swearing and cursing in and about said saloon. Have several times been disturbed in my sleep and broken of my rest by the noise going on in the saloon all within the past six months. Last Saturday evening at about 10:30 I was awakened by noise coming from the saloon. My daughter and I got up and looked out of the window. I saw a young man in my yard and Henry J. Case after him. Henry J. Case broke a picket from my fence and struck the young man with it. He fell to the ground and lay there some minutes before he could get up. The next I saw William Case after another young man. He ran after him and Henry J. Case said "Give it to him!" William Case broke another picket from my fence and struck the other young man. They were swearing and cursing during the affray and making a great noise. The next morning I found several pickets had been broken off my fence. There were pools of blood in my yard and blood spots on my fence and walk. I don't know the names of the young men but am told one was John Cullen and the other a Murphy boy. Eleanor E. Lawrence.

C. H. Easton and W. E, Gibbons also made affidavits in which they state that they found Murphy lying on the sidewalk in an insensible condition and Gibbons saw William Case knock Murphy down. Affidavits have also been made by Murphy and Cullen corroborating the above statements.

Yesterday a warrant was issued to Officer Hulett for the arrest of Henry J. Case, William Case and William Newsbaum on a charge of committing an assault in the third degree and an affray in a public place and for keeping a disorderly house. The accused were arraigned before Justice Piper yesterday afternoon when they requested an adjournment until this morning which was granted.

This morning a further adjournment was taken in the case until Saturday morning.

A Big Contract.

The New Portage Straw Board Company who are building a paper mill at Circleville, Ohio, which, when completed, will probably be the largest paper mill in the world, have contracted for the building by E. W. Ross & Co. of twenty of the largest variety of paper mill engines to be completed by about June, 1884. Messrs. E. W. Ross & Co. are constructing at the corner of First street and Broadway, opposite their foundry, a shed 60 feet long by 40 feet wide where tubs for the engines will be constructed. These tubs will consume 50,000 feet of lumber or about twenty car loads. The sum paid to E. W. Ross & Co. for their work will amount to about $30,000. Their bid for the work was not the lowest, but they did a $10,000 job for the same concern last year and their work was so satisfactory that they were awarded the building of the new engines. Circleville, Ohio, is in the centre of a coal region where that fuel can be obtained at 40 cents per ton and the Portage Company believe that their facilities will enable them to control the price of straw wrapping paper in the markets of the world.

Thanksgiving Services.

The Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and Congregational churches will unite in a Union Thanksgiving service to-morrow. The Rev. J. S. Riggs will deliver a sermon his topic being "The Gospel of Elijah." The united choirs of the churches named will be under the direction of F. T. Halpin. The following will be the program:

Voluntary, ending with Doxology.

At Zion church there will be services at 11 o'clock. The Rev. J. [illegible] [illegible]

This is the fourth season of the Nugents in Fulton.

Cassius M. Rogers of West Granby has removed to Fulton.

A boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Best of Oswego Falls Saturday night.

The C. L. S. C. will meet on Friday evening at the residence of Mrs. G. H. Salmon.

Sylvester Seeley of Volney, aged 65 years, has just recovered from an attack of the measles.

Mrs. Nancy A. Lamb died at the residence of Louis Youmans this morning at the age of 58 years.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore was always a favorite in Fulton and her lecture will doubtless draw a big house.

John Waffle's team ran away on Oneida street this morning and demolished Dunbar's photograph cabinet.

Next Tuesday evening before Post Schenck, G. A. R., Comrade W. L. Hodges will give a talk, relating reminiscences of Sherman's march to the sea.

Francis L., infant daughter of George F. and Cora A. Hoag of Oswego Falls, died last Friday of measles, aged 15 months. The funeral occurred Sunday at 2 p. m.

Charles Myers of Phoenix was united in marriage to Miss Kate Vogelgsang of Volney, at the residence of the bride's parents yesterday by the Rev. W. F. Markham.

Remember the entertainment by the Ellis Family of Bell Ringers at the M. E. church this evening. The entertainment is highly spoken of by the press and public everywhere.

The Fulton Reading Circle did not meet on Monday evening, owing to the inclemency of the weather. The circle will meet next Monday evening at the residence of Mrs. E. H. French.

Miss. Kittie Falkner, residing on Broadway, Fulton, and employed in the weave sheds of the Oswego Falls factories, was injured yesterday forenoon by a shuttle which flew from a loom and struck her in the face inflicting a bad gash. Dr. W. M. Wells attended her.

The measles are still raging in this vicinity, although the physicians believe the epidemic to be at its height. One or two physicians have expressed the belief that the disease was spread during the Oswego Falls fair. It is thought that nearly 500 people have been afflicted with this ailment at this time.

A few of the members of the M. E. Literary Society met at the residence of William Patterson Monday evening but owing to the inclemency of the weather not enough members were present to carry out the regular program. A very pleasant time was had by those who attended, however.

On Saturday afternoon and evening, December 15, the ladies of Zion church will hold a sale of aprons and fancy goods in the store now occupied by G. C. Lathrop.

Section Superintendent Richardson has just completed an addition to the State shop in this village to be used as a store house for lumber, timber, etc. The dimensions of the new building are 20 by 80 feet.

Mrs. C. E. Tubbs, for fourteen years a teacher in the schools of Oswego and for the past two years a teacher at New Rochelle, was selected by the Board of Education last night to fill the existing vacancy in the Union Graded School.

The winter term of school in district No. 1 commenced last Monday, no vacation being taken between the fall and winter terms. A number of cases of measles are reported among the pupils. The school will take a vacation of two weeks during the holidays.

The West Side Reading Union of Oswego Falls met at the residence of Mrs. George Wood last evening and was entertained with an instrumental solo by Miss Mabel Waugh and by readings by Mrs. Schenck, Miss Schenck, Mrs. Amos Langdon, and Miss Nellie Wheeler and Gussie Wood and a recitation by Miss Mabel Waugh.

The social of the Presbyterian society at the church parlors last Friday evening was a very pleasant affair and was well attended. A repast was furnished by the A. B. C's. of the church. The company were entertained with music by F. T. Halpin and the Rev. J. S. Riggs. Miss May French also delighted the company with a well rendered recitation.

The fall term of the Union Graded School closed last Friday with appropriate exercises. It had been intended to commence the winter term last Monday, but owing to some of the departments being very much depleted in numbers from the prevalence of measles among the pupils it has been decided to defer the opening of the winter term until Monday, December 3.

F. Kenyon Jones, Pianist, Fulton, N. Y., came here in 1882, staid by during 1883, and expects to remain through 1884, all reports to the contrary, notwithstanding. For the holidays, a fine display of Pianos, Organs, Violins, Accordeons, Sheet Music, and Books will be offered at low prices and no competition can undersell him. With this brief announcement he respectfully requests the discriminative public to call and inspect his stock, believing that he can rely on its appreciation of his honest endeavor to prove worthy of its confidence.

The L. U. B. W. Society of Oswego Falls will hold a festival at Howe's hall, on Friday evening at which a lunch will be served. Each lady participating will provide a lunch, secreting her name in the same and will share it with the gentleman who purchases it.

The Rev. I. M. Foster, grand chaplain of the G. I. R., whom the people of Fulton will remember delivered about a year since an eloquent lecture before the G. A. R., of this village, the night upon that occasion being very stormy and only a small audience greeted the speaker it was very strongly urged at the time that he should be invited to repeat the lecture. We now understand that he will again deliver the lecture in the near future under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church, and from what we hear a crowded house will greet the gentleman as some of the Grand Army boys say they would go two miles to hear him.

Nugent's Metropolitans.

Nugent's Metropolitans who are playing this week in Stephens' Opera House are on their fourth season in Fulton and have always been favorites. On Monday evening they played the "Honeymoon" and the audience, which, owing to the inclemency of the weather, was small, but well repaid for attending. Last evening a fair sized audience attended and witnessed "Ticket-of-Leave Man" who gave general satisfaction, all of the actors sustaining their parts in a most admirable manner. Theatre-goers will miss a treat if they are not in attendance at the Opera House every night this week or at least one evening.

[illegible] been missing from his accustomed haunts in Oswego Falls for the past three weeks and turned up in a very undesirable plight in Utica after scaring the inhabitants of that burgh about half out of their wits. Says the Herald in recounting "Yankee's" doings there:

Uticans who have been very anxious during the burglar scare of a few days ago, may now rest in ease. The burglar who is a wily Frenchman with a number of aliases, was arrested last evening and nearly all the property stolen in Utica was recovered, as well as most of the results of two burglaries lately committed in Syracuse. Last Saturday night, the residence of Henry Beckwith on Howard avenue, was robbed of some jewelry and clothing; the residence of William Wright on Steuben park was robbed of a coat, and the burglar was frightened away. Sunday night the residence of Ward Hunt, jr., on Hopper street, was entered, and jewelry and clothing to the value of $700 or $800 was taken. In each case entrance was effected by turning a key with nippers.

A week or ten days ago a stranger came to town and secured board. He represented that he was a cigarmaker and was anxious to hire a store in which to make and sell cigars. He paid his board up to this morning.

The Herald then goes on to tell how one of its police officers suspected "Yankee," searched his room during his absence, found property which had been stolen from some of the above mentioned places and arrested "Yankee" who gave his name as Jones. "Jones," says the Herald: "Strongly objected to arrest and struggled violently all the way to the station house. There he gave his name as Mackey Lousell, or Mackey, Louis Ell, alias Yankee Mitchell. He said he lived at Oswego Falls, where he had been brought up by a man named Mitchell, and that he kept a boat livery there." A thorough search was made of "Yankee's" effects and nearly all the property which had been stolen from Utica people as well as property which had been taken by burglars from a police officer's house in Syracuse a few nights ago were recovered.

Among the property recovered was some that bore evidence of belonging to B. R. Howe of Fulton, whose residence was burglarized on the 26th of August last.

On Saturday Assistant Chief Dagwell of Utica came to Fulton and armed with a search warrant and accompanied by officer Fuller of Fulton Police, searched "Yankee's" home in Oswego Falls, where some few valueless trinkets belonging to B. R. Howe were found, together with other stolen property. In all Mr. Howe has recovered about $5 worth of the $300 worth of property taken from his house.

"Yankee" has a brother named Charles, who was out on a little expedition on the Black River at the time of "Yankee's" arrest and knew nothing of his mishap. He arrived in Utica Saturday morning, but was soon in the clutches of the Utica Police who were not long in finding evidence of his guilt in the grip sack he carried, which contained stolen property and a kit of burglar's tools.

About six years ago a Frenchman came from Oswego Falls and took up quarters in the house opposite the D. L. & W. passenger depot in Oswego Falls belonging to Morgan L. Wilcox. He brought his wife, four children and two of his wife's sisters to reside in the house with him, only a part of which he occupied. For a long time he was known about Oswego Falls as "Yankee" and after he had lived there about two years he became known by the name of "Yankee" Mitchell and still later it leaked out that his name was Maczene Louiselle. He never pursued any other occupation than that of keeping a boat livery and catching fish which he peddled.

Last February "Yankee's" wife died after giving birth to a pair of twins. The family then became scattered, only "Yankee" remaining and he kept bachelor's hall, when at home. Since his coming to Oswego Falls he has been helped more or less by the City of Oswego, from where he moved to Oswego Falls, the town of Granby never allowing him to gain a residence.

Persons familiar with his career in Oswego Falls remember his brother visiting him at intervals and say he was here in August when B. R. Howe's house was burglarized and Mr. Howe believes both men had a hand in it and that they escaped on a canal boat, going to Oswego the same morning. It is probable that for the next twenty years both Frenchmen will board in Auburn.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. E. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & CO., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In 1875, thirteen men comprised the entire working force used in the manufacture of the James Boss' Gold Watch Case. Now over five hundred are employed, and the number is constantly increasing. The reason of this increase is this: In the James Boss' Gold Watch Case all the metal in sight and subject to wear is solid gold, while the remainder, which only lends strength to the case, is of stronger metal than gold, giving gold where gold is needed, and strong, elastic metal where strength and elasticity are needed, a combination producing a watch case better than solid gold and at ONE-HALF the cost.

Over 200,000 of these cases have been sold, and every jeweler in the country can testify to their quality and merit.

LUDINGTON, MICH., Dec. 8, 1882.

E. W. Marsh, of the Democrat, bought a Jas. Boss' Gold Watch case 18 years ago, and carried it until a short time ago, when I purchased it, and sold it to a customer. The case showed no signs of wear, except that natural to any case, and I am satisfied can be safely guaranteed for at least ten years more. I have sold the James Boss' Gold Watch Case for many years, and the parties who bought the first ones are carrying them to-day, as well satisfied as though they had bought a solid gold case costing twice the money. I regard them as the only cases of this kind a jeweler should sell who desires to give his customers the worth of their money or values his reputation.

WM. J. CUMMWAY, Jeweler.

PILES,

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

A great many people feel themselves gradually failing. They don't know just what is the matter but they suffer from a combination of indiscribable aches and pains, which each month seem to grow worse. The only sure remedy known that will counteract this feeling and restore perfect health is Brown's Iron Bitters. By rapid assimilation it purifies the blood, drives out disease, gives health and strength to every portion reached by the circulatory system, renews wasted tissues and restores robust health and strength.

People of Florida continue to gather and eat lucious water melons, with the thermometer at 80 to 90.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND GREATEST MEDICINE

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier,

SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap rum or poor whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only to destroy. It is composed of the choicest Roots, Barks and Berries, combined with the EXTRACT OF SULPHUR in such proportions as to make it NATURE'S GREAT NERVINE.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

The time to begin wintering cattle is when the feed begins to fail in the fall. Any neglect now is sure to cost dearly in the end.

Pumpkins, turnips, beets, potatoes and carrots should be sliced when fed to stock, which prevents choking, as danger sometimes occurs, when whole or chopped pieces are fed.

Skim milk fed with a little oil meal and oats was found excellent when fed to calves at the Wisconsin experiment station. The young animals were kept healthy and growing but not fat.

As the weather becomes colder there will be an advantage in giving feed to fowls in warm condition. It is better for having been scalded and then cooled sufficiently not to burn when eaten.

By pouring boiling water upon beans the weevil can be destroyed, but to prevent injury to the beans the scalding should be done in a collender, and they should be spread out and dried instantly.

Barbed wire can be used as a fence against hogs by putting the lower wire four inches from the ground, and the next wire a foot or fourteen inches higher. This fence does not need to be high if only hogs are to be enclosed.

Harness should never be kept in the stables which are not entirely free from manure. The ammonia thus produced is rapidly absorbed by the leather, and the result is said to be the same as if it were saturated with strong lye. It has the effect of rotting the leather and the harness thus exposed and will consequently remain sound a comparatively brief time.

The grains of corn that grow on the end of stalks with the tassel will produce new varieties if planted by themselves. It is in this way that many curious and sometimes valuable novelties are secured. Varieties produced from seed grown this year ought to be adapted to unfavorable seasons if the conditions of the seed affect the future plant, as is generally believed.

In making roosts for fowls let them be level and on a line. If they are so arranged as to have some of them high and others low the fowls will crowd together on the higher perches, leaving the lower ones unoccupied, which is not only a waste of space but a cause of sore feet and other ailments, as the heavier fowls can not easily get on or off the perches when they are the better provided the coops are ventilated at the top and warm and dry near the floor.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

bale I have been idling for an hour perchance, or more,
upon the hay so fragrant, strewn upon the fallen floor;
North the doors are open, letting thro'
 the freshening breeze, spot to one who seeketh place for summer reveries.

Here, in drowsy rest I linger, while the insects buz and hum;
in the West aslant and hazy—slowly sinks the reddening sun;
From the eves, fleet-winged swallows, swiftly
 darting, skim away;
Bright-lined moth now unsuspecting, now I pity
 you to-day!
Near the lane the apple orchard shown—fruit
 flushing, many a tree,
Nearer spreads the field of barley like a lovely inland sea;
Rustling in low rhythmic cadence, while wind
 zephyrs come and go,
Rising, falling, in soft billows, as sea-waters heave and flow!

Far yet rimming, all the distance, stand the mountains, blue and bold,
Fleck alternate, with the sunlight, now with shad-
 dows dark and cold;
Drawing close as day declineth, vapors gather,
 snowy white,
One by one the hamlets folding, as a shepherd lambs at night.

In sweet jangle sounds the cow-bell, and the kine come slowly home,
Through the bracken and the mosses, where the scarlet lilies bloom;
There the brown thrush rears her darlings, ah—
 I saw them yesternight—
Who will stay the kine from crushing so much beauty out of sight?

And there runs the brook a-tinkle, where they stop to cool at will—
No such music breaths contentment, as thy song
 my meadow rill;
True, the Sea has nobler numbers, but the sadness in its tones
Has no part in thy sweet murmers, 'round the foam-wreathed stepping stones.

Yonder goes the ready farmer, with his spool and milking-pail,
By the bars the troop awaiting, while he drops
 the lickened rail;—
Call you this "too unpoetic," for a poet's lofty theme?—
Nay, alas!—this is no poem,—but a homesick city dream! [Good Cheer.

LEONORE DALLAS.

"Leonore, you surely do not think of going to the ball? The whole city knows and had we not better remain at home?"

"No, auntie; our costumes are prepared, and fortunately paid for." With slow scorn in the clear voice, "We will go."

"I am in no mood for gay scenes to-night. I wonder you are."

"I am not. Nevertheless, Aunt Ina, We will go."

The speakers were Leonore Dallas and her aunt. On that very day the news had gone like a flash of lightning through the city that Leonore Dallas, the proud, beautiful girl who was Arthur Lane's promised wife, had been beggared by the disappearance of her guardian, in whose hands was all her wealth, and the rumor was proven true.

She stood in the great drawing room, the sinking sun shining redly on her dusky hair; a line of pain was on her brow, a haunting, yearning shadow in her grand, black eyes. Prouder than was her wont she looked, and yet a fierce unrest was knawing at her heart. For he had not come. Would he love her less that she could bring him but a woman's heart, her perfect life and passionate love?

With the shadow of doubt, a pang fierce as death seized her heart, and one perfect hand was pressed above it suddenly. Then with a touch of agony she felt, in her Spanish eyes, she turned from the window.

"Auntie," she said, "if my reign is over, I have the desire that Cataline had, to fall royally. None will look for the suddenly impoverished Leonore Dallas in to-night's gypsy queen.

"No dear, they will think you crushed by your loss."

"The morning may find me so," she said, half sadly, as she glided from the room.

The mask ball was at its height when, with a proud, free step, a gypsy queen accompanied by a dowager duchess entered.

Her short skirt of black velvet was aglitter with fringes of gold and golden chains holding tiny bells of ivory; her corsage of scarlet satin was richly embroidered and laced with, and from her shoulders hung a scarlet cloak with heavy, glittering fringe; jewels shone on her bare arms and flashed from her flowing, dusky hair, which showered, with but a ripple in its splendor almost to her feet. And on the morrow those gleaming gems would be all that Leonore Dallas could claim of the wealth that was once her own.

A knight of the time of Louis XIII stepped forward and doffing his broad, plumed hat, offered her his arm. She took it and joined the dancers, while the duchess found a seat apart.

Laughing gayly, pretending to read her partner's palm, Leonore was still watching passionately for the worthless husband of Scotland's fated queen; for in that garb Arthur Lane was to appear there, as he told her; and when she declined to tell what character she would assume, he looked into her eyes, and told her the eyes of love were sharp, and he would find her, though she would. you recognized me. But then, I'm not Miss Montague. I, also, am seeking for one I have not found yet."

"You mean Miss Dallas. By the way, Lane, is this rumor true that old Brent has absconded and taken her money with him. They told me it for a fact, and that your engagement is broken. That's not so, is it? I'd never respect you if it was."

Leonore bent over the railing, holding her breath to hear the reply. A life, the life of her youth, was at stake and she forgot everything in the anxiety of her listening, while her cavalier was pulling the flowers in his buttonhole to pieces, wondering at her silence.

"Stanford," came the answer, "does the word say that? Then tell it from me that my engagement to Miss Dallas is not broken by the fall of her fortunes. Tell it I loved her, not for her wealth, but for her worth; and since she has not changed, I love her still, and she is still my promised bride. I was called from the city yesterday and only returned this evening. The rumor met me almost at the threshold, and I hastened to her to learn that she had just left for the ball. I have sought her among the guests, but failed to find her. Stanford, can you help me?"

Leonore heard no more. With hands clasped closely above her breast, and eyes full of thankful tears, she turned to her cavalier.

"Oblige me," she said, in her rich, clear voice, "by going to the lower veranda and sending Darnley here. I must see him immediately."

And then she was alone, the moonlight falling tenderly upon her dusky hair, as she bent her head and breathed a soft thanksgiving.

"Lady, you sent for me?"

She turned holding out both hands. He drew back a step, not touching them.

"Arthur," she said, "do you not know me?"

"Leo, my darling!" and then his arms were about her, her head upon his bosom and she burst into tears.

"Leo," he flung aside his mask and gently drew off hers. "Leo, you are not grieving? Surely you do not doubt my love?"

"Not now, Arthur; but, oh, I did to-day, when every hour went by and you did not come. Forgive me, love, 'tis past.

With a tenderness inexpressible in his gray eyes he drew the girl's slight form closer, and, bending, touched the young lips with his own.

"Look up, my dearest and most beloved," he said, softly. "Look up and let me tell you how much dearer you are to me to-night, when I know that you come to me without a dower."

The crimson lips of Leonore quivered as she lifted her great Spanish eyes to his handsome face.

"Arthur," she whispered passionately. "I love you to-night as I never did before; and oh, I am so happy."

Suddenly merry voices rang on the silence, and a resurrected Juliet, a hunter and an Indian princess appeared on the balcony, laughing and holding their masks in their hands.

Leonore and Arthur had resumed theirs and stood quietly in the moonlight, the Dallas diamonds sending forth their flashes from Leonore's black hair.

"Unmask," cried Juliet. "It is unmasking hour, and I must see your face, fair queen."

"It is one you have seen often," said Leonore, recognizing the speaker, and drawing off her mask.

"Miss Dallas! Here—to-night!"

A slow wave of color stole to Leonore's proud forehead, as she slipped her hand through the arm of her betrothed.

"You seem surprised," she said, slowly, a touch of irony in her cultured voice. "You have heard of my loss of fortune, Miss Vere, perhaps it was left for me to be the first to tell you that to-night I am not poor, but far richer than the past has ever seen me."

"And I," said the princess, laughingly, "am hungry. Come, they are going in to supper."

Perfect health depends upon a perfect condition of the blood. Pure blood conquers every disease and gives new life to every decayed or affected part. Strong nerves and perfect digestion enables the system to stand the shock of sudden climate changes. An occasional use of Brown's Iron Bitters will keep you in a perfect state of health. Don't be deceived by other iron preparations said to be just as good. The genuine is made only by Brown's Chemical Company, Baltimore, Md. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

Be in Earnest.

Flatter not yourselves that your hearts will ever be changed by the mere force of evidence; nor that you can ever be renewed, but by the grace of God, and the agency of His Spirit; nor that you have a rational hope of salvation, without an earnest, anxious, use of the means of grace; nor that in such a use of these means you can merit salvation; nor that God is under any obligation to save you; nor that you are in any sense safe, until you shall have been created anew by the power of the Divine Spirit. Leave these dreams to those who are willing to spend life in dreaming. But do you, in the meantime, rejoice that there is a Divine Spirit to renew you; and that there are means by which multitudes have been conducted to this [illegible]

Saving Faith.

If we would at once see in brief what a true and saving faith is, we may take the sum of it in this description. It is when a sinner, being on the one hand thoroughly convinced of his sins, of the wrath of God due to him for them, of his utter inability either to escape or bear this wrath; and on the other hand, being likewise convinced of the sufficiency, willingness, and designation of Christ to satisfy justice, and to reconcile and save sinners, doth hereupon yield a firm assent unto these truths revealed in the Scripture, and also accepts and receives Jesus Christ in all his offices; as his prophet, resolving to attend unto his teachings; as his Lord and King, resolving to obey his commands; and as his Priest, resolving to rely upon his sacrifice alone; and doth accordingly submit to Him, and confide in Him sincerely and perseveringly. This is that faith which doth justify; and will certainly save all those in whom it is wrought."—[Bishop Hopkins.

Mrs. E. Wilcox, Medina, N. Y., says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility and found them a good tonic."

"A man may want liberty and yet be happy, as Joseph was; a man may want peace, and yet be happy, as David was; a man may want children and yet be blessed, as Job was; a man may want plenty and yet be full of comfort, as Micaiah was; but he that wants the Gospel wants everything that should do him good. A throne without the Gospel it but the devil's dungeon. Wealth without the Gospel is fuel for hell. Advancement without the Gospel is but a going high to have the greater fall."—[Owen.

BILIOUS COLIC CURED BY RHEUMATIC

WOLCOTT, N. Y., June 13, '82.

Reumatic Syrup Company:

Gents—A few weeks since, while suffering with billous colic, which rendered me unfit for business, I was advised to try a bottle of your syrup. I had no faith in it at all, at that time, for the reason that I has tried so many things in years past without receiving any relief, but before the first bottle was emptied I was feeling better than I had felt for many years. I know now, that I have tried it, that it is the greatest remedy that exists in the world, and I feel proud to recommend the Rheumatic Syrup to all sufferers from bilious colic, for I am satisfied it has cured me. Wishing you success with your most wonderful Syrup I am sincerely yours,

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newpapers, ro of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of The Sun are sent by mail postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday edition $7.

SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural department of unequal value, special market reports, and literary, scientific and domestic intelligence make The Weekly Sun the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an an extra copy free.

THE CENTURY.

PROGRAM FOR 1883-'84.

The programfor the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, the Century shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by EDWARD EGGLESTON, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES by HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTRONMY, untechnical articles, by Prof S. P. LANGLEY, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE by H. H. BOYESEN, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANITY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, HAWTHORNE, GEORGE ELIOT and CABLE, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"GARFIELD IN ENGLAND," extracts from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"THE SILVERADO SQUATTERS," by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "New Arabian Nights."

A Good Mechanical Paper.

We are in receipt of the Mechanical News for December 1st, and are pleased to say that it is one of the best illustrated papers that comes to our editorial table. It is a handsome sixteen page journal, with fine original engravings, and well worth the subscription price asked for it. On the first page of the number before us are several life like pictures, representing the growing of grapes and their manufacture into wine, as carried on in central New York; these pictures are only one of a series that have been given during the past year of the industrial manufactures of the country, and which are to be continued the coming year. Such enterprize shows that the publishers of the News are alive to the wants of the patrons.

Those of our readers who want a first class practical mechanical paper, can hardly do better than subscribe for the same. Sample copies are furnished by the publishers, Messrs. James Leffel & Co., No. 110 Liberty street, New York, on application. Their subscription terms are ONE DOLLAR per year. They offer good inducements for those who get up clubs.

Briggs & Stowe have started a fish market in the Stephen's block where they will keep a full line of fresh fish, oysters and clams. tf

[illegible]

Last Thursday was the day [illegible] by the President of the United States and the Governor of the State of New York as the time set apart to return thanks for the blessings bestowed upon us as individuals, as a State and as a nation, during the past year.

The day was generally observed in Fulton and it should be recorded as a circumstance creditable to our citizens that the union services at the Presbyterian church and also those of Zion church were well attended.

At the Presbyterian church the services were opened by an invocation by the Rev. J. S. Riggs, followed by the reading of the Scripture by the Rev. W. F. Markham and after another hymn, a prayer by the Rev. B. R. Dow, and a hymn, the Rev. J. S. Riggs delivered an eloquent sermon, taking his text from I Kings 19—"After the fire a still small voice." Mr. Riggs said:

The triumph of Carmel has become history. Its zeal and irony and bloodshed were known from one end of the land to the other. Upon himself the stern intolerant prophet had concentrated the unquenchable hate of that Jewish Clytemnestra—Jezebel. Her anger was kindled to a white heat by the issue of the mountain trial. The only result of victory was to be cruel death. So thought Elijah and swiftly the moment of victory was followed by the keen reaction of despair. It is about this moment that the scenes which give us the words of the text gather.

In the dreary silence of the wilderness with the rocky slope for its back ground stood this John the Baptist of the Old Testament. The wild desolation of the place suited well his melancholy mood. Its very rocks and ruggedness were to best convey to him the message of his God. For as his cry went up to Heaven, its answer was first the tempest sweeping through the mountain passes—tearing the rocks from their places and hurling them with a roar and ruin of an avalanche into the barren valleys—and then the mountains themselves shook to the bases. The earth quivered to its centre and above the unsteady summits played the incessant flames of the lightning. As the prophet gazed in awe upon the tremendous energies of nature, his usual spirit found a fit reflection. And something of the tumult and intensity of Carmel came back again. But the lesson was that in the storm and the earthquake, whether amid the forces of nature or the forces of the soul "God in his highest and best sense is not."

As the mutterings of the thunder and the flashings of the lightning ceased and upon the rocky wastes fell a hush that was deathlike, came that revelation of the "still small voice"—just breathing the silence—with something perhaps of the faintness of far distant music—and in that still small voice God was.

Truth is often best grasped in contrasts. Some realities have no meaning for us until they are defined by their very opposites. Elijah is not the synonym for gentleness. These words are iconoclastic. He was a stern man for a stern duty. But yet to him, rugged and stern as he was, was given this bright anticipation of the breadth and depth of omnipotence yet to be. And in taking these words I want to catch their meaning in just the God given contrast that intensifies their significance. We can find reason, I think, for thanksgiving at this time, in some of the facts which may have likeness here. The gospel of the "still small voice" is the gospel of Elijah. It is the gospel of the New Testament as well. It is the great and only gospel which shall in its very gentleness compel the attention of the world.

The speaker then proceeded to deal with this proposition from three different standpoints proving that the still small voice of God is the most powerful force of the universe. In the closing thoughts of his sermon he considered the strength of national character and he said: Had I the time I might lead you up and down the long ways of history and mark all along them the "truth"—"This nation went down because it feared not God." I might take you through the story of our history and show you how its brightest hours are linked with its greatest trust and then come back to this gospel of Elijah with the remnant of your thousand who have not bowed the knee to Baal and ask, Is not God the strength of any people? Great and strong as our government is to-day, our real strength is not in it; nor is it in the broad acres and the countless wealth, that give us reputation. Other nations have had these things before us and perished. But the deep reason we have for thankfulness is that in this land are at least 8,000,000 earnest, God fearing men and women, who are not lost in the commotion of the busy forces of daily industry and political strife—but who have the "still small voice" as Elijah did, calling them to-day for the Lord.

France may talk of her "civilizing mission," Germany may range along her borders her solid lines of soldiery. What are camps and forums if in the hearts of the people is no fear of God, no devotion to truth. The splendid armies of Europe are her confessions of weakness. They tell the truth [illegible]

[illegible] us to do His will. Give thanks and take courage. Go forth as [illegible] from the house this day with [illegible] inspired [illegible]. Let not the [illegible] forces of the world and its evil disturb you in your quiet service of the master. The tempest and the earthquake are not. God is. There is a gospel of force, but that force is love; that force is conscience. And as God is God, they shall at last prevail. The kingdom of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord.

The services closed with a hymn and the benediction which was pronounced by the Rev. B. R. Dow.

At Zion church the Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien officiated and delivered a short but interesting sermon, taking his text from St. Matthew 22; 21—"Then saith He unto them, render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's." Mr. Beaubien said: "I wonder if we have ever understood all that was perilous and tragical in the position of our Lord at the moment He uttered these grand words. We know how fiery was at that time the palatial atmosphere of Israel. The Jews could not accept Roman domination. In spite of the cowardly condescendance of the party of the Herodians who had become courtiers of Augustus and Liberias, the great mass of the nation kept dreaming of its antique independence, and no one was popular who did not flatter these hopes the Pharisees kept like a sacred fire in souls. To bring our Lord to pronounce himself upon this question was an extreme stroke of skill on the part of those who at any price wished to ruin him in the estimation of the people. And so in order to realize this stratagem, two of the ruling parties in Israel, the Herodians and the Pharisees forget their ancient hatred and come together. Abruptly, and in a public place, some of them come to Jesus and in the presence of the crowd they ask Him this question, "Tell us, what thinkest Thou, is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not?" and in order to leave Him no way of escape, St. Mark says that they added; 'shall we give or shall we not give?' Notice the extreme gravity of the situation our Lord was put in. He answers simply, "Give Tribute." He is a coward, a traitor to Israel. If He answers "Do not give it" these same men will accuse Him of sowing the seed of revolution, and already they will brand Him as they are to do later, before Pilate as an "Enemy of Cæsar's." What does our Lord answer? He takes a penny upon which is found the image of the Emperor, and which is as the manifest symbol of the state of subjugation of the Jews, then facing His questioners, He asks them whose image and superscription was that? and after having received from them the express admission of that political dependance He utters these immortal words. Taking this illustration and proposition the speaker affirmed that the religious and civil society were deeply distinct and used different forces in there respective spheres. "But some will say," continued the speaker, "There are in politics moral questions which religion cannot ignore. We know it. No one denies it. And it is too evident that politics come in contact with morals. There are men who personally would be incapable of violating an engagement, to use calumny or threat and thus applaud without remorse acts as detestable, when they are collective and serve their political cause. We cannot expect religion to remain silent in presence of political immorality, far from it. In order to denounce it with all the more power, religion must not descend the political arena, for if it is suspected of ceasing to speak in the name of conscience but rather in the name of a party it becomes nothing more than one more voice among the discordant clamorers of party struggle.

The State tends more and more to become a society. To that society let us give our most intelligent, loyal and devoted help. Some have believed that the christian should not feel interested in human things and social interests. There have been epochs when public demoralization was so deep, so universal that we can understand how pious souls dreamed of nothing but heaven. But God does not desire that ascetism—it is false in its essence and presents us only with a fantastic perfection. We are men and we owe ourselves to men, all noble, generous, liberal causes should find advocates in us progress under all its forms should be dear to us, and it would be strange if because we one day expect the supreme reign of truth and justice, we should remain indifferent as to their victories in the world. But while rendering unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's we should render unto God the things that are God's, let us render unto Him the homage of that reason so often prostrate before intellectual idols, of that will which for so long has served only one fortune, of that heart which the creature alone has possessed and which unworthy passions have perhaps defiled.

Let God become the end of our activity of every day; let us on this Thanksgiving day offer unto Him that reasonable service of which the Apostle speaks, and which is the most noble exercise in our power—the day draws near in which in the Eternal country, God shall be our [illegible]

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—[illegible] John VanArsdale [illegible] the British flag from the Battery flag staff and raised the ensign of the new born nation in its place. Every year since the stars and stripes have floated over the same spot and it has been raised by some of the descendants of the original John. At sunrise to-day, a grandson of VanArsdale's marched in a continental uniform to the Battery and raised the preserved portion of the old flag in its place. As this was the centennial of the evacuation of the British, New Yorkers saw fit to celebrate the event in a proper manner, and everything appropriate was done to-day to keep alive the memories of deeds done by our forefathers in those dark trying days. New York woke up this morning to meet a leaden sky, suggestive of snow, and a cold north-east wind.

At nine o'clock Broadway, from Fiftieth street to the Battery appeared to be almost solid with people. The rain and procession started at exactly ten fifteen and the rain had the best of the bargain all day. I had a position on the curb, near the postoffice and I held it from ten o'clock until after four. I tried several times to get away but it was impossible on account of the dense crowd. As I stood waiting for the procession I took an inventory of the people around me. Strangers were there in abundance and most of our States were represented. Not a dude was in sight and to account for this I imagined that the train of thought set in motion by the celebration was not congenial to their adopted English ideas.

I tried to think what amount of money would be necessary to replace the garments spoiled by the rain and mud. The ladies were the greater losers on this score, for most of them came out in their best clothes and without umbrellas or waterproofs. I saw several fine suits completely ruined and wilted bonnets were numberless. Some ladies with satin, fur lined circulars turned them inside out and in a short time the wearers looked like drowned cats. I saw one mild-eyed woman remove her hat and at the first sight of it, she snatched the feathers and trimming from the frame and stamped them in the mud. She had a temper!

Every one stood in the crowd unable to move and absorbed the streams of water that trickled from their neighbor's umbrellas, wet, muddy and mad! Every degree of anger and despair was painted on the face of the people around me. It was as good as a circus. Seats in offices and stores sold readily at all prices ranging from five to twenty dollars, and after the rain began the demand was greater than the supply. Gayly bedecked trucks, with boards for seats, lined the side streets and a place thereon could be had for one dollar.

Active men made small fortunes selling medals, programs and lithographic portraits of Washington. Later on men with cheap umbrellas sold all they could procure, at big prices. Broadway at eleven o'clock was one undulating sea of umbrellas and it reminded one of the waves of the ocean on a dark night. It was twelve o'clock when the cry of "here they come" ran along the line, and the advance squad of mounted police pushed their way through the mass of people. These horses and men are trained for this work and they soon cleared the street from curb to curb. They pushed their horses against the edge of the crowd, and the animals thereupon sided imperturbably against the human kind. They trod on no one, paid no attention to the shouts and frantic gestures, they frightened the women and gently but irresistably compelled the men to move back beyond the curb. The mounted men were followed by a part of the Broadway squad on foot who gathered in the stragglers, a block behind the police came Gen. John Cochran, the Grand Marshall of the day, and his aids. Then came the Philadelphia City Cavalry and the United States troops acting as escort to the invited guests. The President and Gen. Grant rode in the first carriage, which was drawn by four black horses. Cheers followed this turnout and were acknowledged by both occupants. Then followed the Governors of the original thirteen States, the Mayors of New York and Brooklyn and the distinguished representatives of the army and navy. Washington's coach was next. It was surrounded by the Continental Guard and was gayly decorated with flowers and drawn by eight white horses. The four footmen were dressed in purple satin and velvet.

The Second Division consisted of the Albany Burgess Corps, Newport Artillery, Troy and Utica Citizen's Corps, Poughkeepsie Volunteers, the Tenth Separate Company, of Newburg, the Governor's Foot Guard, of Hartford, the Providence Light Guard, companies of the First Pennsylvania, Fifth Massachusetts, Phil Kearney Guards of Elizabeth, five regiments of Connecticut troops and other regiments from Brooklyn, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland. In this division were also the veterans of the war of 1812 and the Mexican war.

In the Third Division was the G. A. R.—three thousand strong—and the sons of veterans.

The Fourth Division consisted of veteran organizations of New York Volunteers [illegible]

[illegible] of New York and Brooklyn, New [illegible] Society [illegible] New York in full [illegible] and a score of other societies. Four hours were occupied in passing a given point and fully 50,000 men were in line.

Of the Governors in the line Butler was the only one recognized. He was greeted on all sides with "Hello, there's Ben Butler." "what did ye do wid the spoons?" "Hi Spooney." "Are your shoes human hide?" and numberless other like expressions. He had a smile and a bow for all. Washington's coach attracted a good deal of attention, and some were reverent enough to uncover their heads as it passed. All the troops passed with sullen scowls on their faces and no wonder for they were tramping over slippery stones, and were wet to the knees and covered with greasy mud. Bottles filled with "Croton water" were no uncommon sight in the ranks. All the visiting troops marched well and none complained of the treatment they received while in the city.

I did not see a whole drum head in the line, and the music suffered on this score. The firemen in their suits of red presented a pretty sight. The presence of the "old machines" brought volumes of cheers from the men on the walks. The "big six" proved a great curiosity and the tiger fastened to its brake beautified the old engine. The decorations along the line of march were few, and it was noticeable that none of the houses of the Astors, the Vanderbilts, or the late A. T. Stewart displayed a flag.

After reviewing the troops at the Battery the President was driven to the Sub-Treasury building where he assisted in the unveiling of the new bronze statue of Washington. The statue is by J. A. Q. Ward and stands on the spot where Washington took the oath, as first President of the United States Gov. Cleveland unveiled the statue and George William Curtis delivered the oration.

The water parade was as much of a success as the one on land, and was made up of every description of steamboat that plys our waters. Sam Sloan was the flagship and the whole squadron was under the command of J. H. Starin. Every boat was clothed in bunting and each one kept its whistle blowing all the time. The course was from Fiftieth street, North river, down around the Battery, then up the East river to Twenty-third street; down on the Brooklyn side, past Governor's Island to Bay Ridge. Over five hundred boats were in line and the display was different from anything of the kind ever before attempted. This was a greater day than "Bridge day" here and will be remembered by all and for more reasons than one.

The light fingered gentry did some very fine work and although a goodly number of them were arrested by detectives a large number of watches and wallets were reported missing. "It's an ill wind that blows no one any good." This is just what numberless doctors, undertakers and druggists are saying as they think of the fees, coffins, and the quantity of cough syrup that will surely follow in the wake of this storm. Incidents, both serious and comical, enough occurred to fill a volume, but I'll stop now and try to remove from my garments some of the stains of this glorious evacuation day. WANDERING JEW.

"GET THE BEST"

FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE,
The Leading Paper.

Heartily Republican in Politics.

THE TRIBUNE this year is cheaper than ever, and it promises to be better than ever. Unlike some of its would-be rivals, it has not reduced character with price. It does not seek increased circulation by pandering to the tastes of the vicious or the prurient. A trusted, clean, wholesome family paper, it has long enjoyed the largest circulation among the best people—the industrious, frugal and moral, whom every community recognizes as its best citizens—and it means to keep and increase this circulation by continuing to deserve it

THE TRIBUNE is the leading New York daily—complete in news, strong and sound in comment, pure in tone, large and legible in print—spending money lavishly for news, and as lavishly for brains to handle it. It gives, with absolute fairness and all possible accuracy, the news of the whole world, best worth the attention of intelligent men and women; and is recognized as the authority on political business, bank, railroad and flanancial, literary, educational, scientific, social and religious intelligence.

THE TRIBUNE is heartily Republican; and believes that the restoration of the Democratic party to power, after twenty-four years' exile, would be as disastrous as a revolution. Every important material interest in the country dreads such a change in 1884. The Tribune confidently believes it can be prevented, and to that end asks your aid.

THE TRIBUNE is always on the side of morality, good order, reform and progress. It warmly sympathizes with every practical effort to restrict the traffic in intoxicating liquors. It always favors the cause of honest labor, and in the interest of the American Workman supports a Protective Tariff. It has no interest, for or against corporations, to hinder its taking the just and fair course, best for all the people and the whole country. It is the organ of no person or faction, is under no control save that of its Editor, and knows no obligation save that to the public.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE; for a third of a century the favorite of our substantial rural population. Larger and wider than any other weekly issued from the office of a daily in the United States. A complete weekly newspaper of sixteen, and sometimes twenty of twenty-four pages; agricultural matter believed by farmers to be the best published; full markets and many features of interest in the home circle. This year two series of special articles one for young men, the other for farmers. Indispensable for the Presidential canvass.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE; the best substitute for the Daily; all the matter of the latter of more than transient interest, and all the special features of the weekly. sixteen to twenty pages.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS POST PAID.

[Counting postage, about 2 cents a copy on all editions. The most, in quantity and value, for the least money, of any paper in America.]

[illegible] Ramsden, a young lady who has figured as a belle in social circles here and elsewhere, was to wed a United States Naval officer early in December.

About two weeks ago cards were issued definitely announcing the marriage of Miss Ramsden to Assistant Engineer Frank H. Eldridge of the United States Navy, the wedding to occur to-day. Nearly 700 invitations were issued, about 300 being sent to Mr. Eldridge's friends in the naval service.

The wedding occurred at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Zion church, Rev. J. B C. Beaubien performing the ceremony in a very impressive manner.

The best man was Assistant Engineer Walter M. McFarland, detailed as Professor in Cornell University while the ushers were John and Harold Bacchus of Fulton and John N. and Wilbur T. Eldridge, brothers of the groom.

A special train from Syracuse arrived at 1 o'clock this afternoon and brought a large number of guests.

A reception is being tendered Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge at the residence of the bride's parents this afternoon. The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful presents.

The newly wedded couple will leave at 6 o'clock this afternoon for Washington and will subsequently make a tour through the South when they will go to Columbus to reside, where Mr. Eldridge is detailed as Professor of Engineering in the Ohio State University.

The bride is a native of England and came to Fulton from that country when she was about 15 years of age.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MRS. ANN LEE.

On Thursday of last week Mrs. Ann Lee, widow of Dr. M. Lindly Lee, deceased, died at the age of 69 years. She had been seriously ill for several days and her death was not entirely unexpected, but it was peculiarly distressing from the fact that her son, Gen. Albert L. Lee, who almost idolized his mother, was absent with his family in Europe and could not be at her bedside. Mrs. Lee was a sister of Geo. M. Case and her mother, Mrs. John Case, still survives her at the advanced age of 87 years. Horace G. Lee, the only other son of Mrs. Lee arrived from his home in Kansas on Monday in time to attend the funeral and Mrs. Antoinette Saunders, oldest daughter of the deceased, was at her bedside during the last days of her illness. The following tribute to her memory appeared in the Patriot of Friday: "One has gone out from us whose girlhood and womanhood have been part of and strongly identified with the growth and prosperity of our village. For nearly seventy years she has discharged life's duties in such a cheerful and happy spirit as to leave an impress only for good. As one who had intimately known her for over forty years truthfully said "No words of malice were ever known to pass her lips. No frown of anger ever seen to cloud her brow," loveable and lovely, with a face radiant from a heart overflowing with love to all, she had fully ripened for that change which is promised to the in heart."

The funeral services which were held at the home of the deceased on Monday afternoon, were largely attended. The Rev. J. S. Riggs officiated.

A Reminiscence.

The friends of the late W. E. Williams will doubtless be entertained with the little poem reproduced below. It was first published in THE FULTON TIMES of January 23, 1878; and although receiving no more than a passing thought at the time, has come, in the light of recent events, to possess a new interest. So far as is known, it is the only expression the author ever in any way gave to his views of death and destiny; and a deliberate and reflective reading seems to lead one to the conviction that he considered death an event of life that must be encountered and consummated before he could realize his estimate—or expect to fulfill his purpose—of life:

WHEN I AM DEAD.

W. E. WILLIAMS.

When I am dead—
When Stygian shadows come to close my eyes;—
When I am gone
To read the mysterious beyond the skies;—
Think of me then, I ask, as one who goes
Into the arms of friends—away from foes.

Or as a child,
Weary with ceaseless play, and books, and toys,
Which creeps at last
—And leaves its little earthly griefs and joys—
With simple faith upon a mother's breast,
And laughs and sings and sighs itself to rest.

For, like the stars
That hide themselves until the day if fled,
And then come forth
To dance with fleecy cloudlets overhead,
We wait the setting of life's fitful sun
Before our joy or peace is half begun.

Mrs. Livermore's Lecture.

A large audience of Fulton's most cultivated people heard the lecture by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore at Stephen's Opera House last night entitled "What shall we Do with Our Daughters." Mrs. Livermore's grace of bearing upon the platform and her rare elocutionary gifts have been appreciated before by a Fulton audience and need no comment. The lecture itself was thoughtful and interesting and those who did not hear it missed a rare treat.

Last Friday afternoon one of the elegant buffet Pullman sleepers of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad was left standing on a side track in this village. The car was inhabited by Charles F. Franklyn and friends of New York. Mr. Franklyn is a stockholder in the Oswego Falls factories and came here to inspect the property while on a return trip from Niagaria Falls.

An Old Lady Killed.

A distressing accident by which Mrs. Hourigan, on old lady residing in this city met her death, occurred about noon yesterday on the track of the D. L. & W. railroad, about two miles above Minetto station. Mrs. Hourigan, who makes her home with her son, John Horigan, at the corner of East Fifth and Church streets, had been visiting a relative named Waters, a short distance above Minetto, and yesterday started to walk to the station on the railroad track. At Loftu's crossing the old lady fell into a cattle guard, striking on her head and shoulders and receiving injuries from which she died shortly after, and before medical assistance could be summoned. The body was brought to this city this afternoon. Coroner Barnes decided that a inquest was not necessary.—[Oswego Palladium, Friday.

ALLCOCK'S.

PHILA., 308 NORTH THIRD ST.,
February 1, 1883.

I have been using ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTESS for a number of years and always with marked benefit. I have been much troubled with uscularm Rheumatism; have been treated by five of our best physicians without receiving any relief whatever. I then used Allcock's Plaster on the parts affected and I can assure you the pain has almost entirely left me. I can recommend them to every one as the best plaster made. I have tried other kinds but found them worthless. B. F. GALLAGHER.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

ST. NICHOLAS,

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St. Nicholas has reached a higher platform and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries. The reference to the wide resource in art and letters commanded by St. Nichlas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge, Captain Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, [illegible] Thompson, Frank R. Stockton, Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, [illegible] Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Imitation always follows a successful article, and imitation is one of the best proofs of real honest merit; and thus it is that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case has its imitators. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of scales. Be sure BOTH crown and scales are stamped in the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about endorsing an article unless they not only know that it is good, but that the character of the manufacturers is such that the quality of the goods will be kept fully up to standard.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., Feb. 13, 1882.
The James Boss' Gold Watch Cases go like hot cakes. Each one I sell sells another. Don't need to recommend them; they sell themselves. One of my customers has had a James Boss' Gold Watch Case in use for 20 years, and it is as good as ever. With this case I do not hesitate to give my own guarantee, especially with the new and improved cases, which seem to be everlasting. JESSE T. LITTLE, Jeweler.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 4, 1882.
This gold case, No. [illegible], known as the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, came into my possession about 1854, has been in use since that time, and is still in good condition. The movement is the one which was in the case when I bought it, and its condition shows that the case has really out-worn the movement, which is played out. MARTIN A. HOWELL,

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

---

Policemen in various cities in Europe receive pay ranging from 40 cents in Constantinople to $1 in Edinburgh.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough of cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparallel success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. H. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water a small number no injury whatever."

For Sale by all First-Class Jewelers

[illegible] according to the best authority, [illegible] has fallen since the time of [illegible] in the highest terms. How true it is that man, especially a newspaper correspondent, "is fearfully and wonderfully made." The company here is building a fine bridge of granite quarried a few miles above on the Snake river. At present the cars are ferried across on a large flat boat built expressly for the purpose. We are delayed here for some time but finally arrive at Wallula Junction where we dine. Here is where the Northern Pacific joins the O. R. and N. We remain here for three hours and have plenty of time to discuss more of Chinese cookery. We confess a visible improvement is here, but are not yet converted. The Chinese cook potatoes as they boil rice—for hours. They have a faculty of spoiling the best potatoes; they are not cooked but simply water soaked and hardened. After dinner we take a short stroll, but not far for the dust is appalling. The station house here is a good looking building with many conveniences known and appreciated in the east. It is gaily decorated with numerous small flags and many large ones, among which we see representatives of Germany, France, and England floating in the breeze; also the "star spangled banner is still there," reminding us of the greatest country and the best government on earth.

At 5 p. m. we leave for Walla Walla, which place we reach at seven the same evening. Here we have comfortable quarters for our stop of two days. This city contains about five thousand inhabitants and is thoroughly alive. It issues three daily papers, and in every measure of progress, and in every department of industry and learning, it keeps abreast of the times. It is the queen city of this vast inland empire of excellent farming land, and is full of bustle and activity from centre to circumference. A. U. HUTCHINS.

Dr. J. G. McGuire, Anamosa, Ia., says: "I know Brown's Iron Bitters is a good tonic and gives general satisfaction."

Sixty-four of 111 New Jersey school teachers say in reports that whipping is indispensable.

BRANDETH'S PILLS

They are compounded of Roots, Herbs and Gums of the most healing and beneficial kind.

As a Family Medicine they are unrivalled, curing Head-ache, Constipation, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia—clearing the blood of all impurities—acting on the Liver, Kidneys and other important organs, removing the waste tissue, and adding years to the lives of all who use them.

For fifty years they have been used by the American public, and their constantly increasing sales show how they are appreciated.

A Perfect Remedy in 20 Diseases.

ASHFIELD, MASS.

I am verging on eighty years, and deem it my duty to suffering humanity to say that my long life is due to BRANDRETH'S PILLS which have been my sole medicine for half a century. I know the last forty-three years of my life is owing solely to their use. Your PILLS saved me many times after the best medical skill in several States had given me up as hopeless. I have had many converts to purgation with BRANDRETH'S PILLS, and have seen them perform almost miracles of cure. For children, a few doses have cured measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough. In all female troubles and weakness I have never known them to fail. In adult males I have known them to cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney diseases, dysentery and diarrhœa; even dropsy, paralysis, and appoplexy have yielded to a persistent course of BRANDRETH'S PILLS. In fact I have found them the true Life Elixir. They act as continual preventives against the effects of time, disease and labor.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N. H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

[illegible] had ever been taught;
And for his own pleasure he had a desire
To come to the court and the reason inquire.

Well, the lawyer who rose with visage so grave,
Made out his opponent a consummate knave;
And the devil was, certainly, greatly amused,
To hear the attorney so roundly abused.

As soon as the speaker had come to a close
The counsel opposing him fiercely arose,
And heaped such abuse on the head of the first,
That made him a villain, of all the men worst.

Thus they quarreled, contended and argued so long,
'Twas hard to determine the one that was wrong;
And, concluding he'd heard quite enough of the fuss,
"Old Nick" turned away and soliloquized thus:

"If what they have said of each other be true,
The devil has surely been robbed of his due;
But I'm satisfied now, 'tis all very well,
For those lawyers would ruin the morals of hell.

"They've puzzled the court with their villainous cavil,
And I am free to confess, they have muddled the devil;
My agents are right to let lawyers alone,
For if I had them they'd swindle me out of my throne."

DOUBTING DIXON.

"I don't reckon," observed Emigrant Blakely, "I don't reckon I told you anything about Doubting Dixon yesterday when we were talking of Denver in '58?"

Emigrant Blakely and I were seated one pleasant summer evening, after a comfortable supper, in front of the Paxton house, Omaha. Mr. Blakely had been labeled "Emigrant" because of his intimate relations with the land department of the Union Pacific railway, and his indefatiguable exertions in providing eastern colonies with new houses on railroad land in the fresh and adolescent west.

"No, I believe not," I replied. "You told some very interesting anecdotes of early days on the frontier, but I don't think you referred to Doubting Dixon."

"No, I believe not. Wal, Doubting Dixon come on from Massachusetts in 1852, I think, an' all he had in the world was about one hundred and fifty dollars in cash an' a four-year-old kid. He thought everything of that boy an' Dixon couldn't very well go back on him, neither, fur the lad was a perfect image of himself—a regular epitome of Doubting Dixon, only he war a dummed sight livelier. Dixon was a silent, taciturn, sort of a bean-eating Yankee; didn't have much to say when folks was around an' contrived to keep hisself in the best kind of shape. He got the name of Doubting Dixon because he never seemed to believe in nothing nor nobody, and when anything a little out of the ordinary rut was told to him, he always kinder threw cold water upon the account an' talked an' acted as if he didn't take no kind of stock in it. Of course, such monkey business as this rather conveyed the idea to people who was telling him anything that Dixon considered them cool, calm and unregenerate liars.

"Dixon staked a claim fifteen miles out from Denver, put up a shanty, and lived alone there with his kid. He didn't come into town oftener than once a week after some small stores, an' mighty small stores, they was, too, I tell yer. The boys used to wonder what him and the kid lived on. He generally come in Saturday nights, an' after hanging aroun' the saloons, stores an' postoffice a while, he'd pile on his mule an' pike for his claim. There was another little peculiarity about Dixon, he never would drink anything at the bar, an' he didn't ever carry home anything in a jug. In consequence of this little excentricity, Doubting Dixon was unpopular with the boys, an' Dixon, hisself, didn't appear to have any great an' overpowering affection for them. I said that he was unpopular, an' didn't seem to have many friends. There was a vicious looking York state feller, a gambler, and the boys all said a skin gambler at that. He an' Dixon were seen together occasionally, conversing in low tones, an' everybody wondered why Pistol Grip, as this York state chap was called, an' Doubting Dixon should be so thick when Dixon didn't gamble or drink either. One day this Doubting Dixon struck it rich in his claim, he an' the kid left the shanty an' come into town an' commenced boardin' at the hotel. One Saturday afternoon Doubting Dixon sat watching a game of billiards in the Sen- [illegible] saloon, an' Monte Bill come in, an' says:

"'Dixon, there's a lady outside in a [illegible] an' she wants ter see yer.'

"'[illegible] know no ladies in Denver,' [illegible] Dixon, a trifle uneasy, '[illegible] believe as any ladies wants [illegible] me.'

"'[illegible] you think I'm a liar,' said [illegible] carefully rubbing the nickel- [illegible] with his thumb.

"'[illegible] you are a liar, Bill,' [illegible] as a lamb, 'but I don't [illegible] any lady wants to see me.'

[illegible] said Monte [illegible] enough, an' a right handsome one at that, dressed up to kill, an' diamonds all over her where they would do the most good.

"'Is this Mr. Dixon?' said the lady, with a most fascinating smile.

"'Yes, m'm,' said Dixon, huskily.

"'Well, your wife is down at the Tallman house, an' she would like to see you.'

"Dixon seized hold of the tire of the carriage wheel to steady himself.

"'She wants to take the kid away from me, don't she?' inquired Dixon, with terrible anxious look on his face.

"'O, no, I guess not,' said the lady pleasantly.

"'She's got a divorce an' big alimony, and the care of the boy, an' all that sort of thing, I suppose. Remember I've got the money an' I'll fight it through every court in the land.'

"'No, nothing of the kind,' said the lady, but she wants to see you an' the boy. She came here with me from Boston, where she has been working.'

"'Working!' said Dixon, blankly.

"'Yes, she has been living all alone by herself, and working hard for her support. Get into the carriage with me, an' we will drive down to the hotel.'

"When they arrived, Dixon met his wife with the coolest kind of reserve, an the poor woman was almost heart broken. The handsome lady and Dixon had stopped on the way, an' got the kid, an' Mrs. Dixon cried over the boy an' hugged an' kissed him, but Dixon, he stood by as cold as an ironclad, an' never cried a drop, while the woman washed the boy's face with her tears. Dixon spoke up an' said:

"'Katie, where's the gambler?

"'What gambler?' said Katie, looking suddenly up, an' it seemed as if the fire in her eyes had dried up all the tears.

"'The gambler chap you took up with an' run away from home with.'

"'It's false,' said the woman, 'false as hell!'

"Doubting Dixon looked wonderfully puzzled at this.

"'Didn't you leave me, Katie?' he said.

'I did, Harry,' answered the woman, 'I left you for your own good. I left you because I saw nothing but ruin for you, body an' soul, an' weary poverty for the little boy an' me. You drank the last cent away that you an' I could earn.'

"I did bowl up too much,' said Dixon, but then—'

"'I left the child with its father in the faint hope that it might work in your reformation. I knew he was the apple of your eye, and trusted he might save you. He has. I now come back to take a last farewell of him an' you, an' to thank God for having kept my loved ones so secure.'

"'Ben Darnley said you eloped with a gambler an' went to Philadelphia.'

"'He lied!'

"'Your wife speaks the truth,' said the handsome lady, 'I have known her history since she left your humble home, and stole away to trust, to wait, to pray. She comes to you as pure an' as true a wife as the day she left your roof.'

"'Doubting Dixon leaned against the door casing for support. The strong man's tears were coming now, dropping full an' fast. He looked at the little, wondering kid, an' the kneeling mother, smothering it with caresses. Then he stepped away from the door casing, hesitated a moment, as though fearful of a repulse, threw open his arms, and said:

"'Katie!'

"In another moment the wife, kid and Doubting Dixon were all mixed up in a hugging match, and the handsome woman from Massachusetts, who had at her own expense, brought about this happy reunion, looked so pleased and delighted over the success of her scheme that she really deserved hugging by somebody on her own account.

* * * * * * * *

"That night, Doubting Dixon and Ben Darnley, the victorious New York gambler, met.

"'You are positive,' said Dixon, 'that my wife eloped with the Philadelphia faro dealer?'

"'Know it,' said Darnley. 'Why she even hinted once that she would leave home with me if I would come west.'

"'Say, Darnley, now be honest, didn't you kinder try to take advantage of me, and make love to Kate?'

"'Yes, Dixon, since everything is all over now, an' you know just what kind of a woman your wife is, I'll confess that I did. But, then, to be honest agin, I'll just say that she fairly froze the blood in my veins with her indignation. Heigh, ho! This is a d—d curious world, an' very few people ever get out of it alive.'

"'Right you are,' hissed Dixon. 'You are right, Darnley. Old man, my wife is safe an' sound in her own home, with her own boy, an' under the protection of her own husband, an' all this in spite of your devilish revenge. Ben Darnley, for years you have kept my wife and I apart. For years you have daily lied to me, an' worked upon the passions of a weak an' doubting man—'

"'Hold hard there, Dixon, or by the gods of war, I'll kill you!'

"'I doubt it, Darnley. This is a day of retributive justice. You will not kill me.'

"Ben Darnley was quick with his gun, [illegible]

An Oversight.

A citizen who had business at the foot of Woodward avenue yesterday forenoon was approached by a hard-looking man with a request for some small change, and the request was backed by the statement of shipwreck.

"What vessel?" asked the citizen.

"The Arab," was the reply.

"Where was she wrecked?"

"On Lake Huron, sir."

"When!"

"Five days ago."

"And how were you saved?"

"Picked up off the cabin-roof by a tug."

"How long had you floated?"

"About ten hours."

"Well, I suppose it's all right," said the citizen, and he handed out a quarter and passed on.

The recipient of the money joined a comrade waiting for him under the shed and whispered:

"I had a close call of it."

"How?"

"Why, suppose he had asked me the name of the tug? We forgot all about that in cooking up the yarn!"—[Detroit Free Press.

A TERRIBLE PROPHECY.

The Red Sunsets, Cyclones and Earthquakes Foretelling Coming Disaster—How to meet it.

The recent mysterious appearances following sunset and preceding sunrise have attracted wide attention from students of the skies and the people generally. During the days of recent weeks the sun seems to have been obscured by a thin veil of a dull leaden hue which, as the sun receded toward the horrizon, became more luminous, then yellow, then orange, then red; and, as night settled down on the earth, a dull purple. At first it was these appearances were ordinary sunset reflections of light but it is now pretty certain that they are either the misty substance of the tail of some unseen comet, in which the earth is enveloped, or a surrounding stratum of world dust or very small meteors. Professor Brooks, of the Red House Observatory, Phelps, N. Y., has turned his telescope upon these objects and discovered what he thinks are myriads of telecopic meteors. If it is unorganized world dust, or decomposed vapors, as the Democrat and Chronicle of Rochester, N. Y. remarks: "How is this matter to be disposed of? Will it settle and and form a deposite upon the earth, or remain a partial opaque shell about the earth to cut off a portion of the sun's light upon it?

Whatever the mystery is, there is no denying that some very strange forces are at work in the upper airs. The terrible tornadoes and cyclones which have swept our own country and the fearful volcanoes and earthquakes which have destroyed so many cities and thousands of people—the tidal waves which mysteriously rise and fall on coasts hitherto unvexed by them—the tremendous activity which is evident in the sun by the constant revolation of enormous spotsupon its surface—all indicate unusual energy in the heavenly bodies.

These circumstances recall Proffessor Grimmer's prohecies that from 1881 to 1887, the passage of the five great planets—Mars Neptune, Jupiter, Uranus and Saturn—around the sun would produce strange and wonderful phnenomena. He says: "The waters of the earth will become more or less poisonous. The air will be foul with noisome odors, ancient races will disappear from the earth." He attempts to prove his prophecy by the fact that in 1720, when Mars and Saturn made their passage around the sun coincidentally, great destruction and mortality visited all parts of the globe. He also found the same results in previous perehellon passages of the planets, and always produce epidemic and destructive diseases which will baffle the skill os the most eminent physicians; that the poor will die by thousands, the weak and intemperate falling flirt, those whose blood have been impovished by excessive work or dissipation next and only those who are in comparative vigor shall escape to enjoy the era of renewed activity and prosperity which will follow the period of destruction.

Inasmuch as the entire world seems subject to the sway of the heavenly bodies, no part of the part of the earth, he thinks, can escape scourging. He even predicts that America will lose over ten millions of people; that farmers will be stricken with fear and cease to till the soil; that famine will make human misery more wretched. That hundreds willflee to overcrowded cities for aid in vain. That sudden changes in ocean currents, temperature and surroundings will entirely transform the face of nature and climate of countries; that the air will be so foul with malaria and other noxious gases; that those who rurvive will troubled with disorders of the digestive organs. That many who escape other ills will bloat with dropsy and suddenly pass away, while others will grow thin and drag out a miserable existence for weeks. Neuralgicpains in different parts of the body will torment them. They will easily tire and become despondent. A faint hot feeling will be succeeded by chilly sensations while hallucinations and dread of impending ill will paralize all effort. "The birds of the air, the beasts of the field and even the fish of the sea will become diseased, poisoning the air and poisoning the waters of the globe." We are told on the other hand that those who who shall pass through this period of trial will have larger enjoyment of live and health. The earth will yield more abundantly than ever before. The animal kingdom will be more prolific and life prolounged very materially, This prolongation of life will be owing to the healthy electric and magnetic influences that will prevade the atmosphere. It would perhaps seem that the present redness of the sun and the presence of a belt or veil of cosmic matter, justified, in a measure the prediction of Professor Grimmer, but disturbing as his prediction may be we are told for our comfort that the strong and pure blooded need have little to fear in these calamities, that those who are delicate or indesposed should adopt means to keep the system well supported and the blood pure and that the most phosophical and effective method of accomplishing this is to keep the kidneys and liver in good condition. From the testimonials of such men as Dr. Dio Lewis and Professor R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean of the Unted States Medical College, New York, and thousands of influential nonprofessional people, it seems almost certain that for this purpose there is no preparation known to science equal to Warner's Safe Cure, better known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. This medicine has acquired the finest reputation of any preparation that was ever put upon the market. It is a radical blood purifier, which soothes and heals all inflamed organs, strengthens the nervous system, washes out all evidences of decay, regulates digestion, prevents malassimulation of food in a philosophical and rational manner, fortifies the system against climate changes and malarial influences and the destructive agencies which seem to be so abundant in these "evil days."

PROGRAM FOR 1883-'84.

The programfor the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, the Century shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by Edward Eggleston, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES by HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTRONOMY, untechnical articles, by Prof S. B. Langley, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE by H. H. Boyesen, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANITY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, Hawthorne, George Eliot and Cable, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"GARFIELD IN ENGLAND," extracts from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"THE SILVERADO SQUATTERS," by Robert Louis Stevenson, author of "New Arabian Nights."

There will be papers on outdoor England by John Burroughs and others, a beautifully illustrated series on Dante, a number of papers by the eminent French novelist Alphonse Daudet, articles on art and archaeology, by Charles Dudley Warner and others, illustrated papers on sport and adventure, short stories by the leading writers, essays on timely subjects, etc., etc.

[illegible] numbers sold everywhere, at 35 cents each. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter, bank check or draft.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of The Sun have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

"GET THE BEST"

FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE,

The Leading Paper.

Heartily Republican in Politics.

THE TRIBUNE this year is cheaper than ever, and it promises to be better than ever. Unlike some of its would-be rivals, it has not reduced character with price. It does not seek increased circulation by pandering to the tastes of the vicious or the prurient. A trusted, clean, wholesome family paper, it has long enjoyed the largest circulation among the best people—the industrious, frugal and moral, whom every community recognizes as its best citizens— and it means to keep and increase this circulation by continuing to deserve it

THE TRIBUNE is the leading New York daily—complete in news, strong and sound in comment, pure in tone, large and legible in print—spending money lavishly for news, and as lavishly for brains to handle it. It gives, with absolute fairness and all possible accuracy, the news of the whole world, best worth the attention of intelligent men and women; and is recognized as the authority on political business, bank, railroad and flanancial, literary, educational, scientific, social and religious intelligence.

THE TRIBUNE is heartily Republican; and believes that the restoration of the Democratic party to power, after twenty-four years' exile, would be as disastrous as a revolution. Every important material interest in the country dreads such a change in 1884. The Tribune confidently believes it can be prevented, and to that end asks your aid.

THE TRIBUNE is always on the side of morality, good order, reform and progress. It warmly sympathizes with every practical effort to restrict tne traffic in intoxicating liquors. It always favors the cause of honest labor, and in the interest of tne American Workman supports a Protective Tariff. It has no interest, for or against corporations, to hinder its taking the just and fair course, best for all the people and the whole country. It is the organ of no person or faction, is undur no control save that of its Editor, and knows no obligation save that to the public.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE; for a third of a centuary the favorite of our substantial rural population. Larger and wider than any other weekly issued from the office of a daily in the United States. A complete weekly newspaper of sixteen, and sometimes twenty of twenty-four pages; agricultural matter believed by farmers to be the best published; full markets and many features of interest in the home circle. This year two series of special articles ono for young men, the other for farmers. Indispensable for the Presidential canvass.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE; the best substitute for the Daily; all the matter of the latter of more than transient interest, and all the special features of the weekly. sixteen to twenty pages.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS POST PAID.

[Counting postage, about 2 cents a copy on all editions. The most, in quantity and value, for the least money, of any paper in America.]

DAILY—75 cents a month; $1.75 for 3 months, $7 a year; with Sunday edition, $8.50.

WEEKLY—$1.25 a year; in clubs of 10 $1 a year, with extra copy to man sending club.

F. C. BULLOCK - - EDITOR.

THE Board of Supervisors convened in Oswego last week and have been in session since. Nothing but routine business has as yet been transacted.

THE TIMES presents in another column the opinion of Judge Churchill in the case of Lyman H. Patterson against the President of the village and the Board of Trustees. The case has excited considerable interest in the village as well a deal of newspaper comment. The decision is adverse to the plaintiff and interested parties aver that the case will be appealed to the General Term. Should this not be done the Board of Trustees is now at liberty to dispense with Mr. Patterson's services as clerk if it is so inclined.

IN an article concerning the Speakership question of the Assembly the New York Herald prints the following about George B. Sloan, which refers to much that is good, bad and indifferent of Mr. Sloan's political career and we give it to our readers for what it is worth: "Much warmth of feeling was engendered five years ago in the struggle between George B. Sloan and Thomas G. Alvord. Sloan was then the leader of the half-breed element, which chafed furiously under the leadership of Conkling, Cornell, Arthur & Co. The Oswego statesman made a gallant fight, but was beaten in the Republican caucus by only four or five votes. It was rumored around Albany at the time, with some solid foundation, that not a little "very hard cash," deposited in a Stanwix Hall Hotel safe, had turned the tide against Mr. Sloan. That gentleman, however, afterward made a brillant record on the floor of the Assembly as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, his influence being potent over every legislative act of the session. His eloquence, honesty and capacity made him a safe leader for his party. He fought the Republican machine proper, and that fact, added to his abilities, gave him a controling voice in the Assembly of 1879. But later on the machine tempter came. What the tempter said or promised nobody to this day has been able to find out. At the Saratoga Republican Gubernatorial Convention of 1879 Mr. Sloan turned his back on his former anti-machine colleagues and cast his influence for the nomination of Alonzo B. Cornell. Since that time he has fallen to the rear as a political leader. During the memorable struggle for United States Senator after the resignation of Messrs. Conkling and Platt, Mr. Sloan turned up at Albany as an active adherent of Warner Miller. The weary campaign ended in the success of his "wood pulp" favorite. Had it not been for the Saratoga somersault it is not unlikely that Mr. Sloan would have been chosen successor to Mr. Platt. The whirligig of politics may again soon bring him to the front. The party would certainly gain by the active services of so accomplished and astute a leader."

OBITUARY NOTES.

Maria Louisa, wife of David Lum, of Lewis Corners, died at her home last Friday, aged 61 years.

Died at Trenton Falls, N. Y., Nov. 30th, Clara V. Hughes, wife of George S. Hughes, and daughter of Samuel A. and Martha Phillips, aged 26 years 11 months and 27 days.

Lany C, wife of Leonard Reynolds, died at her home near Bridgeport, Mich., last Friday, aged 54 years. Mr, and Mrs Reynolds removed to Michigan from Fulton eight years ago. The remains of the deceased were brought to Fulton and interred in Mt Adnah yesterday.

H. E. Moore, a native of Fulton and a resident here for the greater part of his life, died, at Lyndonville where he was station agent and telegraph operator. His remains were brought here by special car on Saturday and the funeral services were held at the Presbyterian Church Sunday, the Rev. Mr. Twitchell of Lyndonville officiating. Mr. Moore was for a number of years telegraph operator of the D. L. & W. railroad at Fulton. He was 32 years of age.

The Milton Memorial.

Sunday was the 275th anniversary of the birth of Milton and to commemorate the event the C. L. S. C. held a Milton memorial at the residence of A. Emerick last Friday evening. An interesting resume of Milton's life was given by Mrs. [illegible] Case, followed by quotations from Milton's works by all present. Then came a recitation, "Satan," from Milton's "Paradise Lost," by Miss Mabel [illegible] and the "Creation" was read by [illegible] Case. A pleasant feature [illegible]

[illegible] the Village of Fulton [illegible] proper corporate name, in which case, every officer or member of the corporate body, whose action it was [illegible] to restrain or control would have been as fully bound, as though personally served, or it should have been brought against the President and Trustees of the Village of Fulton by their individual names constituting the Board of Trustees of the village. The corporation or the officer may sue or be sued, but not the office.

II. Neither the complaint, nor the facts as argued upon, establish any claim for the equitable relief asked for.

1. It is well settled law in this State that the courts will not interfere by injunction to prevent municipal authorities from transcending or making an illegal use of their power, unless such interference may be justified by the existence of some one or more of the established grounds for equitable jurisdiction, such as the want of an adequate remedy at law, multiplicity of such irreparable injury, fraud, breach of trust, and the like. When coverts of equity have affirmed their right to interfere, they have been compelled, at the same time to state the limits of such interference substantially as above stated.

2. The only ground for equitable interference suggested by the complaint is that the plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the wrongs he alleges is likely to be done him, but in this he is mistaken, since the function of the Board of Trustees, which he wishes the court to interfere with. is judicial in its character, the exercising which can by certiorari and the action of the Board of wrong, modified or annulled and resolutions made by the order of the court.

1. The claim as presented was one that the Board of Trustees were required to audit. The street commissioner is not the mere servant of the Board of Trustees. True he is subject to their directions and would have no right to make any expenditure or improvement contrary to their direction. But he is charged by law with the duty of keeping in good condition all the highways of the village, of superintending personally the work done, and of making at least once a month to the trustees a return, showing the amount of money paid out, to whom and for what purpose, the amount of work, the kind of improvement and when and where expended. Such a return was made by the street commissioners. No question is made but that the expenditures had in fact been made, and that he had acted in good faith and to the best of his judgment and that his return was in proper form and stated correctly all the matter required to be stated by the village charter.

It is not claimed that the amount expended by him on the improvements made are contrary to any directions of the Board of Trustees or exceeded the limits of expenditure provided by the charter, or that they were not necessary for the purpose of keeping in good condition the highways of the village. That being the case the charter made it the duty of the Board to audit and allow the same, and to cause an order therefor to be issued to the street commissioner payable to his order. Charter §53.

2. The amount was probably audited by the assenting vote of the President (there being a tie in the Board) of three Trustees.

The term trustees as used in the charter, usually means "Board of Trustees" and not the trustees regarded as individuals. Since they can only transact business "as a board" (Charter §26. The duties which are imposed upon them by §26 and which are entitled to their directions by §26 and the various other powers and duties which are conferred and imposed upon them by the Charter, can only be exercised or performed by them when acting as a "board" in every such case the word "Trustees" when used in the Charter is equivalent to "Board of Trustees." In section 78 sub 2, both (i. e. "Trustees" and Board of Trustees,) terms are used and undoubtedly with the same identical meaning. In all these cases an act done by the "Board" is done by the "Trustees" in the sense of the Charter. But the President is a constituent part of the "board" and in the case of a tie it is his right and duty to vote. Charter Sec. 21.

In the case of a tie determined by the casting vote of the President the act is still the act of the "Trustees" in the sense of the Charter and in every such case the term "Trustees" as used in the Charter, includes the President of the village and this gives as [illegible] in and equivalent to the word "[illegible]" all members of a quorum of the Board of Trustees present and acting at any meeting of the Board. The [illegible] trustees" used in §26 does [illegible] the trustees as individuals, [illegible] bers of the board, since it is [illegible] acting as such members [illegible] express the [illegible] to.

On the evening of the 26th of April last the Philharmonic Society produced the "Chimes of Normandy" at Stephens Opera House and THE FULTON TIMES of May 2 had the following to say of the entertainment:

"THE 'CHIMES OF NORMANDY.'—The Philharmonic Society of Syracuse sang this opera in Stephens Opera House Thursday evening.

The Philharmonics are amateurs, but they are artists; for a more finished and satisfactory rendition of an opera was never brought out by professionals in Fulton. Miss Marie Sullivan's inimitable portrayal of 'Serpolette,' the good for nothing, elicited merited praise. Mr. Ruger's 'Gaspard' a miser, was exceptionally well drawn and Miss Long's 'Germain' and Mr. Ormsbee's 'Bailli' were kindly received. The characters 'Henri' by Frank Wooley and Jean Greneichleux,' by James Long were respectively sustained in a perfect manner. The orchestra under the direction of Prof. Grove L. Marsh kept perfect time and between the acts furnished the audience with delightful airs. All who attended expressed themselves in most complimentary terms with the entire performance."

No further comment is needful. We will simply add that the orchestra will consist of twenty-five pieces and will as then be under the leadership of Prof. Grove L. Marsh.

Rare Works of Art.

There are many persons in Fulton and vicinity who have not forgotten the sudden death of Mrs. Julia F. Yale which occurred in Paris last Christmas morning. She had spent considerable time here and being a lady of rare culture and refinement had made many friends. She was considered a fine artist before going abroad and while there spent more than two years of untiring study in Germany and France. Dr. A. F. Beard of Syracuse recently returned from Paris and brought with him a number of her finest paintings which are now in possession of Mrs. H. L. Bullock, and can be seen by any friends who desire, for a few weeks, with the exception of Tuesdays and Fridays. They are all copies from noted pictures of the old masters, and nearly all from the Royal gallery at Dresden. Among the number are "Mary with the infant Christ," from Carlo Maratti, "The Christchild caressing little John" from Werff, "Saint Cecelia playing the Organ," from Carlo Dolci, Batoni's "Penitent Magdalene" and the "Penitent Magdalene" from Correggio. The last is a prohibited painting which only the best artists are allowed to copy and but one copy can be made each year. Permission must be obtained from the King of Saxony, and as it had been copied the year Mrs. Yale presented her petition she had little hope, yet her anxiety was so great that she wrote the King in German enclosing her testimonials from the well known artists of that city, and special permission was granted on account of her superior ability and attainments as an artist. Her copy was pronounced perfect by the director of the gallery at Dresden. Her German friends have since her death written friends here that she was considered there a "real soul artist." While copying in the gallery of Dresden she succeeded in painting one very difficult picture which the director pronounced a fac-simile of the original and said she was the first artist who had made a true copy of that picture during the twelve years he had been there, although many attempts had been made.

Three Divorce Cases.

In May, 1879, Chauncey L, Hancock was united in marriage to Miss Ida Stanton, who in October 1881, left her home without warning and is now supposed to be living in Philadelphia. H. & A. ROSENBLOOM,

LARGEST CLOTHING HOUSE IN THE COUNTY.

And Rosenbloom spake all these words, saying: We are Rosenblooms the Clothiers, who have brought you out of the bondage of unseemly apparel.

1. You shall have no other clothiers before us; you shall not have made for you any base imitation of the good and well fashioned garments which we have waiting for you at our stores.

2. You shall not bow down to other clothiers nor serve them, for these iniquities shall surely be visited on your children and your children's children, in the shape of ill fitting and cast off clothing, of which you shall shirk the wearing.

3. You shall not take Rosenbloom's clothing on tick, for doing business on credit is no credit to either buyer or seller; neither shall you try to beat them down on their price, as you save 20 per cent. by buying of H. & A. Rosenbloom.

4. Six days shall you labor and do all your work, and on the evening of the sixth you shall buy much clothing of H. & A. Rosenbloom, but on the seventh which is the Sabbath you shall wear these good clothes to church with an upright head and thankful heart, you and your sons and your men servants, and the stranger that is within your gates.

5 Honor your father and your grandfather and buy them each a new suit or an overcoat for a Christmas present.

6 You shall not go ragged after looking over Rosenbloom's tempting stock.

7 You shall not freeze while H. & A. Rosenblooms' overcoats and shirts are going so cheap.

8 You shall not steal as H. & A. Rosenbloom sell their goods cheaper than you can steal them.

9 You shall not bear false witness against H. & A. Rosenbloom's clothing nor shall their competitors say aught against their goods.

10 You shall not covet in vain H. & A. Rosenblooms' clothing nor anything that is in their stores, for all shall be yours for the little script that is within your purse.

[illegible] Lewis. The evidence for the prosecution was substantially the same as the affidavits published in The Times a week ago. The defendants testified in their own behalf and denied assaulting the boys, but claimed that three of them came into Case's place, bought drinks and a cigar and then ran out without paying for the same. Newsbaum says he ran out and attempted to bring the boys back for the purpose of identifying them and claims that the boys attacked him. This is also claimed by William Case who also ran out of the saloon to assist Newsbaum. Both claim that in striking the boys they acted in self defense. Henry J. Case asserts that he did not strike a blow during the entire fracas, and all the defendants deny using certain obscene, profane and threatening language attributed to them. The jury failed to agree upon a verdict, standing five to one for acquittal. Mr. Heimburger was in favor of conviction. Quite a little interest has been manifested in the case since the arrest of the defendants and at the trial a number of ladies were present.

The case is being tried again to-day.

Whatever may be the result of the present trial The Times believes that the people have a strong case which should be ably prosecuted. It does not seem probable that four small boys would have the audacity to attack three or even two full grown men accustomed to deal with the frequenters of saloons. Nor does it seem possible that two of these boys should be knocked insensible and left in pools of blood without being assailed, while Messrs. Case and Newsbaum came out of the affray with whole scalps.

The laws of the State of New York forbid the sale of liquor to minors and neither of the boys are of age. Happily for the defendants this offence is not among the charges against them.

Sunday Liquor Selling.

Yesterday morning Albert Keller, the proprietor of Willow hotel at the upper landing, was arrested and brought before Police Justice Piper charged with selling liquor on Sunday, December 9. Before Keller was arrested and brought into court four different affidavits had been made, two of the parties making them swearing that they drank liquor in his place on the Sunday in question while the other two witnesses saw liquor dealt out to other parties. Upon being brought into court, Keller pleaded guilty to the offence charged and was fined $30, which he paid.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases.

Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

TRADE MARK

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 19, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain there months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a key spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very severe tests [illegible]

New oats are not good feed for horses. They relax the bowels, and often if the change from old to new is sudden, the value of the oat ratio is almost entirely lost. As they shrink a great deal in drying, the old oats, though nominally dearer, are usually cheaper, as well as better than the new crop.

Two goats with ordinary farm flocks of sheep are said to be a good protection against dogs. At least so it has been found by some New Jersey farmers. Formerly when a dog entered a sheep field at night the sheep would run wildly around and cry piteously. Since the goats have been used to guard them, they form in line behind the goats and seem to enjoy the fun.

If a horse is shy and hard to catch, take finely grated castor, oils of rhodium and cummin. Keep them in separate bottles well corked. Put some of the oil of cummin on your hand and approach the horse on the windward side. He will then move toward you. As soon as you can reach him rub some of the cummin on his nose, give him a little of the castor or anything he likes, and get a few drops of the oil of rhodium on his tongue. After this you can make him do nearly everything you want. Treat him kindly, feed well, handle gently, and victory is certain.

☞ GILMORE'S AROMATIC WINE is more highly recommended by physicians and medical societies than any other remedy in the world. It is warranted to cure all diseases peculiar to women. Sold by M. M. Williams Fulton. 2y1

Ground has been broken at Crystal Park, Colorado, for a railroad to the top of Pike's Peak, 14,200 feet above the sea level.

In the Hop Porous Plaster the virtues of Fresh Hops are combined with strengthening and stimulating balsams, and its cure of Weak Back, Pain in the Side, Rheumatism and Neuralgia or Pain in the Chest are simply marvellous, it being more efficacious and thorough than any liniment or liquid remedies. You'll say so after using.

A new device has been patented in London to generate electricity at so small a cost that it will be cheaper than gas.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough of cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

The Altoona, Fla., Argus has a sixteen ounce orange, a sixteen foot sugar cane, and a nine foot blade of park grass.

FREE OF COST.

By calling at M. M. When troubled with asthma, Bronchitis, Dry, Hacking Cough, Pains in the chest, and all diseases of the throat and lungs. Try a sample of this medicine. tf

The ebony tree grows to be fifteen feet in circumference. The outer wood is pure white, the heart only being perfectly black.

Not one person in a hundred, at the age of sixty, can say that they are free from Rheumatic pains. All can be cured of this most dreadful disease by the use of Rheumatic Syrup.

To whom it may concern:

WOLCOTT, N. Y., April 11, 1882.

This is to certify that I am an engineer by trade, and for the last five years have been troubled more or less with rheumatism, and for the last five weeks before this date I have been entirely unable to work, and when I commenced using the Rheumatic Syrup I could hardly leave my chair. After using one-half of a bottle of the Syrup, I began to grow better, and am now at work again as usual, having been cured with three bottles. I should advise any one troubled with Rheumatism to use Rheumatic Syrup. Enough cannot be said in its praise. ALFRED REYNOLDS.

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."

PHIL THORN'S BRIDGE.

"Wife, I wish we were rich?"

"For what?" asked Mrs. Thorn, as she laid aside her knitting.

"For Phil's sake. The boy has a great desire to rise in the world. He has already gone as far as he can in his studies at school. If I had the means I would send him to an academy, have him prepare for college, and thus meet his ambitious aim," replied Mr. Thorn.

"I agree with you, husband; but the farm is small, and the mortgage not a light burden for us to carry. Education is a great thing for a person to have. I could have no better wish for our boy than to see him advanced as rapidly as he desired, but I cannot see the way clear to it."

Just then a loud stamping of feet in the back entry. The door opened, and a ruddy cheeked boy of 16 or 17 years of age entered. It was Phil, the subject of the above conversation. One glance at his bright, intelligent face and his earnest eyes would tell the observer that the possessor, had he the opportunity would one day reach an enviable position in the world. If he had the opportunity—ah! "There's the rub."

He was a close student, deep thinker, and had mastered the rudiments thoroughly—but could go no further because of a lack of means. At the district school he was known as the best scholar; upon the play-ground as the finest ballist. Whatever he essayed, be it study or play, he puts his whole heart in the task; and by his earnest endeavors won a leading position.

The farm was small and the mortgage heavy. Under such adverse circumstances Phil was obliged to suffer a not pleasant restraint. Winter sped along, and the days began to grow gradually longer, telling of spring's approach. Phil's spirit grew strangely moved. A subtle something—perhaps that new and wonderful sense—told him that the time was near at hand for him to make his first grand attempt.

The one great dream of his life—college—held its magic before him; and, when slumber closed his eyes, his fancies were of commencements, orations and graduating honors.

The soft touch of balmy spring swept the snow-clad mountains. Little rills and babbling brooks grew into rivers and rushed down the slopes, helping to swell the great current of the valley [illegible]—the Mohawk.

"Do you think the bridge will stand it, [illegible]" asked Phil, as the two were [illegible] upon the river bank, watching [illegible] great clumps of ice dash against the [illegible] and float under the bridge.

"[illegible] I think so, provided the river [illegible] down before the west Canada [illegible] up."

"[illegible] not?"

"[illegible] fear the bridge will not stand [illegible]. You see, Phil, that small [illegible] the bridge dams the [illegible] only river ice that [illegible] down the stream, [illegible] sound. The creek had broken up. Then, like a great white monster, whose jaws are parted to engulf its prey, the ice from the west dashes, rolls, churns and tumbles in a heavy mass toward the doomed bridge. A gust of cold comes before it, as though to tell the anxious watchers what to expect. The bridge cannot be saved. A groan arises from the crowd as the gigantic float sweeps against the ice breakers and piles these higher and higher and higher, as the mass behind adds its quantity. And then, with a powerful effort, the white monster raises the timber from the piers and sweeps the bridge away, grinding it into splinters between the jagged icy teeth.

[illegible]

* * * * * * *

The persons who have in hand the rebuilding of the bridge offer the following proposition to engineers, architects, and general——To the person who will send to the proper authorities the best general plan, estimates, etc., for a new bridge, will be awarded $1,000.

EDWARD LISLE,
RICHARD FORBES.

The foregoing was the notice placed conspicuously in the papers of the county.

It met many eyes, and was the subject of conversation among the town people.

The bridge must be replaced at once; for, since its demolishment, one of the most prominent avenues of trade leading into Little Falls was cut off. Who will gain the prize? Evidently some noted bridge builder, some professional engineer who has a wide reputation.

Days pass, and Phil Thorn is still on the farm. He burns the midnight oil; for, after his parents have both retired, a gleam of light can be seen streaming from his window. Once or twice his father asked him the reason for keeping such late hours. He only replied: "Wild goose chase, perhaps; please don't ask me anything further, father."

The summer began, and then one day a stranger, in company with Edward Lisle, came to the Thorn homestead and asked for Phil.

There was a tumultuous emotion in the boy's heart when he entered the parlor where the two gentlemen awaited him.

"Master Thorn, this is James Orley of Albany," said Mr. Lisle, by way of introduction. Phil bowed politely to the strange gentleman. The latter rose and said, as he took the boy's hand;

"So, this is the wonderful young architect, is it?"

Phil's heart almost jumped up in his throat. There can be but one meaning to the stranger's words.

"Has—has mine been accepted?" Phil uttered.

"It has, Philip. In proof of which allow me to present you with this," responded Mr. Lisle, handing the astonished boy a check for $1,000.

"My dear young friend," said Mr. Orley, "the bridge in itself is a mere nothing to what you may achieve. You seem to possess the natural instinct and the qualities which make up an architect. I am a professional in the business, and if you would like to continue what you have worthily commenced, my office at Albany is open to you!"

I shall not endeavor to tell you how Phil's parents received the glad news of their son's victory. The papers far and near told how a mere country boy, yet in his teens, had snatched the honors away from the professionals.

The mortgage upon the farm was cleared. Phil accepted the generous offer made by Mr. Orley, the noted architect, and instead of going to college, went in the office and became famous as a great engineer and bridge builder.

Sojourner Truth.

Sojourner Truth who died recently at Battle Creek, Michigan, was a most interesting character. Nobody knew her exact age and with all the different speculation on the subject it seemed impossible to estimate it with any degree of certainty. There is no doubt, however that she has witnessed most of the great scenes enacted during the formative period of this nation; that she has endured the sufferings of bondage and outlived all her proper contemporaries. Up to the time of her death she was possessed of remarkable mental and physical vigor, and was able to recall all the notable incidents in her long experience. She was, then, a very rare and well preserved relic of a most interesting period. "The Narrative of Sojourner Truth," published in 1850, fixes her age somewhere about the beginning of the present century, but since then, from reminiscences she has related, it seems to have been satisfactorily determined that her birth ante-dates that time by considerable. She says that she was born in Ulster County, N. Y., near Kingston. This town was burned by order of Sir Henry Clinton, in 1777. She claims to have seen Kingston many times when it was a blackened ruin, before any attempt was made to rebuild it. She distinctly remembered what is thought to have been the dark day of 1780, and says that she was a full grown woman when the Ulster Gazette came out dressed in mourning for the death of George Washington. She was set at liberty by the act of 1817, [illegible]

FASHION NOTES.

Clinging draperies remain in favor with society girls.

Kittens' heads adorn many nobby felt and velvet hats.

Black and brown alligator shoes are very fashionable.

Ten bangles on one wrist and one on the other is the fashion now.

Dancing shoes of fine French kid are more fashionable than slippers.

Tight-fitting sacques of vivid scarlet plush are popular for young ladies.

Long tortoise-shell daggers are fashionable to run through the back hair.

Braid Langtry knots are more popular than the twisted ones for the street.

An alligator swallowing a colored baby is one of the newest things in lace-pins.

New-mown hay perfume is put up in small bottles representing railroad lanterns.

New ear-rings show a golden dish with a star, crescent and fire-fly on its service.

All winter sacques and dolmans have pockets inside for the handkerchief or purse.

Some of the new parlor mirrors have a spray of flowers printed in one corner of the glass.

Long bows of salmon pink and pale blue Ottoman ribbon are placed together on the bodices of black silk dresses.

Freckles, odd as it may seem, are fashionable because the Princess Louise has them, and now they are produced artificially.

Large English turbans bound with velvet and trimmed with a pheasant's breast are popular and becoming for young ladies.

"Thanksgiving yellow," combined with olive green, is a favorite combination for bonnets. The first color is the hue of a pumpkin.

Nets are worn by very few over the bangs. The favorite color in hair is bronze brown. Middle aged ladies wear short veils of black net.

The new "Spanish mantle," which is to take the place of the hackneyed fur-lined circular with those who seek for novelty in attire, is very becoming to tall slender ladies. This wrap is uncommonly elegant and graceful, and is made of black brocaded velvet, and trimmed arond the intire garment with black Russian fox. Around the neck is a very deep collar of the same fur, which covers the shoulders like a cape. The wrap is lined with dark red plush, and is much too heavy for street wear, being designed especially for carriage use, and as a garment to be thrown aside in a heated room.

Mrs. James P. Caldwell rode on a free pass the other day from Mexico, Mo., to Leadville, Col., to see her son. This pass was given to her husband and herself twenty years ago, and is a life pass for both, and will pass them over any railroad in the United States. It was given them by the North Missouri Railroad Company after they had respectfully declined the company's offer of a gift of $10,000. How the company happened to offer the couple—who were well to do in the world—a gift of $10,000 is told by the Hannibal Journal; In January, 1861, the Confederate bushwhackers set fire to the bridge over Young's Creek, and Mr. Caldwell got out of bed in season to check the flames with a pail of water. Then he hurried to Centralia to give the alarm, leaving his wife and children to keep the fire in check. It was a bitterly cold night, and Mrs. Caldwell had to wrap her children in blankets; but despite the cold they worked and extinguished the flames. The bridge however, had been reduced to a mere shell. Mrs. Caldwell knew that it could not bear up a train that was almost due, and, hurrying to her house, she got a lantern and stood on the bridge in the biting blasts of a January night until that train with its freight of human life had been warned and stopped.

Probably the most wonderful tree in the world is the Baobab or Maibey bread tree. It grows only to the height of forty feet, but is thirty feet in diameter. The age of this tree is quite incalculable. Humboldt considers it "the oldest living organic monument of our planet." A good-sized room can be cut in the trunk of the Baobab, with comfortable accommodations for thirty men, and the trees still live and flourish. The fruit, which is nourishing, is about a foot long. The tree grows very slowly, a specimen at Kew, in England, which is more than 80 years old, having only attained a hight of one and a half feet. The oldest known Baobabs are estimated to be over 5,000.

A Russian gentleman by the name of Skbberscahkhivitch was traveling in Maine when a brakeman shouted:

"Wequetegnock; change cars for Androscoggin and Saccarrappascasset."

"Whaskey did he sayvitch?" asked the Russian gentleman in broken English of his traveling companion.

"He was announcing the name of stations," was the reply.

The Wrong Foot.

A little Norwalk boy got a sliver in his foot, and a motion to poultice the wound, made by his mother and seconded by his grandmother, was carried in spite of his objections. He kicked and screamed and protested that he would not submit to any such indignity, but the majority against him was two to one and the poultice was made ready. It was arranged that the grandmother should apply the poultice while the patient's mother stood over him with a stick with authority and instructions to apply that also if he made the least show of resistance. When all was ready the youngster was placed on the bed and operations began. As the hot poultices touched the boy's foot he opened his mouth to say something, but his mother, with the stick, awed him into silence. Again the boy strove to make himself heard, and again the upraised stick warned him to be quiet. In a short minute the poultice was firmly in place and the boy was tucked up in bed, there to remain until the medicine had its work. As the urchin's tormentors moved away, a shrill, small voice came from under the bedclothes; "You've dot it on the wrong foot!"

The first institutions resembling the pawnshops of to-day were founded in the thirteenth century by merchants from Lombardy who settled in England and France, and afterwards in the other countries of Europe. These usurers flourished and grew fat upon their enormous profits. Noblemen, and even kings, wese compelled to seek the financial aid of these money lenders, and it is recited that Edward III. and Richard II. pawned with them the crown jewels of England. Lombard street in London and the Rue des Lombards in Paris, are memorials of these ancient pawnbrokers.

The turkey who beams with complacence,
Thinking now that his future is good,
Will find all too soon how he's blundered,
And halloed while yet in the wood.

He's passed thro' the Thanksgiving Scylla,
And 'scaped with his neck safe and sound:
But alas! in the Christmas Charybdis
He doubtless will find himself drowned.

New York Observer

(Established 1823.)

No paper in the country has a more experienced and able corps of Editors. Dr. S. Irenæus Prime stands at the head of the editorial fraternity, and his letters and editorials still enrich the Observer. Others among its editors have had the training of a quarter of a century for their work.

The Correspondence of the Observer is from all lands; and the news, carefully prepared from letters and telegrams, furnishes a complete view of the condition of the world each week.

The departments of Agriculture, Business, Sunday-school teaching and religious work are conducted by experts, who write clearly and to the point. The Observer does not fill its columns with long essays and old sermons but aims to be

THE CENTURY.

PROGRAM FOR 1883-'84.

The programfor the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, the Century shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by EDWARD EGGLESTON, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES by HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTROMNY, untechnical articles, by Prof S. B. LANGLY, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE by H. H. BOYESEN, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANITY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, HAWTHORNE, GEORGE ELIOT and CABLE, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"GARFIELD IN ENGLAND," extracts from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"THE SILVERADO SQUATTERS," by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "New Arabian Nights."

There will be papers on outdoor England by John Burroughs and others, a beautifully illustrated series on Dante, a number of papers by the eminent French novelist ALPHONSE DAUDET, articles on art and archæology, by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER and others, illustrated papers on sport and adventure, short stories by the leading writers, essays on timely subjects, etc., etc.

Subscription price, 4.00 a year; single numbers sold everywhere, at 35 cents each. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter, bank check, or draft.

SPECIAL OFFERS.

To enable new subscribers to begin with the first volume under The Century name, we make the following special offers: New subscribers beginning with November, 1883, may obtain the magazine for one year from date, and the twenty-four previous numbers, unbound, for $8. Regular price for the three years, $12.

No Cure! No Pay!

Dr. Lawrence's Cough Balsam

is Warranted to Cure COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, SORE THROAT, and all Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

We do not claim to cure consumption when thoroughly seated, but we do claim that thousands of lives might be saved every year by the timely use of Dr. Lawrence's Cough Balsam.

Many people imagine they have consumption, when in reality they have only a bad cold, which can easily be cured by proper care and the right kind of medicine. We could fill columns with testimonials but we do not believe in that way of advertising, our idea is to let everybody that is afflicted with a cough try for themselves, and if not perfectly satisfied, return the empty bottle to the dealer of whom it was bought and receive their money back.

Price for trial size 25 ct. Family size $1.00 per bottle.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go [illegible]

F. C. BULLOCK - - EDITOR.

O'Donnell, the slayer of Carey, the informer, was hanged in London Monday morning.

The Standard Theatre of New York was burned last Friday night. The fire was not attended with any loss of life.

The Republican National Committee met last week and named Chicago as the place and June 3 as the day of the meeting of the National Convention next year.

Last Thursday the Garden City, one of the largest ferryboats plying the waters in the vicinity of New York was burned. Two officers, who remained at their posts and succeeded in getting the boat in her slip, were slightly scorched.

Postmaster General Gresham does not approve of the proposition to reduce the drop-letter postage to one cent, but he suggests that the limit of weight of ordinary two-cent letters be increased from half an ounce to an ounce, and that the limit of weight on single newspapers be advanced from two ounces to three. He also advocates a system of postal telegraphy.

Another Editor has been robbed. This time it is the Hannibal News man and the thieves actually captured a hive containing a fine swarm of bees and sixty pounds of honey, and what is worse this afflicted scribe asserts that Hannibal justice is not adequate to the occasion and proposes to protect what little loose material he has outside of buildings from midnight prowlers by the use of gunpowder and lead.

Mr. D. C. Littlejohn is already on the ground in Albany looking after his canvass for the Speaker's chair of the Assembly, and it is confidently believed by his friends that he will be the successful candidate in the Republican caucus. Although opposed to the election of Mr. Littlejohn, now that he is a representative of this Assembly district, we should be pleased to see him in the Speaker's chair, which we believe he would fill with honesty and ability.

The American Reformer complacently remarks that "at last the Prohibition vote of this State is definitely announced. Frederick Gates, as shown by the official returns at Albany, received 18,816 for Secretary of State; and Virgil A. Willard, for Attorney-General, had about 20,000. As Carr's (Republican) plurality was 18,583, and Chapin's (Democratic) was 16,219, it becomes apparent that this year, at least, Prohibitionists hold their balance of party power. They can afford to be sneered at; but neither of the two great parties can afford to sneer at them."

James G. Blaine recently wrote a letter to the Philadelphia Press in which he recommended the distribution among the States of the internal revenue tax collected by the government. Of this scheme the American Reformer (Prohibition organ) says: "Mr. Blaine, like Henry Clay, has written one letter too much. If he can point out nothing better for the General Government to do for the benefit of all the States, than thus to make them parties to a great national crime and promoters by complicity in the great national curse, he has not retired from politics one day too soon, and there will be no call for his return."

In the trial of the Dwight insurance case just finished at Norwich the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $18,743.27, the full amount of the defendant Germania Company's insurance on Col. Dwight's life with interest, since the deceased's death at five per cent. and five per cent. added for costs. Eighteen companies beside the Germania were interested in the result and agreed to abide by the verdict of the jury. The companies that contested the payment of the insurance were these:

Manhattan, $20,000; Northwestern, $15,000; Ætna, $10,000; Union Mutual, $10,000; National, Vermont, $10,000; New England, $210,000; United States, $10,000; Metropolitan, $10,000; National U.S.A., $5,000; Brooklyn, $5,000; Mutual Benefit, $15,000; Germania, $15,000; New York Life, $10,000; Travelers, $10,000; Washington, $10,000; Berkshire, $10,000; Massachusetts Mutual, $10,000; State Mutual, Massachusetts, $10,000; Homœopathic, $5,000, representing a total of $200,000. In 1868 Col. Dwight took out policies of insurance on his life in twenty-one companies, aggregating $262,500. In the latter part of that year he died and by the terms of his [illegible]

Walter M., infant son of Frank and Dora Watson of Oswego Falls, died last Saturday, aged 16 months.

On Monday Miss Smith of Phœnix, a maiden sister of the late Clark Smith, died at the age of 68 years.

At about 8 o'clock last Wednesday evening, Clark W. Smith, who had been sick but a few days, died at his home in this village at the age of 65 years. Mr. Smith was born in Vermont and has lived in this vicinity for forty years, the greater part of the time in the town of Granby. About a dozen years ago he removed to Fulton where he has since lived. He had many warm friends and but few or no enemies. To know him was to hold him in high regard. He was a member of the Baptist church and was probably as devout a Christian as lived in Fulton. He was collector of school district No. 1. The family of the deceased desire to thank their many friends for kindnesses rendered in their bereavement.

A Change of Management.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Oswego Falls Manufacturing Company held last Friday and presided over by A. D. Julliard, President of the company, some important changes, to take effect January 1st, were made in the management of the factories. Owing to declining years the Superintendent, Mr. D. Ramsden, has felt for some time that he must lessen his business cares and accordingly tendered his resignation as Superintendent. The resignation was accepted and Mr. Emile Maertens, who has served for the past few weeks as Assistant Superintendent under Mr. Ramsden, was appointed Superintendent of the mills, while Mr. Ramsden in the future will act in the capacity of Managing Director. Mr. S. Laycock remains as Assistant Secretary and Treasurer. The management of the mills state that the present tariff is against some classes of goods heretofore manufactured and various changes must be made on this account. The manufacture of coatings, dress goods, &c., will be continued and the general production of the mills will be increased. The following preamble and resolution was adopted at the meeting on Friday:

Whereas, Mr. D. Ramsden has been Managing director and Suprentendent of this company since its organization:

Resolved, That the said company, recognizing his advanced age, and the constantly increasing labor of management, do hereby accept his resignation as Superintendent, and tender him the thanks of the stock-holders for his faithful and efficient services, with the hope that his health may enable him to long remain as Managing Director.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

South Granby.

South Granby, Dec. 18.—Mrs. Edward Palmer and Mrs. F. W. Palmer who have been visiting their parents in New York returned home last week.

Henry Howe and brother of Gratiot county, Michigan, brothers of the late P. E. Howe who died near Fulton a short time ago, have been visiting friends in this vicinity.

Dr. Miller and wife and Miss Laura McCordy of Fulton spent last Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. S. Bowen.

The Good Templars of Jacksonville have been erecting a commodious hall and next Friday evening will meet in it for the first time. The lodge now numbers about 120 members and is prospering.

The young members of George S. White's family are suffering with the measles.

A young folks' party will be held at L. M. Chapman's Wednesday evening.

The winter term of our Union School is prosperous. Prof. [illegible] our Principal is so elevating it that it is taking high rank with other schools in the County. A [illegible]

[illegible] opera, "[illegible]" at Stephens Opera House [illegible]. As far as the weather was concerned a more unpropitious night could not have been chosen, for, although pleasant during the afternoon, at dark a blinding snow storm set in and this kept many people away. The dress circle and orchestra chairs were, however, well filled, and the gallery contained a goodly number of people. Those who came out were well repaid for the effort they made to attend under such unfavorable circumstances, for there has not been this season a more enjoyable entertainment in Fulton, nor anything like an approach to it, with the possible exception of the one given by the Thespian Society. A more nicely balanced cast is seldom witnessed upon the boards. The renditions of Miss Marie Sullivan in "Vladimir Samoiloff" and Miss Mabel Ine Smith in "Princess Lydia Imanova" were simply charming, Miss Sullivan's finished acting and Miss Smith's cultured voice winning for them merited applause. Prof. W. E. G. Evans in "Julian Hardy, the Reporter," displayed a remarkable adaptation for his part and might almost be said to be inimitable in it, for he succeeded in caricaturing the professional bohemian to perfection, while his clear and ringing tenor voice compelled him to receive several encores. Mr. Leverett Fox in "Mustapha" and Mr. H. J. Ormsbee in "Sergeant Steipann" succeeded in producing a great deal of amusement, while Mr. E. M. Dudley, as "Count Timofey Kantchukoff," and Mr. Frank Wooley, as "Izzet Pasha," each deserve their full share of credit for the successful entertainment of the audience. The support by the other leading characters and the large chorus was all that could be desired, while the fine orchestra conducted by Prof. G. L. Marsh could hardly have been improved upon. Not an adverse criticism upon the entertainment have we heard, but there seems to be a general desire that the Philharmonics may visit Fulton again at an early day.

Guarding Against Thieves and Fire.

Last Saturday five new safes of Herring & Co.'s make arrived in town. They were for H. C. Gardner, Gardner & Seymour, A. Emerick and Marcus Crahan. The one for Gardner & Seymour was a large double door safe, while Mr. Crahan's is a small one. The other three were of medium size, or what is known as No. 5½. They are all beauties and are constructed after the most approved models. A large fire-proof safe, containing a burglar-proof vault, with combination and time locks complete, also manufactured by Herring & Co., will soon be put in the First National Bank.

Masonic Election.

At the regular annual meeting of Hiram Lodge, No. 144, F. and A. M., on Monday evening the following officers were installed for the ensuing year:

Acquitted by a Jury.

The second trial of Henry J. Case, William Case and William Newsbaum for assault and battery came off last Wednesday and Thursday before Police Justice Piper and a jury composed of Harvey Smith, John Robinson, Philander S. Fuller, Daniel Briggs, Abner Parker and G. Fred Spafford, who brought in a verdict of not guilty. This result, however, does not abate one jot nor tittle the odium which the defendants have brought upon themselves by being participants in so disgraceful a row.

A Slight Accident.

Between 8 and 9 o'clock Monday evening a large pulp stone, weighing nearly two tons, burst in the pulp mill connected with the Victoria Paper Mills. The stone was hung on a shaft and had been running about one hour, when suddenly it flew into a thousand fragments, some of the pieces weighing about 300 pounds. Although two men were in the room at the time neither of them were injured and but little damage was done. The wheel was worth about $100.

Joshua Gifford's Condition.

Joshua Gifford, who was convicted last March of killing his wife in the town of Granby, Oswego county, and whose death sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life, has become very feeble. He does some light work in the State shop in Auburn prison, but is in the hospital most of the time. A week ago he had a slight shock of paralysis. It is thought he has but a short time to live.—[Syracuse Journal.

The First Blizzard.

Wm. C. McDonald, of Schrœppel, a retired M. E. clergymen, appeals to the board of supervisors for the exemption of $1,500 which is allowed by law to clergymen. He made the same demand to the assessors and that body after an inquiry into his case, going so far as to address the attorney general and State assessors as to the proper construction of the law under which he claimed exemption, and the instruction which they received was that the exemption could not be extended to ministers who have ceased to act as such. Mr. McDonald is at present engaged in farming.

H. & A. ROSENBLOOM

LARGEST CLOTHING HOUSE IN THE COUNTY.

And Rosenbloom spake all these words, saying: We are Rosenblooms the Clothiers, who have brought you out of the bondage of unseemly apparel.

1. You shall have no other clothiers before us; you shall not have made for you any base imitation of the good and well fashioned garments which we have waiting for you at our stores.

2. You shall not bow down to other clothiers nor serve them, for these iniquities shall surely be visited on your children and your children's children, in the shape of ill fitting and cast off clothing, of which you shall shirk the wearing.

3. You shall not take Rosenbloom's clothing on tick, for doing business on credit is no credit to either buyer or seller; neither shall you try to beat them down on their price, as you save 20 per cent. by buying of H. & A. Rosenbloom.

4. Six days shall you labor and do all your work, and on the evening of the sixth you shall buy much clothing of H. & A. Rosenbloom, but on the seventh which is the Sabbath you shall wear these good clothes to church with an upright head and thankful heart, you and your sons and your men servants, and the stranger that is within your gates.

5 Honor your father and your grandfather and buy them each a new suit or an overcoat for a Christmas present.

6 You shall not go ragged after looking over Rosenbloom's tempting stock.

7 You shall not freeze while H. & A. Rosenblooms' overcoats and suits are going so cheap.

8 You shall not steal as H. & A. Rosenbloom sell their goods cheaper than you can steal them.

9 You shall not bear false witness against H. & A. Rosenbloom's clothing nor shall their competitors say aught against their goods.

10 You shall not covet in vain H. & A. Rosenblooms' clothing nor anything that is in their stores, for all shall be yours for the little script that is within your purse.

[illegible] has the best [illegible]

[illegible] lecture [illegible] was delivered at Stephens Opera House last night by the Rev. Joseph Cook, who discussed the question "Does Death End All?" The lecture was divided into three general heads, the speaker starting out with the theory that as there was something in nature to match each and every physical attribute, so there was something beyond our human vision to match the instincts of conscience, and although he admitted and believed that conscience might be quickened by the influence of Christian ancestry and Christian education, he held that it could no more be born from such a source than could reason.

He then took up the subject of matter and physiologically proved that different kinds of matter were formed from the same generative force; that the muscle, the nerve and the tendon, each widely different one from the other, were produced by the same life force. The theory that there was growth from any form of crystalization produced by chemistry had been exploded. Growth was only produced by life, and how different forms could come from the same generative life force could not be explained, even by science. Life must exist before organization and hence life might exist after disorganization or beyond the grave.

These things were the star-light and moonlight of his discussion, but he presented the Bible as the sunlight of proof of his belief that death does not end all and closed with a glowing peroration, claiming that science seen from a correct standpoint and the Bible rightly explained did not conflict, but were in perfect accord.

The audience was large and very attentive, for at times the fall of a pin could have been heard. By special invitation of Manager Stephens the Board of Supervisors who are sitting in Oswego attended in a body, coming to Fulton by special train, via. the N. Y. O. & W. Railroad. They were accompanied by a corps of journalists, consisting of John A. Place and J. D. Alexander of the Oswego Times and S. Holroyd and a reporter from the Oswego Palladium.

CHRISTMAS.

Sunday school officials may look for a large inflocking of new scholars next Sunday as Christmas comes on the following Tuesday.

The Sunday School of Zion church will hold a Christmas festival in the hall over Charles Whitaker's market, next Monday evening. There will be a Christmas tree, a short address by the Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien, accompanied by Christmas carols. The children will be given a supper.

On Christmas morning there will be services at Zion church, consisting of a sermon and celebration of the holy communion. The sermon will be by the pastor, Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien, who will take for his subject "The sign of Jesus Christ." There will also be a service in the evening at 7:30.

There will be a Christmas tree at the Universalist Church on Monday evening, with appropriate literary exercises. A Christmas masque will be rendered by the children, entitled "The False Sir Santa Claus" all are invited to come and by their presence encourage the children's efforts to please and entertain. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged.

This happened in quiet Oswego, all in one day: A young woman took poison in a drug store, was found in the street and saved from death; two disreputable females had a fight in the street over a man well known in the city, and were arrested; a man lost all his money in a gambling room and fired a pistol at his head, inflicting an ugly scalp wound. No names are printed in connection with sketches of these affairs by the Times.—[Syracuse Journal.

A Revolution in Clothing.

Democracy has found a powerful ally in the Ready Made Clothing business. The occupation or the standing of a man may no longer be determined by his dress, and in so far as clothes designate the individual, it is hardly possible to distinguish a Supreme Court Judge from a grocer's clerk. To-day, good, servicable garments, of attractive appearance and closely resembling custom made goods, can be bought at Kent & Miller's, 18 and 20 South Salina street, at surprisingly low figures. Their window and their tables are filled with such garments, and the prices at which they are offered leaves no excuse for him who is slovenly attired. Years ago, when the Ready Made Clothing business was in its infancy, it followed the fashions afar off. To-day the styles are closely followed; and the mandates of fashion affect almost instantaneously the manufacture of Ready Made Clothing. Kent & Miller always have the latest styles, and by improved methods of manufacture, are enabled to put the prices way down low. Call and examine—then buy.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

ST. NICHOLAS,

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them and St. Nicholas has reached a higher platform and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries. The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. Nicholas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors: [illegible]

HALL'S
Vegetable Sicilian
HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 17, 1883.

In our long and varied experience in handling watches, we cannot but acknowledge and give our testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Having no soldering they remain homogeneous, harder and stiffer than they would be were they heated for soldering, and have more resisting power against pressure than any other cases in the market. PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or some neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night after getting warm in bed, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay until the drain on the system produces permanent disability, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. The complicated diseases brought on by intense study, thought, care, anxiety, etc., are often of the most serious nature. Heed such symptoms as loss of memory, universal lassitude, heart disease, kidney complaints, liver troubles and a general breaking down of health and strength. When thus afflicted, when the last exertion causes great fatigue, when life seems a burden, use the reliable strengthening tonic, Brown's Iron Bitters. It will afford you sure relief.

A professional women beggar, who has traveled over the state with a child and monkey, has settled in San Antonio, Texas, with $9,000 in cash and will go into business.

Ladies should wear a Hop Plaster over the small of the back, as it cures all pains and aches. 25 cts. at any drug store. All ready to apply.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.

Gents—feeling grateful for what your medicine has done for me, I desire to make the following statement: For two years or more I have suffered from rheumatism. Much of the time I could not dress myself nor put food to my mouth, and suffered the most intense pain all the while. Some five weeks since I was persuaded to try your Rheumatic Syrup. Before I had used two bottles the pain had all left, so that I slept soundly nights; I can now dress myself and need no one to feed me, and in fact, feel as well as ever I did in my life, all from the use of the best medicine in the world—Rheumatic Syrup.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND GREATEST MEDICINE

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier,

SULPHUR BITTERS.

Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you tremble so?—Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap rum or poor whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only TO DESTROY. It is composed of the choicest Roots, Barks and Berries, combined with the EXTRACT OF SULPHUR in such proportions as to make it NATURE'S GREAT NERVINE.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * *. By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding Watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

In mulching do not put it on too thick, as two inches are sufficient except on wet soils. It should not be done too early, as it is best to let the ground become frozen first. The object of mulching is not to keep away the cold, but to prevent thawing, which dislodges the plant.

Speaking in a general way, soils best adapted for agriculture are those which consists of mixtures of sand with a moderate quantity of clay and a little vegetable matter. When sand or other coarse material predominates, the soil, as all farmers know, is easy to till and will grow a great variety of crops, but is deficient in absorbent and retentive powers.

In making roosts for fowls let them be level and on a line. If they are so arranged as to have some of them high and others low the fowls will crowd together on the higher perches, leaving the lower ones unoccupied, which is not only a waste of space, but a cause of sore feet and other ailments, as the heavier fowls cannot easily get on or off the perches when they are very high. The lower they are the better, provided the coops are ventilated at the top and warm and dry near the floor.

A pumpkin contains six or seven times as much water as either corn or oats; in a word, it is a food in a state of much greater dilution. Analysis proves that even if the pumpkin should be freed from its large percentage of water, corn and oats remain much more valuable as feeding stuffs. While pumpkins can not be recommended as fat-producing material, they possess excellent milk producing qualities, and being cheaply raised, may be counted as valuable food for milch cows.

Mr. Edgar H. Armstrong, East Albany, N. Y., says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for dyspepsia and kidney disease and feel better now than I have for many years."

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. In some sections of the country one death in every three is from consumption. This can be and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough of cold and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. You should arrest it while it is in the germ. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it, but acts directly upon the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates ni the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

Rev. Father Wilds'
EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & CO., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

There is hardly a trade or pursuit in which manual labor is required, where hands are not wanted. Unprincipled men combine to prevent bosses from teaching apprentices, seeking to lessen the number of skilled laborers that they may fatten on the starvation of others. Such unionists are bad men and deserve a prison. All who are disposed to labor may have work and wages. And this solves the problem of poverty. The wisest of books has said that he who will not work shall not eat. Our charity must provide for the sick and the victims of other's improvidence. But to prevent poverty, to furnish the ability to earn bread, to inculcate industry and morality as duties, the neglect of which is punished by hunger and cold, these are the lines on which the sum of human misery is to be diminished, and the sum of human comfort to be increased. Let us not withhold our hand from helping the poor. The undeserving are the objects of God's mercy. Let us be like Him. But the greatest of all our charities is to prevent others from becoming poor; to train up the young in habits of honest industry, and so by degrees to eradicate the kindred evils of laziness and want.

A column might be written on each one of the points made in the discussion. But we are anxious only to get the one principal fairly into the mind that laziness is the mother of poverty; and that poverty born of idleness is a vice, and then becomes or produces crime.

RELIGIOUS READING.

The New York Y. M. C. A. will celebrate its thirty-first anniversary on January 28.

Ireland has thirty prelates to about five million Roman Catholics, and England thirty-two to about twenty million members of the Church of England.

The Chinese Sunday School conducted with the Beneficent church, Providence, R. I., has had 101 pupils during its four years existence. This includes nearly all of that nationality in the city and vicinity.

The missionary brig, the Morning star, which has long been employed in the missionary service by the American Board, is to be replaced by a steam vessel if the sum of $60,000 can be raised for the purpose.

The Pope has shown a conciliatory spirit toward the Belgian government in the nomination of a successor to Cardinal Archbishop Deschamps, Primate of the Belgian Church. His choice has fallen on Bishop Goosens, of Mamur, who is known as a prelate of moderate views.

"I would rather crack stones on the road than be a pastor where I cannot speak my mind," was the farewell of a Congregational minister in England who was persecuted by his congregation for his temperance principles. Neighboring ministers gave him a purse to express their approval.

Week of Prayer.

The following is the program for the Week of Prayer, January 7th to 12th, 1884:

Monday, January 7th: Praise and Thanksgiving.—For God's special providence, Christ's marked favor, and the Holy Spirit's gracious work.

Tuesday, January 8th: Humiliation and confession.—For personal failings; for social vices; as intemperance; for the secular spirit in the Church; for prevailing skepticism and religious indifference.

Wednesday, January 9th: Prayer for families and instructors of Youth.—For parental fidelity in household training; For pious watchcare in schools and colleges: for spiritual influence in Christian associations of youth and for early conversions in Sunday schools.

Thursday, January 10th: Prayer for the Church of Christ.—For a prayerful and laborious ministry; for consecration and co-operation in members; for early devotion in educated youths; and for the divine blessing in winning the worldly.

Friday, January 11th: Prayer for Nations.—For legislators, that statutes may conform to divine law; for rulers, that they may conscientiously administer government; for peace and conciliation between nations; and for popular integrity in the duties of citizens.

Saturday, January 12th: Prayer for Home and Foreign Missions.—For Missionaries, that they may be sustained in trial and proved efficient in labors; for heathens, Mohammedans and Israelites, that they may be won to Christ.

HIT OR MISS.

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
That I'd made a great Hit on going a Miss;
But 'twas only a Miss-calculation.

For so many Misses surrounding Miss Kid,
With me and my love interfering,
A jealous Miss-trust put it into her head
That she ought not to give me a hearing;
Then a certain Miss-chance that I met with one day
Almost sent my hopes to destruction,
For she felt a suspicion of what I would say,
All owing to one Miss-construction.

Deceived by one Miss-information, I wrote,
The cause of her anger demanding;
Miss-direction prevented her getting the note,
And introduced Miss-understanding;
When to make her my wife I exultingly swore,
Miss-belief made her doubt my intention,
And I nearly got wed to Miss-fortune before
I could wean her from Miss-apprehension.

But when she no longer would yield to Miss-doubt,
Nor be led by Miss-representation,
She had with Miss-like a most serious fall out,
And to wed felt no more hesitation.
But when to the church to be married we went,
Miss-take made the parson to linger,
And I got so annoyed by an awkard Miss-fit,
That I put the ring on the wrong finger,

Having been so Mis-used, I kept a strict watch,
For I still felt a fear of Miss-leading;
And I found when to late, an unlucky Miss-match
Interfered with the joys of our wedding.
Miss-rule in our dwelling put everything wrong,
Miss-management there took her station,
Till my cash, like the time taken reading this song,
Was all wasted by Miss-application.

—[F. G. Otterson, in the Manhattan for January.

MAJOR JONES'S COURTSHIP.

Crismus is over, and the thing is done did! You know I told you I was gwine to bring Miss Mary up to the chalk on Crismus. Well, I done it, slick as a whistle, though it come mighty nigh bein a serious bizness. But I'll tell you all about the whole circumstance.

Crismus Eve I put on my new suit, and shaved my face as slick as a smoothin iron, and after tea went over to old Miss Stallinses. As soon as I went into the parler whar they was all settin round the fire, Miss Carline and Miss Kesiah both laughed right out.

"There! there!" sez they, "I told you so! I know'd it would be Joseph."

"What's I done, Miss Carline?" ses I.

"You come under little sister's chicken bone, and I do believe she know'd you was comin when she put it over the dore."

"No I didn't—I didn't no such thing, now," ses Miss Mary, and her face blushed red all over.

"Oh, you needn't deny it," ses Miss Kesiah, "you belong to Joseph now, jest as sure as ther's any charm in chicken bones."

I know'd that was a first rate chance to say something, but the dear little creeter looked so sorry and kept blushin so, I could'nt say nothin zactly to the pint! so I tuck a chair and reached up and tuck down the bone and put it in my pocket.

"What are you gwine to do with that old chicken bone now, Majer?" ses Miss Mary.

"I'm gwine to keep it as long as I live," ses I, "as a Crismus present from the handsomest gall in Georgia."

When I sed that, she blushed worse and worse.

"Aint you shamed, Majer!" ses she.

"Now you ought to give her a Crismus gift, Joseph to keep all her life," sed Miss Carline.

"Ah," ses old Miss Stallius, "when I was a gall we used to hang up our stockins——"

"Why, mother!" ses all of 'em, "to say stocking right before——"

Then I felt a little streaked too, cause they was all blushin as hard as they could.

"Highty-tity!" ses the old lady—"what monstrous 'finement to be shore! I'd like to know what harm ther is in stockins. People now-a-days is gittin so mealy-mouthed they can't call nothin by its right name, and I don't see as they's any better than the old time people was. When I was a gal like you, child. I use to hang up my stockings and git 'em full of presents."

The galls kep laughin and blushin.

"Never mind," ses Miss Mary. "Majer's got to give me a Crismus gift—won't you Majer?"

"Oh, yes," ses I, "You know I promised you one."

"But I didn't mean that," ses she.

"I've got one for you, what I want you to keep all your life, but it would take a two bushel bag to hold it," ses I.

"Oh, that's the kind," ses she.

"But will you promise to keep it as long as you live?" ses I.

"Certainly I will, Majer."

"Monstrous 'finement now-a-days—old people don't know nothin about perliteness," said old Miss Stallins, jest gwine to sleep with her nittin in her lap.

"Now you hear that, Miss Carline," ses I. "She ses she'll keep it all her life."

"Yes, I will," ses Miss Mary—"but what is it?"

"Never mind," ses I, "you hang up a bag big enough to hold it and you'll find out what it is, when you see it in the mornin."

Miss Carline winked at Miss Kesiah, [illegible]

[illegible] determined not to back out. [illegible] got some chairs on top of a bench and got hold of the rope and let myself down into the bag; but just as I was gittin in, it swung agin the chairs, and down they went with a terrible racket; but nobody didn't wake up but Miss Stallinses' old cur dog, and here he come rippin and tearin through the yard like rath, and round and round he went tryin to find what was the matter. I scrooched down in the bag and didn't breathe louder nor a kitten, for fear he'd find me out, and after awhile he quit barkin.

The wind began to blow bominable cold, and the old bag kept turnin round and swinging so it made me sea-sick as the mischief. I was afraid to move for fear the rope would break and let me fall, and thar I sot with my teeth rattlin like I had the ager. It seemed like it it would never come daylight, and I do believe if I didn't love Miss Mary so powerful I would froze to death; for my heart was the only spot that felt warm, and it didn't beat more'n two licks a minit, only when I thought how she would be surprised in the mornin, and then it went in a canter. Bimeby the old dog come up on the porch and begun to smell about the bag, and then he barked like he thought he'd treed something. "Bow! wow!" ses he. Then he'd smell agin, and try to git up to the bag. "Git out!" ses I, very low, for fear the galls mought hear me. "Bow! wow!" ses he. "Be gone you bominable fool," ses I, and I felt all over in spots, for I spected every minute he'd nip me, and what made it worse, I didn't know whar abouts he'd take hold. "Bow! wow! wow!" Then I tried coaxin—"Come here, good fellow," ses I, and whistled a little to him, but it wasn't no use. Thar he stood and kep up his everlastin whinin and barkin all night. I couldn't tell when daylight was breakin, only by the chickens crowin, and I was monstrous glad to hear 'em, for if I had to stay there one hour more, I don't believe I'd ever got out of that bag alive.

Old Miss Stallins come out fust, and as soon as she seed the bag, ses she:

"What upon yeath has Joseph went and put in that bag for Mary? I'll lay it's a yearlin or some live animal, or Bruin wouldn't bark at it so."

She went in to call the galls, and I sot thar, shiverin all over so I couldn't speak if I tried to—but I didn't say nothin. Bimeby they all come running out on the porch.

"My goodness! what is it?" ses Miss Mary.

"Oh, it's alive!" ses Miss Kesiah, "I seed it move."

"Call Cato, and make him out the rope," ses Miss Carline, "and let's see what it is. Come here, Cato, and get this bag down."

"Don't hurt it for the world," ses Miss Mary.

Cato untied the rope that was round the jice, and let the bag down easy on the floor, and I tumbled out all covered with corn meal, from head to foot.

"Goodness gracious!" ses Miss Mary, "if it aint the Majer himself!"

"Yes," ses I, "and you know you promised to keep my Crismus present as long as you lived."

The galls laughed themselves almost to death; and went to brushin off the meal as fast as they could, sayin they were gwine to hang that bag up every Crismus till they got husbands, too. Miss Mary—bless her bright eyes—she blushed as beautiful as a mornin glory, and sad she'd stick to her word. She was right out of bed, and her hair wasn't komed, and her dress wasn't fix'd at all, but the way she looked pretty was real distractin. I do believe if I was froze stiff, one look at her sweet face, as she stood thar lookin down to the floor with her roguish eyes, and her bright curls fallin all over her snowy neck, would have fotched me too. I tell you what, it was worth hanging in a meal bag from one Crismus to another to feel as happy as I have ever sense.

I went home after we had the laugh out, and sot by the fire till I got thawed. In the forenoon all the Stallinses come over to our house and we had one of the greatest Crismus dinners that ever was seed in Georgia, and I don't believe a happier company ever sot down to the same table. Old Miss Stallins and mother settled the match, and talked over every thing that ever happened in their families, and laughed at me and Mary, and cried about their dead husbands, cause they wasn't alive to see their children married.

It's all settled now, 'cept we haint sot the weddin day. I'd like to have it all over at once, but young galls always like to be engaged a while, you know, so I spose I must wait a month or so. Mary (she says I musn't call her Miss Mary now) has been a good deal of trouble and botheration to me; but if you could see her you wouldn't think I ought to grudge a little sufferin to git sich a sweet little wife.

NEW YORK TIMES
FOR 1884.
REDUCED IN PRICE.
CHEAPEST AND BEST
NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES.

FOR 1884.

REDUCTION IN PRICE.

The price of THE NEW YORK TIMES was reduced on the 18th of September from 4 cents per copy to 2 cents, with a corresponding reduction in the subscription rates. Within three days the circulation of the paper had doubled, and its daily sales are still rapidly increasing. Facts like these give plain and positive proof of the excellence and completeness of THE TIMES as a newspaper for the people. But the step that has brought it within the reach of every class of readers involved no cheapening of its quality or lowering of its standard. It is, and will continue to be, an able, lively, and complete newspaper. Whatever is of human interest in the chronicle of passing events at home and abroad will be found in its columns. It prints more telegraphic matter from all parts of the United States than any other metropolitan journal. Its special cable dispatches promptly supply its readers with all important European news. While it neglects nothing of general interest, it has gained a recognized pre-eminence for the accuracy and fullness of its political reports and of its news concerning railroads, banks and banking, insurance matters, real estate interests, important legal decisions, military and naval affairs, educational progress, and social, religious and scientific thought and discussion. It gives early announcements of new publications, American and foreign, and it reviews with fairness and critical ability the best books of the day. Its dramatic and musical criticisms are a notable feature of its well-filled pages. Faithful to Republican principles, it is wholly unfettered by considerations of party or faction in expressing its opinions. Its criticisms of parties, of public men and measures are independent, fearless, and honest. It has no hobbies, but is in sympathy with all progressive and reform movements; and amid its graver duties it finds time and the mood now and then to be merry over the foibles of mankind.

THE SUNDAY TIMES, in addition to the news of the day, contains bright and readable selections from the latest English reviews and magazines, selected and original poetry, and extracts from the newest books.

THE WEEKLY TIMES gives a compact and complete summary of the news of the week, with editorial note and comment upon topics of national and general interest. It is [illegible]dmirably complete weekly newspaper, and has a large circulation in every State in the Union and in foreign countries. During the Presidential year of 1884 THE WEEKLY TIMES will furnish its readers with prompt and full information of the progress of the canvass.

THE CENTURY.
PROGRAM FOR 1883-'84.

The program for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, the Century shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE W. CABLE, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

"LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES," by EDWARD EGGLESTON, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

THREE STORIES by HENRY JAMES, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

THE NEW ASTRONMY, untechnical articles, by Prof S. P. LANGLEY, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A NOVELETTE by H. H. BOYESEN, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A NOVELETTE BY ROBERT GRANT, author of Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

THE BREAD-WINNERS, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

CHRISTIANITY AND WEALTH, with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

COASTING ABOUT THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

SCENES FROM THE NOVELISTS, HAWTHORNE, GEORGE ELIOT and CABLE, with authentic drawings.

ON THE TRACK OF ULYSSES, the record of a yacht cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

THE SUN.
NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon, then back to Printing House Square, and then three quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of [illegible]
